PROTECTION TO HOME INDUSIRY!

Improvement of Rivers and Harbors!

SPEEDY ENLARGEMENT OF THE CANALS—LABOR FOR THE LABORER!

"The enemy's balls have thinned our ranks: his numbers are overwhelming: direct- the shock must come, and there is no retreat. We are in the beginning of a nation- war. Hull's ignominious surrender must be retreived. Let us die, then, arms in and! Our country demands the sacrifice. The example will not be lost. The blood the slain will make heroes of the living! Who is ready for the sacrifice?"—Scott's Speech at Queenstown Heights.

"I have served the Union for forty odd years, and feel myself a citizen of every part of it; and whatever of life and strength I may have shall be devoted to its protection."—Gen. Winfield Scott.

THE VIOLATED PLEDGE,

Made by the Democratic State Candidate to gain power, which they violated the first opportunity.

Democratic Pledge to Execute the Canal Enlargement Law.

ALBANY, October 22, 1851.

GENTLEMEN:—We have respectively received your communication of the 13th instant, and, in reply beg leave to assure you that the rumour referred to by you have no foundation whatever in fact. On the contrary, we have not hesitated to say, as we now repeat, that if elected to the places for which we have been nominated, we shall faithfully and fairly carry out the provisions of the law adopted at the late extra session of the Legislature, for the enlargement of the Erie and Oswego, and the Completion of the Genesee Valley and Black River Canals.

We regard an Enlargement of the Erie and Oswego, and the Completion of the Lateral Canals, as a measure of public necessity, to which the energies of the State should be steadily directed.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN C. WRIGHT, HENRY S. RANDALL, LEVI S. CHATFIELD, BENJAMIN WELCH, Jr. WM. J McALPIN, HORACE WHEATON.

Messrs. Asa D. Wood, O. C. Hubbard, James H. Mallery,
James H. Sherrill, and W. W. Wright.

Third Partyism.

The Pittsburgh Gazette is the oldest and among the ablest and most influential journals published West of the Alleghanies, and while Whig in politics, has always been Anti-Slavery. The recent assemblage of the "Free Soil National Convention" in Pittsburgh has elicited from its Editor the following, to which we invite the earnest attention of all who truly desire and labor for Universal Freedom;—[Tribune

THE FREE SOIL MOVEMENT.

We propose to offer a few remarks upon the proceedings of our Free Soil brethern,

On the abstract question of Slavery there is, between them and us, no controversy.—Like them, we regard it as a huge wrong to one portion of our population, and fraught with guilt and danger to all the rest; a cause of strife and division among the States, and a deep and damning disgrace to the nation. But it is bound up in our political system. It is legalized in the States where it exists, and recognized, in terms by our Federal Compact. But two ways remain open for its abolition—one by the voluntary action of the States in which it exists; the other by revolution. We know that there is at present little hope of the first; but are we prepared to adopt the second?

Hopeless as the case may now appear—obstinately as the people of the South cling to their wicked and injurious institution—we would yet rather rely upon the power of truth, the advancing spirit of the age, and the all-subduing influence of Christianity, to exert their energies upon the minds of slaveholders, and thus bring them to a sense of the guilt of slavery and induce them to abolish it, than to resort to voilent measures.

We are bound up in political compact with slaveholders. The act which so bound us was neither theirs nor ours. Grant that they are guilty—not of originating Slavery, but of clinging to it, cherishing it, and laboring to extend it, still this does not absolve us from the proformance of the duties which, under the Federal compact, we owe to them, nor them from the duties which they owe to us. A Christian wife is not exonerated from the duties of that relation, by the unchristian, or even vicious, character of her husband; but, if his conduct at length becomes intolerable, her last sad alternative is to seek and obtain a divorce. Have we, in our marriage relation with slaveholding States, reached that fearful point which warrants us to seek a dissolution of the bond! There are very few who will say so.

Well: this brings us one step nearer to the point at issue between ourselves and our Free Soil brethern. Will they permit us to ask them a few plain questions?

Are you ready to dissolve the Union? and do you desire to do so?

If you answer in the affermative; then why are you seeking to elect a man of your party as President of the United States?—Would it not be better to initiate measures for the abrogation of the Constitution, and the establishment of a new confederacy, from which Slavery shall be excluded?

But as your answer is, that you have no such object, permit us to ask you how you expect to live in union with men with whom you refuse to hold political fellowship? Do you not see that the rule you propose to yourselves, whatever may be your intentions with regard to the integrity and preservation of the Union, is tantamount to its dissolution? for the very idea of union presupposes reciprocal political action.

We may—nay, if you please, we are bound to—bear our testimony with all possible earnestness against the system of Slavery; but we contend with equal earnestness that we are not exonerated from the duties which our union with the slaveholders imposes upon us; and that any action, intended to seperate us from them, is essentially revolutionary.

The great majority of those who compose the Free Soil party are earnest, Christian men; and we know that they will not treat lightly the teachings of Him whose name they bear. "I pray not," said He of his disciples, "that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil." Do our Free Soil friends think, in view of these remarkable words, that it is His will that they should take themselves out of the Union, or out of the two great parties which divide the country? The world needed the disciples of the Redeemer; and if those Free Soil men are Christians, the Union needs them, the Whigs need them—not as antagonists, but as citizens, as friends as guides, as co workers.

Again: In the Parable of the Tares we have an impressive lesson to warn us against zeal. A man sowed a field with good seed, but an enemy came in stealthily and sowed tares. His servants were grieved at seeing these vile plants growing among the wheat, as our friends are grieved to see so abominable a thing as Slavery mixed with our excellent political institutions; and whether they attribute it to Satan or Great Britain, they, too, may very truly exclaim, "An enemy hath done this?" Well, the owner of the field in question had some good and faithful servants—as our Free Soil friends are good and faithful citizens;—but they were a little indiscreet. They proposed at once to go to work and weed out the tares; but their master forbade saying, "Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them." These words, it seems to us, have a striking application to the case before us. Violence, rashness extreme measures, are not in accordance with the prospects or the spirit of Him who came to "bind up the broken hearted, and preach deliverance to the captives." Think you he would be pleased to see you laying waste the beautiful heritage He has given us, in order to get rid of an evil, which in his inscrutable wisdom, permitted to infest it? Before you answer that question, ponder well His word.

And again: When he made his appearance in the world He found the Jewish church and nation reeking with hypocrisy and corruption. He bore an earnest and energetic testimony against these things; but though he was—what none of us are—"holy, harmeless undefiled, and seperate from sinners," yet he continued in communion with that church throughout his life. He was no Separatist. This fact is significant.

And yet again. When the people of some Samaritain villages refused to receive Him His disciples, in their indignant zeal, proposed to call down fire from Heaven upon them, after the manner of Elijah: but he rebuked them saying, "ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of." Perhaps it would be well for some of our anti Slavery brethern' whose mouths are so full of denunciations, to reflect upon this incident. Indeed, a little more of his kind and gentle spirit would do us all good when we are talking upon this subject. Still let us not forget, that, meek and gentle as he was, no Compromiser.

Messrs. Wilberforce and Clarkson, and their associates in the great anti Slavery movement in England, did not set up a new party in order to effect their object, but labored in their places year after year, with a zeal and fearlessness only equaled by their moderation, until they accomplished the glorious work of abolishing Slavery throughout the British Empire.

Now, we charge upon our Free Soil friends that they have left the post of danger and of efficient service. Whom do the champions of Slavery most fear, and at whom do they aim their heaviest blows?—Are they directed against Wm. Lloyd Garrison, Gerrit Smith, or even at John P. Hale or Joshua R. Giddings? By no means; for so long as these gentlemen occupy the positions they do, they strengthen Slavery by thwarting and baffling the efforts of the men who are laboring to arrest its progress and resist its claims. Weakened by their desertion, the friends of Freedom in the North have been forced to give way somewhat. In 1844 the action of fifteen thousand 'Liberty men' in New York gave the vote of that State to Mr. Polk, which secured his election, and thus entailed upon the country the calamitous measures of the annexation of Texas, the war with Mexico, with all its disturbing sequences, out of which arose that bitter and dangerous strife which ended in the enactment of the Compromise measures. To them the country is indebted for the Fugitive Slave Law; and for the abandonment of the Wilmot Proviso. Well may the defenders of Slavery look with complacency at such movements as the nomination of Birney, and the Conventions of Buffalo and Pittsburgh, while they aim their heaviest blows at such men as Seward, Johnston and Greely. These latter have not removed beyond striking distance, as have the others we have named.

This is a pratical world, and its affairs are facts, not abstractions. We have to do with things as they are, and not as they ought to be. That Slavery exists among us—that it is sanctioned by law and recognized by the Constitution—that it is beyond our control by any means short of revolution—are so many great facts. But that its further progress can be arrested by due course of law, and its arrogant claims abated, is equally true. Through the division of its opponents, as we have seen, it has gained some advantages both in teritory and in law, which it could not have gained had not some thousnads of Whigs of the Free States deserted their breathern to persue a fiigment, an abstraction, a scheme which, if it ever reaches any practical result, must sever the Union, and probably plunge the country into sivil strife and bloodshed.

Let it be fairly understood. Between us and our Free Soil friends there is no dispute as to the character of slavery as it exists in the United States. The only difference between us is how shall it be dealt with.

They say, if we understand them aright, that they will hold no further political communion with slaveholders—in other words, they will not vote for such.

We answer, that this is tantamount to a dismemberment of the confederacy, because it is impossible to continue in union with people with whom we refuse political communion.

They withdraw from the two great parties of the country, because those parties are, as they allege, implicated in the sin of slavery. To this, our reply is, that the parts must necessarily pertake of the character of the whole; as the entire nation is unhapily involved in the guilt of slavery, by that clause of the Constitution which enjoins the delivery of fugitives, the parties of the nation must of necessity partake, more or less, of the same character. It follows therefore, that the same principles which would dismember the Whig party for this cause, would abrogate the Constitution, and dissolve the Union. The battle of slavery, if fought in such a manner as to give any hope of succor and relief to slave, must be fought in the Union, and in one of the great parties into which the whole Union is divided. Any other course must either result in nothing, or in a separation of the free from the slaveholding sections of the Union, leaving the slaves still in bondage: unless, to the calamities of political dissolution, it is proposed to add the still greater calamities which would attend any attempt at forcible emancipation.

Suppose, for argument's sake, that they should desire to do this great evil, that good might come, we tell our Free Soil friends that they cannot do it. The vast majority of the American people will nevr con-

Philadelphia Church burners for Pierce and King. Do Catholics wish to vote side by side with them? Will Catholics longer hesitate? Let them vote for the man who has fought for them, and declare his confidence in their integrity, and patritoism. None are more anxious for the success of Pierce and King than Great Britain, and the Church burners of Philadelphia. Will Irishmen help them?

TO THE INDEPENDENT MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN PARTY. The State elections have been held, and a very brief space intervenes before the Presidential contest.

It must be apparent to reflecting minds, that the real issue, the struggle for supremecy, lies between the two prominent candidates before the country, Gen Franklin Pierce and Gen Winfield Scott; and for one of these Americans must vote, or be disfranchised. Entertaining the conviction that in the present crisis of public affairs, of the whig and democratic parties, the democratic party is the most reliable, the most in earnest, to maintain the integrity of the Union, without pausing to assign other causes, our individual preferences are for Pierce and King, and we shall, to the extent of our humble abilities, endeavor to persuade our American friends to unite with us at the polls, in promoting the success of Democratic nominees, on the present occasion.

In publishing these opinions, we are aware they reflect only the sentiments of thousands of Independent Americans; and so far from disposition to dictate to others for whom they should vote, we cheerfully abide the result at the ballot box.

The true position, Truly Stated.

If those to whom this letter is addressed would all adopt Mr. Dunn's sentiments, the Test would soon disappear from the statute books of New Hampshire.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE WAUKEGAN GAZETTE:—

I wish thro' the columns of your paper to express a few thoughts to my Irish, Catholic and German friends in this country.

I am an Irishman, a Democrat and a Catholic. I cannot vote for Gen. Pierce nor for any other man from the State of New Hampshire. I could not under any circumstances vote for Frank Pierce. I do not believe him FIT. I would vote for John P. Hale if he was not from New Hampshire, and if it would do any good.

Under the circumstances I shall vote for Gen. Scott, and I wish all my friends, Irish, German, Catholic and Democrats to do the same, or at all events not to vote for the New Hampshire nominees.

My reasons for not voting for Gen. Pierce are, that up to the eve of the present campaign he never lifted finger, or opened his mouth for religious toleration.

New Hampshire is claimed to be a democratic State. Frank Pierce is the leader of its Democracy; and he with the Democracy which he controls are responsible for retaining the infamous clauses in the Constitution of that State, prohibiting to you and me the privileges of freemen and citizens. I care not how many bar-room statements he may have recently made, or may hereafter make, expressing his abhorance of the religious test,—on these I place no dependence. It is too late for him to mend his course—the past is fixed—he cannot atone for it.

Again—I do not see why the party to which I belong should be compelled to PICK UP such a man as Frank Pierce when there are hundreds of honorable and wise men in the party who are in all respects qualified for the office of President. In voting for Gen. Scott I do not cease to be a Democrat. I make no apology in voting for Gen. Scott, only that I cannot and will not vote for a New Hampshire man, and especially for FRANKLIN PIERCE.

Yours truly, WM. B. DUNN.
Waukegan, Ill., Aug. 24th 1852.

Vain, Proud, Petulant, and Presumptuous!

Eloquent and Truthful.

Major Alexander B. Bradford, of Mississippi, Major of the 1st Mississippi Regiment of Riflemen, delivered a speech at Memphis, on the 16th of August, in which he thus referred to certain charges made against Gen. Scott by Col. Jeff. Davis, a few days previously, at the same place:

"Col. Davis told you, fellow citizens, that in all of those qualities which command the affection and confidence of those around him, Gen. Scott is singular wanting being proud, petulent, vain and presumptuous. If it be proud, to pay strict attention to the wants of the poor soldier—to visit the pestilential hospital and wipe the moisture from the fevered brow of the sick—to wait upon the cholera patients of the army—to raise the dying soldier from his gory bed on the battle field and staunch his bleeding wounds—if it be proud to do these things, then Gen. Scott is a very proud, a haughty man! If it be petulant to curb the restless and unruly officers of the army—to hold them down with a hand of iron, and make them behave themselves like good soldiers and gentlemen—if it be petulent to be 'tight on the officers and good on the men'—if this be petulant, then Gen. Scott is something of a petulant and peevish man. If it is vain, to apparel himself on the eve of a battle according to the regulations of the service, with his golden epulets on his shoulders and his tall plume towering above him, so that friend and foe may know his rank, and then to plunge into the battle where the conflict is fiercest, where the bullets rain thickest, and where the carnage rages deadliest—if this be vain, I am afraid Gen. Scott is a very vain glorious man!—[Tremendous applause.] If to know that he possesses as much skill, promptitude and judgement, as any man of the age, in the planning of a campaign reducing a fortress, or in drawing up the programme of a pitched battle, so clear in its details, so auspicious in its success, that it would seem as if the victory was won before the battle is fought—if this be presumptuous, then we must conclude, with Col. Davis, that Gen. Scott is a very presuming man! (Cheers.)

Pierce and the South.

We ask the particular attention of Free Soilers and tariff men to the following from the Democratic Advocate, printed at Baton Rouge, La. It is only one of many we might give. Our free soil friends can have the paper if they wish to see it. It is a regular exchange.

[From the Baton Rouge, La. Democratic Advocate.]

FRANKLIN PIERCE AND THE SOUTH.

An experience is a fact: I give mine for the benefit of those who may be (as I was for a time) sincerely hesitating not between Pierce and Scott, for I never was insane enough to vote for Scott; but, whether I should not vote at all—I have (what are called) strong prejudices. I am intensely Southern—even sectional if you will—I had determined vaguely to vote for no northern man but T. W. Dorr—if nominated—and right with the South. I have been forced to alter my opinion and shall vote for F. Pierce, because he was nominated by Virginia—because he was always side by side with J. C. Calhoun and face to face with Adams and the whole Abolition & Co—because all his votes and all his speeches announce him a constitution lawyer a Statesright man and an honest man—because he drove Atwood from the Democratic nomination as soon as he found him at agitation, and because he was nominated by a convention unpolluted by any toleration of abolition, for they rejected Rantoul and another merely for equivocating.

P. S.—I am no politician, no partizan—don't even belong to a club—but go in for Cuba.

AN APPEAL

To the Voters of Essex, Clinton and Franklin:

The subjoined "CIRCULAR" comes home to every voter at this very moment:

CIRCULAR.

DEAR SIR;—A Convention of the Sixteenth Congressional District composed of the counties of Clinton, Essex and Franklin was held at Keeseville, on the 17th day of December, 1851, at which the Hon. Henry H Ross of Essex, presided. The Convention was numerously attended by Whigs and Democrats, and the most harmonious feeling prevailed upon all subjects which was brought up for consideration. We have sent to your address, by mail a copy of the proceedings in detail. * * * *

Allow us particularly to call your attention to the 4th resolution, as follows;

Resolved, That, without distinction of party, we will hereafter support no man for any political office, who is not in favor of such a system of specific duties as will adequately protect the labor and capital of the country, and who will not truly and efficiently represent our interests upon these questions.

It was passed with only nine dissenting votes. Cannot a similar spirit to our nation's interests be awakened in your section, and party spirit be abandoned on this one topic, and an amendment to the laws of 1846 be obtained, which experience has amply and fairly proved to be deleterious to home manufacture, as well as, to the interests and prospects of the laboring population.

We shall be greatly obliged to you, for co operating and determinate action, for the period has arrived, when actions speak louder, than words, combined with a determination, which cannot be mistaken, overlooked or misinterpreted.

"IS MRS WILLARD A WHIG?—Much Amused the other evening, at an anecdote told us by a friend. Our friend has a daughter in the public schools, and in those schools Mrs Willard's History of the United States is in use. As slumber was settling upon her eye lids, her busy little thoughts were concerned in investigations, which broke out into the following question and dialogue:

'Pa, is Mrs Willard a Whig?'

"Not that I know of; but why do you ask such a question as that?"

"Because we have been studying her History of the United States, and though we have got down to 1847, she frequently speaks of and praises General Scott, but never mentions Pierce once."

When our little lady becomes older, she will find out why and how General Pierce's name is not mentioned in history, and will not be. She is not the only one who is curious about the past of Pierce.—[N. O. Crescent.

DANIEL WEBSTER IS DEAD!

And a Nation Mourns.

On Friday afternoon the bells were tolled, and the Stars and Stripes were trimmed with the emblems of mourning.

EXPRESS FROM SCHROON!

Democratic.—Col. Ireland made a speech in Schroon the other day in which he declared that if the whigs of that town would not vote for him they should not have a Telegrph Office there! Whigs of Schroon, stand to your colors, and you shall have a telegraph! Whigs of the County—"Charge Again!"

UP, WHIGS AND ON TO VICTORY!

The Free Soil Vote.

Where is it to go? We beg leave to offer a few reasons why it should be cast for Scott and Graham.

1. The Whig platform abides by the fugitive slave law till time and experience shall dictate amendment.

2. The course of Mr. Fillmore on this question was the cause of his defeat before the whig national convention, and for this reason there are strong claims on free soilers.

3. Gen. Scott's views on slavery were given in 1836 in a mild, and conservative letter, admirable in style, and sentiment. That letter we published some weeks ago, and beg leave to refer our friends to it, wherein they will find Gen. Scott is anti-slavery tho' not an abolitionist, or free soiler.

4. Southern whigs withhold their support from Gen. Scott on the express ground of southern rights, and they support Gen. Pierce because he is with them.

5. Gen. Pierce was charged by southern whigs with having uttered free soil sentiments, which he at once repudiated over his own signature.

6. He caused his state to repudiate John P. Hale, for free soil sentiments, and the overthrow of the Rev. Mr. Atwood for like sentiments, is claimed as a special merit by Pierce's biographers.

7. Gen. Pierce is supported by South Carolina—a fact of itself, why he should be repudiated by free soilers.

8. The democratic platform endorses the fugitive slave law and deprecates agitation anywhere, and everywhere, and under all circumstances, and for all time.

9. But there is one reason which appears to me to be conclusive on this point; Democrats are for extension of territory, Cass and Douglass have declared for Fillibusters and external expansion in every speech they have made during the campaign To this, whigs are opposed. The one is for external expansion, and free trade, which is the peculiar tenet of slavery. The other is for internal development, thro' the peaceful but certain influences of which slavery must eventfully disappear. Lastly, we ask the attention of our free soil friends to the article in another place entitled, "Third party-ism," and to another entitled, "Pierce and the South."

Vindication of Mr. Simmons.

A defence of George A. Simmons! As well as he is Known to this Community, as long as he has resided in their midst, as pure, as highminded, as honorable as he is known to be, such a labor would seem to be one of supererogation. The following statements are made however, lest our silence should be misconstrued. They will show the charges against him to have as little foundation as the "baseless fabric of a vision." Nay, those charges are not only without foundation, but are the base coinings of reckless men urged on by the gold of an opposing candidate.

But to the points. Mr. Simmons is charged with advocating the case of Mc Leod indicted for the burning of the "Carolina" in 1837.

1. See Assembly Documents of 1841 p. 965. Hon. Geo. A. Simmons as chairman of the Judiciary committee in the Assembly of this State in 1841 reported a bill and voted for it providing for the speedy trial of Alex. McLeod.

2. See Assembly Journal 1841 p. 937. Michael Hoffman, the champion of democracy, offered a resolution that the Atty. Gen. be directed to enter a Nolle Prosequi to the indictment of McLeod, and for his safe conduct!

4. Mr. Simmon's strong sense of justice would not permit him to indulge in or countonance remarks in the Legislator and elsewhere, which would have a tendancy to forestall the opinions of the jury who were to try McLeod or any other person charged with crime. He advocated a fair trial only, which the Gazette man would have denied.

5. See Assembly documents of 1841 Jany. 14, so far from Mr. Simmons entertaining unfriendly feelings towards the canadian Patriots, he as chairman of the Judiciary Committe introduced a bill for the relief of Lois Joseph Amedia Papineau, and in the report spoke of the "distinguished patriot and exile Thomas Addis Emmet," and of Papineau as "another eminent exile."

Again, Mr. S. is charged with being a federalist, and of opposing the last war. It is false in general, and particular. He was then a student in college. He is a true Republican in every particular.

But, lastly it is said Mr. S. did not sign the new Constitution. Any one who will take the trouble to look will find the name of George A. Simmons among to the signatures to that document.

THE TARIFF.

The action of parties on this question is within the personal experience of every voter, yet democrats in this valley practice the most glaring humbugry with apparent impunity. A few "last words" then before the election.

1. The tariff of 1828 was not a "party" tariff according to the present party divisions.

2. In 1832 Henry Clay introduced his "Compromise tariff," not because he was in favor of a low tariff, but because the whole subject was in danger, and the Union in peril thro' Nullification under the direction of John C. Calhoun, whose State, and whose followers now support Gen. Pierce

3. The Whigs passed the tariff of 1842 under which the country prospered. Silas Wright voted for it, and he has our thanks, but not his party.

4. Democrats passed the present tarif, and they have had a large majority in both branches of Congress ever since.

5. William A. Graham is a devoted friend to protection as we have taken pains to ascertain.

6. Mr. Beeman knows William R. King, and knows him to be an out and out free trader.

7. There is not an advocate of the principle of Protection in the Democratic party. A few about here go for "Iron," only. There are hosts of Free Trade Advocates in that party, and not one in the whig party.

8. We have exchanges from Me. to La Whigs Advocate Protection, and Democrats oppose it. We have now before us a dem. paper of La. in which is a description of a whig procession in that State. On one of the banners was the motto, "The Tariff of '42!" which especially aroused the ire of the Southern Democrat.

9. There was a dem. Mass Meeting in Albany the other day wherein Free Trade banners were conspicuous. Such a banner would be kicked out of a whig procession. See our paper of week before last in which we gave an overwhelming list of tariff facts.

Served him right.

Nelson gave a frenchman a dollar to invito the Canadians together so that he could make them a spooch on Saturday evening last. In response to the invitation about a dozen assembled at the Office of the Political Barometer, when Nelson did his endevor, while "Gim" Kept "watch and ward" on the outer side to see that none but faithful entered. When the speech was concluded they all took a drink together, and parted in friendship, and to meet again. On retiring to the streets the frenchmen gave three hearty cheers for Scott and Graham;

Hurrah! Scott and the Canadians forever!

Justice of Sessions.—The Editor of the Northern Gazette says, "Joel F. Potter Esq. of Schroon is to be again elected by an overwhelming majority." We are happy to inform our friend that both candidates will be elected. The law provides that only one shall be on a ticket, but that two shall be elected. This is so as to elect one of each party. This information is free! N. B. We do not wish to detract from the popularity of Mr. Potter.

A Last Appeal—This is the last opportunity we shall have to speak to our friends before the "Rubicon is passed." Friends have you done your duty as you will wish you had done when election is over? Have you afforded your democratic neighbor such light on the tariff as his case demands? Have you appreciated the worth of our great leader, Winfield Scott? Do you realise the importance of voting a clean ticket, and the whole ticket? Our Candidates are worthy, and the harmony of the party in the country calls earnestly for Union. Let every man on the ticket be cordially, and sincerely supported by every whig in the County, and the result will not only be a splendid victory, but will produce that confidence, and brotherly feeling which all so much desire.

Ensign and Butler.—Morish has been so seldom honored, we trust our friends will esteem it a pleasure not only to give these young men a full whig vote, but a portion of the opposition. They deserve it at the hands of the whig party.

And not forgetting our worthy friends Wilder, Blish, and Carter.

Judge McVine.—There is a prevailing belief that the Judge is to be re-elected by an increased majority. This confidence may cause neglect somewhere. We ask our friends not to forget to have every whig vote the "Judiciary," and as many of the opposition as desire.

Judge Burnett.—The Whigs of Essex Co. may look forward to his Legislative career with confidence, and pride. Educated, talented, an eloqnent debater, and in full vigor of life and health, he will become a leading member of the Assembly and of the whig party in the Empire state.

Where's Gaffney?"—We have a letter from a friend at Malone in which he says. "Standing on the platform when the cars landed to-day, a stranger, apparently in great haste stepped from the cars, and eagerly asked a friend, where's Gaffney—we must have him at Keeseville or all the Irishmen will go the whig ticket, and the Dist. will go to h—ll!"

Well Mr. Gaffney was found, and spoke at this place Thursday evening. Judging from the speech of people, the more such speeches we have the better. Not a solitary principle, or measure of the democratic party was advocated, but it abounded in misrepresentations of whigs, and whig measures. Several have declared that if that is democracy they want no more of it.

Old Fuss and Feathers.

Such is one of the terms of ridicule cast upon Gen. Scott. It is not inappropriate however for he has several times made a terrible fuss with the enemies of his country. He made their feathers fly too on numerous occasions. He is making no small fuss with the democracy now, and we trust will make their feathers fly next tuesday. Their flight up Salt River will be so rapid they won't have time even to take "a hasty plate of soup!,"

Democratic Leaders.

Hon. Jas. S. Whallon wrote a letter to the dem. Congressional Convention, and published in the Plattsburgh Republican, in which he said, he approved of democratic principles. In 1847 he attended a democratic State Convention which adopted this motto: "Free Trade, free soil, free speech and free men." He was a member of the late dem. State Convention, where the National platform was adopted. which makes war on the Principle of Protection.

Honor to the Brave.

General Scott's first commission was signed by Thomas Jefferson. James Madison offered him a seat in his Cabinet which was declined out of respect to superiors in rank.

Mr. Madison then sent him to Europe with special diplomatic powers.

Washington, June 13, 1816.

Dear Sir:—Your communications while aboard were very interesting. The opportunities which you had of deriving information from military men of high rank, especially in the Prussian army, of the views of several powers, at a crisis the most important and extraordinary that has occurred in modern times, were peculiarly favorable; and it gives me pleasure to state that the zeal and judgment with which you improve them for the advantage of your country, gave great satisfaction.

I am, with great respect and esteem,
Very respectfully yours,
JAMES MONROE.

(Signed) Major Gen. Scott.

Congress presented Gen. Scott a Medal and President Madison addressed him thus:

"General Scott:—Your conduct in the late war merited and obtained, in a high degree, the approbation of Congress and of your country. * As a testimonial of the high sense entertained by Congress of your merit in those actions, I have the pleasure to present you this medal."

In 1815 the Legislator of N. Y. presented Gen. Scott with a Sword, and Gov Tompkins addressed him thus:

The admirers of the great in nature, from all quarters in the globe, will forever visit the theatre of your achievements. They will bear to their distant homes the idea of this mighty display of nature, and will associate with it the deeds of you and your brothers in arms. And so long as the beautiful and sublime shall be objects of admiration among men—so long as the whelming waters of Erie shall be tumbled into the awful depths of Niagara—so long shall the splendid actions in which you have had so conspicuous a share, enduring in the memory of man.

Entrusted by Jackson with the delicate Mission to South Carolina when Nullification threatened civil war, and by Van Buren with the Settlement of the "North Eastern boundary," he so briliantly, and successfully conducted those delicate missions as to acquire the title of the Great Pacificator.

Gen. Cass, said, "I know Gen. Scott, and have known him long—he is a brave man, and a high minded, honest, brave patriot!"

Danl. Webster said—

"Gen. Scott is a man who has performed the most briliant campaign on recent military record, a man who has warred against the enemy, warred against the climate, warred against a thousand unpropitious circumstances, and has carried the flag of his country to the capital of the enemy, honourably, proudly, humanely, to his own permanent honor, and the great military credit of his country.

Senator Soule a bitter democratic partisan in a recent speech in Boston said of Gen. Scott:

May the hand wither which would pluck a laurel from his brow. ... ly as a man a great gen... the bravest of the brav...

When sent to quell Nullification Gen Cass was secy. of War and wrote to Gen. Scott that the President, Jackson "has full confidence in your judgment, and discretion."

In 1839, the Richmond Enquirier (dem.) said, "his thorough knowledge of the laws of his own country as well as those which govern nations, united to his discretion and experience—has saved his country from a war with Great Britain."

After the conclusion of the war with Mexico the Washington Union (dem.) said, "the gratitude and admiration of a free people are due to Gen. Scott.

Gen. Quitman (dem.) said "The more that man's character and claims to distinction are canvassed, the higher will be the stand he will take in the administration and gratitude of his countrymen."

Gen. Butler, (dem.) said "he conducted himself in such a manner as to win my admiration and esteem."

To these may be added equally flattering notices by a host of others; the Albany Argus. Washington Union, Washington Globe, Gov. Marcy, B. Watkins Leigh, Maj. Stevens Maj. Bradford, Hon, Robt. McLane, Md., Hon. Kenneth Rayner of N. C., Judge Hopkins of Ala, Gen Shields, Senators Mason and Hunter of Va. Senator Cameron of Pa., Senator Davis of Miss. and Senator Butler and Calhoun of S. C, are a few.

The Lieutenant Generalship. As a mark of distinction and as a deserved compliment to the brilliant Mexican Campaign Congress proposed to create Gen. Scott a Lt. Gen. On that occasion eulogiums were pronounced by Senators Hamlin, Rhett, Butler, Hale and Foot, (dem.) and Webster, and Clay whigs. We give an extract from the speech of Senator Foot, (dem.) as a specimen of the whole:

Mr. Foot, (a Southern Union democrat) said: "I honor the illustrious personage, alluded to so often in the progress of this debate, as highly as any one here. All the commendation bestowed upon him on this occasion is, in my judgment, not at all beyond its deserts. As a patriot, I recognise him as entitled to the most profound respect; as a high-minded and accomplished gentleman, he possessed my esteem and affection; as the victor upon many a well-fought field, in which the national honor was maintained and the enemies of our beloved country humbled before our triumphant flag, I respect him, I am grateful to him, I am proud of him."

Friends, such is General Scott, and these are his admirers. Vain? proud! weak may he be when our great men thus exhaust our language to his praise. He is all that is noble, genrous, refined,—is worthy a place in the hearts, and affections of the American people, and has honestly earned the distinction to which we seek to elevate him. How great the contrast, and how contemptible appears his petty revilers.—[Ed. Rep.

Honorary Titles.—The democratic candidate for Congress has as many titles as a Princess of Spain. He commences his contracts thus:—

"I, Andrew L. Ireland, Island of Isabella, Schroon Lake, town of Schroon, Co. of Essex, State of N. Y., formerly of the city of N. Y., Counsellor and Atty. at law by profession, of the first part."

"Discretion is the better part of valor."—On the appearance of the Republican last week a messenger was sent with one in his pocket post haste to La Biel Island, to obtain a denial of our statements. Of course he came back as wise as he went, because what we stated was true, and particularly that Col. Ireland was recently Free-trade.

Still in Darkness.—The democrats of this section are going into this election without one word in relation to Pierce's votes in Congress. Their platform, their speeches, their press, their daily conversations, all abound with abuse and misrepresentations of whigs and whig measures, but not one word of Pierce's votes. Forward in this course has been the Northern Gazette. Constantly referring to whig men and whig measures, and to the Republican it has never fairly quoted either—for it dare not. In this course it has done more to bring the county press into disrepute, and to induce a system of barefaced electioneering falsehoods that it can never atone for. Time will show that it will recoil upon the democracy with more power for evil than it has been for their temporary good. Next comes the exposure and then the disgrace.

Important.

Look out—for "last cards," and illegal voting. The Democracy is desperate.

DON'T FAIL—To obtain a complete alphibetical Poll list of every Whig voter.

DON'T FAIL—To appoint proper persons to take charge of these Poll lists, to mark each Whig as he deposits his ballot and to challange illegal voters.

DON'T FAIL—To observe and take an account of every Whig who is absent from the Polls.

DON'T FAIL—To provide sufficient teams, to bring the absentees to the Polls.

DON'T FAIL—To send early for the absentees.

DON'T FAIL—To be at the opening of the Polls, and vote early.

REMEMBER—A full whig vote is a whig victory.

REMEMBER—That without a correct canvass of the Whig votes, many votes will be lost.

REMEMBER—That one vote elected Marcus Morton Governor of Mass.

REMEMBER—That next Tuesday the great contest will be decided, and if every Whig will give the few remaining days, to effect a complete Organization, their Patriotic efforts will be be crowned with a glorious Whig victory.

REMEMBER—The heroic words of Scott, as he lay bleeding on the battle field of Lundy's Lane, "Charge Again."—The order was obeyed and the "Red Coats" were routed. Now gallant Whigs: "Charge again," for WINFIELD SCOTT! and victory.

Communications.

Mr. Simmons—Col. Ireland.

It is believed that the condition, the wants and the interests of Northern New York, at the present, more than any other period of time requires an able and efficient Representative in the National Legislature.

Thoroughly impressed with these sentiments a convention was held at Keeseville last winter which was numerously attended by men of candor and intelligence from different parts of Essex and Clinton representing all the industrial classes—and composed of members of all Political parties—who seemed at that time to be animated by one common sentiment. An opinion was there entertained and expressed with entire unanimity, that the condition of this district demanded a postponment of mere party considerations to the advancement of the Public interests.—It was urged and conceded by all—that the Revenue system now in force, was defective—that it did not afford protection to the manufacturer—nor a home market for the products of our farms, that specific duties or a home valuation was called for, in order to prevent gross frauds upon the Revenue, by introducing the iron, and other commodities produced by the Pauper labor of great Britain at prices greatly below cost, and thus depriving the American producing classes of the benefit of the moderate duties provided by the present tariff. And with this view of the importance of that subject, a resolution was introduced by a committee raised for that purpose and passed with unexampled unanimity, the purport of which was in substance a pledge on the part of the members of that meeting to support for office men known to be in favor of protecting American labor by moderate and judicious Legislation. Geo. A. Simmons Esq. of Keeseville was a member of that committee and with great force and ability advocated the adoption of the Resolution. It was also strenuously advocated by several gentlemen of the Democratic party, and it is believed that many of them will honorably redeem their pledges without regard to the trammels of faction.

Looking with anxiety to this important subject, the whigs of this District composed of Essex, Clinton and Franklin, who have a common interest to protect and foster have nominated Mr. Simmons as their Representative in Congress.

He was not nominated merely on account of his political creed, but because he is extensively known as a man of a high order of intellect, safe and reliable in his principles, and possessing a mind well stored with useful knowledge, and because he has a perfect acquaintance with the resources of this section of country and the wants and condition of the People and the ability and industry to represent them in an efficient manner and because his standing and character and general acquaintance at home and abroad, will give him an immediate influence in Congress. He is not brot' forward as a mere partisan to engage in a scramble for the spoils of office But a man able and willing to work for the interests of his constituents. Such men must be selected to represent us or we can never hope for influence in the councils of the nation. In opposition to Mr. Simmons a candidate is brought forward by a portion of the Locofoco party—not by the Democratic party for he is a stranger to them as he is to the body of the electors of the district. Col. Ireland has recently established himself at a summer residence on an Island in Schroon Lake, at the southern extremity of Essex County where he has been enjoying the ordinary pursuits of a gentlemen of leisure. Never having been engaged in any kind of business, possessing but a limited acquaintance with the People of the District, and none whatever with the business pursuits. How is it possible that he can be a suitable Representative of the industrious and hard working population of these northern counties?—Where do we obtain reliable information in regard to his capacity, or of his sentiments and views in reference to the important questions in which we are vitally concerned? The answer is no where, we are called on to take him on trust. It would truly be a most remarkable event in the history of Politics if Col. Ireland should be selected at this crisis as the representative of these Northern Counties.

The happening of such an event seems to be incredible. Truth.

(For the Republican.)

Protection vs Free Trade.

☞ Count the cost for four years to come.

It is said that Free-trade is the national condition of human society—that air, earth, water, love, and trade should be free, and unshackled.

It might be difficult to determine what would be a national condition of human society. If such a thing ever existed in this second edition of the world we have no sufficient details of its history to instruct us as to its prosperity. If we are pointed to the somewhat artificial condition of modern barbarism as a specimen of natural society, we have only to say that Free-trade may or may not be one of its principal elements. We are only concerned to know the means of a higher advancement in human improvement. This Free air, water, earth, love, and trade is well clap trap thrown out to smother investigation.

To illustrate the principles and effect of a protective tariff let us suppose a tax of One Dollar pr. Barrel imposed on all flour imported from elsewhere into this country. What would be the effect in the department of wheat growing on these hills and in these vallies? Is it not plain that such an arrangement would be a stimulus to that noble branch of agricultural industry nearly equal to a bonus paid to the same amt? All agree that this would be very fine for the farmer.

But, it may be said that although the farmer would be encouraged and his interests promoted by such a tariff, it would be in the same proportion injurious to mechanics and to all other non producing department of useful labor; inasmuch as they would be compelled to pay so much more for bread than they would und... the free trade rule. That is to say, ... iff could be of no use that did not rai... price of the article protected by it.

That does not follow as a matt... course;—for whenever any branch of ... ness is brought into vigorous life an... tivity by any means that promises sta... and profit, domestic competition tends ... mediately to reduce the price of the ... cle thus produced.

But there is another view of the cas... which we should give strict attention. ... would be by no means probable that ... departments of business would be de... ated or hardened in proportion as ... was advanced. Take the Black Smith ... instance;—Would not an increased ac... ty in the farming department, create ... itself an increased demand for the ... ducts of the anvil, at better prices ... better pay? Just so of all other de... ments of useful labor.

Where the arts of producing has bec... stationary, and must remain stationary ... tariff might operate unequally and oppr... ively;—as in England for instance w... the agricultural interests has become ... nearly perfected under the fostering c... a tariff, where now the soil cannot be ... posed to be capable of much greate... ductions than at present, then indee... iff might operate against the cons... Her "common laws" were doubtl... reet tax" on bread. Free tra... therefore be demanded there by j... by expediency. But it is no ex... us to follow till our circumstance... come like hers.

What we have here supposed c... mer of Essex Co. develops the p... on which the demand of a tariff is p... ted. Nor would the operation of pro... tive measures operate materially differ... on any other of the great industrial p... suits of our country, in relation to fore... competition. What then is wisdom for us? Shall ... be still lured on by a name which has be... invariably used as a sham to cover design... hostile to our interests? What right has a party which has ... invariably proved false to the promises ... made in electioneering to claim our further ... confidence on the same promises!

There is a way open to us in which a ... sound national policy can be secured The ... nominees of the whig party are entirely re... liable on all questions interesting to us and ... will carry out the whole views of this Co... on national policy when elected. Railroad Meeting.

At a meeting held at Saratoga Springs Oct. 27 1852 to take into consideration the construction of a Rail Road on the west side of Lake Champlain Judge Walter Geer, of Glens Falls was called to the chair and Henry Green of Keeseville appointed secretary.

After some remarks from Judge Cheever, A. C. Moore Esq. Mr. Coffin, Hon. O. Kellogg, and Mr. Rawson it was suggested that a committee of three from each of the Counties of Clinton Essex, Warren, Washington and Saratoga be appointed to collect statistics, and information with regard to the business of said Road which was adopted. The following gentlemen compose said committee viz. Moss. Kent Platt, H. G. Powers and H. Green for Clinton—O. Keese, R. W. Livingston and S. Wells for Essex—A. W. Morgan, Jos. Woodard, and T. S Grey for Warren—Judge Ingals, Taylor Paine and Leroy Morey for Washington—Samuel Cheever, Mayo Pond and Geo. Strover for Saratoga—On motion, the meeting was then adjourned to meet at the Mansion house in Albany on the 23d of November next at 3 o'clock P. M.

HENRY GREEN, Secretary.

"Charge Again"

When the gallant Scott lay bleeding upon the battle field of Lundy's Lane, and when he was suffering intense agony from what was deemed a death wound, he gave the order to

"CHARGE AGAIN!"

…he order was obeyed, and Victory …ed upon our Banner.

…Loco Focos are just now boasting …sy victory. The skirmishes in Ohio …nsylvania have inspired them with …e hope. 'SCOTT IS WOUNDED!" is …d now by the Loco Focos as it was …d at Lundy's Lane by the Red …. But now as then, those who follow …ead, know no such word as 'fall' …have confidence in his invincible firm…and now as then, his inspiring order

"CHARGE AGAIN!"

…ll result in the overwhelming discomfit…e of the enemy.

FELLOW WHIGS! 'CHARGE AGAIN' upon the enemies of our Public Works.—Teach the hypocritical Pledge makers and the forsworn Pledge breakers that they cannot deceive or betray the People with impunity.

"CHARGE AGAIN!" upon the squanderers of the Public Money. Men who increase the expenses for Canal Repairs sixty three per cent, in a single year, and under whose Administration the surplus revenue falls off from $900,000 to $200,000 are not to be trusted!

"CHARGE AGAIN!" upon the Legislative disorganisers and lawless revolutionists. A free government is a government of law and order. They are the worst enemies of such a government who, to gratify personal malice, or to accomplish a grovelling party purpose, forcibly disturb the legitimate functions of government and trample upon the organic law of the State. This was done by the twelve absconding Senators, and HORATIO SEYMOUR approved the treason!

"CHARGE AGAIN!" upon the apologists of fraud, peculation and prodigality. Loco Foco principles and subordinates were arraigned for fraudulently squandering the public money. The fact was proved, but the culprits were acquitted and their accuser condemned!

"CHARGE AGAIN!" for Washington Hunt and the Enlargement. The anti Canal faction have made him the target for their vilest abuse and their heaviest maledictions. Let us stand by the man who has novr failed in the discharge of a public duty!

"CHARGE AGAIN!" for River and Harbor Improvements, Franklin Pierce is their invoterate enemy. He voted against every appropriation bill brought forward while he was a memeber of Congress, and he would veto any bill which might pass if he should be elected President!

"CHARGE AGAIN!" for Protection to Home Labor. Franklin Pierce is the candidate of the British Manufacturers.—He is the advocate of a Policy which will crush American Industry. Let our watchword be "America against the World"—Home Labor Forever!"

"CHARGE AGAIN!" for Winfield Scott and Whig Principles! Keep the Empire State on the extreme right of the Whig Army. Push on the Column!—Organize for Victory! CHARGE!—Albany Eve. Journal.

TIMELY WARNING.—Let no storm, nor business,—nothing save sickness and death keep a whig from the polls.

POWERFUL.—Such was the effect of Gaffney's speech here that a four horse team with free seats for the Forks had to be put out again for the want of any person willing to hear him again.

☞ PASS IT ROUND.—Any number of democrats can be had to vote for Gen. A. Simmons by the mere asking. Will our friends attend to this earnestly?

"EASTERN BRANCH," sends us a communication on the recent discovery of a new route from the Saranac Lakes to Keeseville N.Y. by way of Keen flats, spruce hill, and La Belle Island in Schroon Lake. It is said to facilite the transportation of Pork and Flour! The discovery was made by a noted politician of the upper country. We have not room for the entire communication.

SCOTT MUSIC.

For the Republican.

Original Campaign Song.

Tune—Yankee Doodle,

CHORUS.

Yankee Doodle is the tune
That all true yankees dont on,
'Twill do to sing by night or noon
And just the thing to vote on.
Then join each voice, loud let them sing
We surely shall dismay, 'em
For we'll put down their Pierce & King
And put up SCOTT and GRAHAM.

Against fierce thousands at fort George
The enemies—of freedom,
Our noble Scott a Colonel then
With Yankee skill did bleed 'em,
Then hasten on and spike each gun
Opposed to Scott and Graham—
Come to the polls ye gallant souls
We there with ease can slay 'em
Chorus.

At Chipewa and Lundy's Lane
Our foes by night o'er taken,
By Scott and Brown were beaten down
And British valor shaken.
Our hero there an honor'd scar,
Receiv'd for freedom's glory,
His praises roar at Baltimore
His fame yet live's in story. Chorus.

Behold him now with fearless brow
The Cherokee addressing,
With supple knee the natives flee
Their treaty thus confessing,
In eighteen hundred forty one the 35th of June O,
Our brave Macomb, sank to the tomb
And Scott Received his plume O.
Chorus.

Now see him wage successful war
Throug Mexico's wild regions
At Vera Cruz and San Juan
He conquor'd them by legions,
At Cerro Gordo's bloody field
The seventeenth of April
Full fifteen thousand veirans yield
To Scott's Herculean grapple.
Chorus.

Jalapa and Perote are won
And all, to Chorobusco,
Fall, as the leaves neath Autumn's sun
Or flee, because they must go.
Chepultepec though last not least
Is gain'd I'll shout and you may
For yonder golden halls are ours
Otice, halls of Montezuma.
Chorus.

Hurza! Hurza! then for the polls
Let's hasten in November
With tribute to those gallant souls
That never did Surrender,
Then noble Scott we'll tender thee
Because thy claim is righteous—
Yon beautious fabric which you see
Known as our nations, White House.
Chorus.

FALL AND WINTER
HATS & CAPS.
BARNUM, Hatter, Wholesale and Retail College Street, 2d door from Church, has received his Fall Stock, and is now prepared to offer as good an assortment of Hats, Caps, Trunks, Ladies Hat Cases, Valises, Gentlemen and Ladies Satchels, Canes, Umbrellas, &c., as ever was presented in Burlington.—He challenges a comparison with any other establishment, either in price or quality, as he has been enabled this Fall to purchase at reduced prices, and will sell from 15 to 25 per cent. less than he ever could do before, at prices previously paid. He would especially (before purchasing elsewhere) solicit an examination of his best $4 Fall Hats, and pledges his reputation that they are worth $1 more than any before sold by him at the same price. ADIRONDAC BUILDINGS,
KEESEVILLE, N. Y.
H. S. TOUSLEY, after an absence of several weeks, has returned and re-opened his commodious rooms for the reception of visitors. He has brought with him from the New York market, a splendid assortment of Cases, &c., and being desirous of keeping pace with the spirit of the times, he has made himself familiar with all the recent improvements in the Dagnerreotype system. Those in want of truthful likenesses had better call without delay, as I shall probable close my rooms in 6 or 8 weeks. Remember that "procrastination is the thief of time." The public is cordially invited to call and examine specimens. 441

20 Years Experience.
OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.
Quick Cures and Low prices.
Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of
PRIVATE DISEASES,
at his offices No 5 Beaver street ALBANY, N. Y.
The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive idence that the
SICK AND UNFORTUNATE
can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.
Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from
DAILY EMPLOYMENT.
In Syphilis, Gonorchœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Gorde, Buba, Ulcerss Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender and bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood, Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed
EVEN TO RELIEVE.
More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating these diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.
YOUNG MEN,
who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasures of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, all such vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, leaves no disagreeable smell and
CURES WITHOUT FAIL
☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be afflicted, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and lost much time and money, cannot do themselves a greater act of injustice than by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges to advise and warrants all his cures. Those who are seeking at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TO SO MANY, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, with all one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.
N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who deceive the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.
Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or ever enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and have without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for
DR. VICHOI'S
FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.
The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. sent by mail to all parts of the world.
Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a book containing little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Everything that married persons can desire or wish to know is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.
N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.
No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.
No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice.
Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care, will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.
Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sunday from 1 to 4 P. M.
No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.
Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.
These ploughs have of late been fully tested, having taken the first premium in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have the Starrett and Taft's celebrated Ploughs.
Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and rounds; draft or two horse ploughs adapted to sandy, gravelly, stony or loamy soils, with or without mould board, subsoil, &c., &c.
Harrows—Thomas's square, Gobble's and French Rig, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spike, steel tooth or cast iron Harrows.
Cultivators—in different kinds, steel tooth or spring.
Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 8 to 10 bushels of corn per hour.
Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.
Seed Sowers—Hardie's & Emery's, and other kinds.
Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and potatoes.
Horse Powers, Threshers, Wind mills and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double, for one or two horses, has been long in requisition for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are now widely and favorably known to need further mention. The combined Thresher and Winnower, which was a new invention of last year, has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it is mainly by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,
or be returned after a reasonable trial.
New Mills Fanning Mill, used for sowing wool for breeders on Railroad or by farmers during the winter with a one horse power it will run 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

SHERIFF SALE.

By virtue of an execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York to me directed and delivered, I have seized and taken all the interest which John H. Morhous and David W. Morhous, had on the 15th day of March, 1852, or which they may have since acquired of in and to all that certain tract or parcel of land situate, lying and being in a patent of land originally granted to John Conoly, on the west of the River Bouquet, and bounded as follows, beginning about the distance of 27 chains and 6 links west of said River Boquet in the south line of said patent thence west on the patent line 50 chains 86 links, thence north at right angles 19 chains 66 links; thence East at right Angles 50 chains 85 links, thence South in a straight line to the place of beginning exactly one hundred acres of land subject to the reservations contained in the original letters patent, the courses all running as the needle pointed in 1764. The said lands above described are lots No. 3 and 8 containing each 50 acres of Land. Also one other certain piece or parcel of land Bounded as follows, to wit; Beginning at the Northwest corner of lot No. 5 in Conollys patent at a birch tree Marked 5 and 6, thence west 25 chains 43 links to a stake, thence South 19 chains 66 links to a stake thence East 25 chains 43 links to a bunch of stones on a high ledge of rocky land, thence north 19 chains 66 links to the place of begining, courses all run as the needle pointed in year 1761, containing 50 acres of land being Lot No. 6. Also one other certain piece or parcel of land bounded as follows; to wit, beginning at a Patent of land, originally granted to John Conally in the town of Willsboro, the first acre is to begin at the north east corner of the lot on which J. H. Morhouse now resides and is laid out in a square form, the 2d lot to begin at the North West corner of the above mentioned acre and runs on north line or farm so far west that a line to be run South East to the centre of the highway, including all the land between the North line aforesaid and the centre of the highway as will make one acre of land so as to contain 2 acres in the whole.

Also all the equal undivided half of that certain lot of land lying in the town of Willsborough, known and distinguished as lot No. 10 of the back lots in Conally's patent, containing 50 acres more or less, said lands all lying and being in the county of Essex and State aforesaid, all of which I shall expose to sale at publick vendue at the Adirondac Hotel in the village of Keeseville in said county on the 22d day of November 1852 at 12 o'clock at noon of that day.

SHERIFF SALE.

BY Virtue of an Execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to me directed and delivered against the goods and chattels, real estate and chattels real of Joseph Weed and Almerin Smith, I have seized and taken all that tract or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga, and Essex county, bounded as follows:

All that piece and parcel of land lying and being in said town of Ticonderoga, being the westerly part of a lot of land formerly leased by Samuel Deal to Jonathan Drury, and known on a map of said land as lot No. 51, beginning at a maple stake standing in the east line of a lot of land lately conveyed to the said Almerin Smith, by the said Thomas Wheeler, thence running south eighty two degrees east, forty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty degrees thirty minutes east, eighty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty two degrees west, forty rods to the stake and stones, thence south eight degrees thirty minutes west, eighty rods to the place of beginning. Containing within said bounds twenty acres. Excepting from off the said lot two acres, conveyed by Samuel Deal to the Congregational Meeting House, and Society of Ticonderoga, and one half acre to the Corporation of St. Paul's Church, also in said town.

Also, all that piece parcel or tract of land situate, lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga aforesaid, and bounded as follows:

Beginning at a stake standing in the north east corner of a lot of land formerly owned by James Jones, and conveyed by him to the said Smith, and now in his possession; thence running south eighty degrees east, twenty-eight chains and sixty-three links to a stake; thence south eight degrees and forty-five minutes west, nineteen chains 70 links to a stake standing in the north line of Edward McCaughin's land, thence north eighty degrees west, 28 chains and 63 links to a stake, thence in a straight line to the place of beginning. Containing 56 acres and one-third of an acre be the same or less or less.

Also all that certain other lot adjoining being a part of the Holcomb and Jones farms, bounded on the south and west by the highway leading from Ticonderoga to Crown Point on the east by lands formerly owned by Wm. Stewart now McCaughin and on the north by the highway leading past John Ledwitch's farm and residence and on the south by said McCaughin's land.

Also, all that certain farm in Ticonderoga, aforesaid, known as the Lake farm containing about 350 acres, being lot No. one and two in the McIntosh Patent, in the possession of Charles F. Hammond and Allen Penfield, and about 75 acres adjoining part of lot No. in same patent now in possession of Geo. D. Clark

Also, all that certain other lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as part of the James Jones farm, sold and conveyed by Almerin Smith, to Alva Bennett in the year 1847, and now in the possession of said Bennett bounded and described as follows: beginning at a stake and stones in the easterly line of lands belonging to Francis Arthur Esq., being also the south west corner of the William Canfield farm, thence along the southerly line of said Canfield's land, south 80 degrees east, 5 chains and 8 links to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to Ticonderoga village, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 31 chains and 25 links to a stake, then north 86 degrees west, 25 chains to a stake standing in a ditch or drain and also in the easterly line of said Arthur's land, thence along the same north 10 3-4 degrees east, 26 chains and 76 links to the place of beginning, containing 40 acres of land.

Also, all that certain lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, commonly called the Holcomb lot now in possession of Almerin Smith and Charles H. Bennett, and sold and conveyed by the said Almerin Smith to them in the year 1847, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning in the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Upper Falls in Ticonderoga, being the north east corner of Sylvanus Bennett's farm, thence along the north line of said Bennett's farm north 80 degrees west, 32 chains and 14 links to a stake in the east line of Gustavus N. Wicker's land, thence along the same and along part of the east line of Francis Arthur's land, north 10 3-4 degrees east, 14 chains and 85 links to a stake standing in a ditch or drain, thence south 86 degrees east, 25 chains to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Lower Falls of Ticonderoga, thence along the same south 3 degrees east, 10 chains and 80 links to the centre of the first above mentioned highway, thence southerly along the same 9 chains to the place of beginning containing 48 acres and 71-100 of an acre of land.

Also, a certain other lot in Ticonderoga aforesaid, now in possession of Jeremiah O'Brien, bounded on the south by the road leading past John Ledwitch's land and residence, on the east by said Ledwitch's lands, on the north by lands of Alexander McCambridge, and on the west by lands of Wm A. G. Arthur containing fifty acres or thereabouts.

Also a certain other lot piece or parcel of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid lying and being on the south and west side of the highway leading from the Lower Falls to the street called or Crown Point between the former dwelling house of the said Almerin Smith and burnt a few years since, and the present dwelling house of Edward McCaughin, being the same lot sold by the said Smith to the said McCaughin in 1847, and now owned by him, containing by estimation about 14 acres, being originally part of lands belonging to Stephen and Silas Sayre.

Also, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Schroon, Co. and State aforesaid on the west side of Lake George and comprehended within the bounds of a tract of land granted by Letters patent under the great seal of the state of N. Y., to James Caldwell, Robert McClellen, and Robert Cochran and is more particularly known and distinguished by being lot No. one hundred and forty seven of the division of said tract bounded as follows, viz:

Beginning at the southwest corner of lot No, one hundred and forty four being a stake No. 144, 145, 146, 147, and runs thence along No. 146 south 25 chains to lot No. 148, thence along the same east 40 chains to lot No. 143 thence along the same north 25 chains to lot No. 144, and thence along the same west 40 chains to the place of beginning, containing one hundred acres of land, be the same more or less. The courses are as the magnetic needle pointed at Lake George in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen. Which said several lots, lands and real estate I shall expose for sale at Public Vendue at the Hotel kept by S. Woodard at the Lower Falls in Ticonderoga on the 20th day of July next at ten o'clock in the forenoon. Dated June 5th 1852.

Ben Bolt's Reply.

BY SYDNEY DYER.

Ah! yes, I remember that name with delight,
Sweet Alice, so cherished and dear;
I seek her bower in the pale hour of night,
And moisten the turf with a tear;
And there when the heart is o'erburthened with woes
I wander and muse all alone,
And long for the time when my head shall repose,
Where "sweet Alice lies under the stone."

I rome through the wood where so joyous we strayed
And recline on the green sunny hill.
All things are as bright in that beautiful glade
But my heart is all lonely and chill.
The hand that so fondly I pressed then in mine
And the lips that were melting with love—
Are cold in the grave, and I'm left to repine,
'Till I meet with sweet Alice above.

Ah! well I remember the school-house and brook,
"And the master so kind and so true,"
The wild blooming flowers in the cold shady nook
So fragrant with insence and dew.
But I weep not for these, though so dear to my heart,
Nor the friends that have left us alone—
The bosome will heave, and the tear-drops will start,
For "sweet Alice lies under the stone."

Daniel Webster.

Daniel Webster was born in the town of Salisbury, N. H., on the 18th of January, 1782. He was consequently in his 71st year at the time of his death. The family came originally from Scotland, though it settled in Hampton N. H., in the year 1636. In his 14th year the future statesman was placed by his father in Exeter Academy, where he remained but a few months. He was removed to Boscawen, and placed under the tuition of the Rev. Samuel Woods, where the charg of instruction, board, &c., was but one dollar a week. In August, 1797, he entered Dartmouth Colledge, and graduated in August, 1801. While in College, during the winter vacations, he taught school. On leaving college he entered as a law student the office of Mr. Thompson, in Salisbury. While there he had an offer to teach school in Fryburg, (Me.,) at a salary of $350 a year, all of which he managed to save, as he employed himself, aside from his duties as a teacher, as an assistant in the office of Register of Deeds. Here also, he read for the first time Blackstone's Commentaries and committed to memory Mr. Ames' celebrated speech on the British treaty.

In September, 1802, he returned to Mr. Thompson's office and resumed the study of law, and remained until 1804, when he came to Boston and obtained admission as a student in the office of the Hon Christopher Gore. This was a fortunate turn of luck—Mr Gore was one of the best lawyers of his day, besides being an accomplished statesman. In March, 1805, he was, on motion of Mr. Gore, admitted to practice in the Suffolk Court of Common Pleas. He had the offer at this time of the clerkship of the Hillsboro" N. H., Court of Common Pleas, worth $1500 a year; he was strongly persuaded to take it by his father, but Mr. Gore who saw the great talents of the young man, interposed and prevented it. Mr. Webster opened his first law office in Boscawen, where he remained until 1807, when he was admitted as attorney and counsellor of the Superior Court of New Hampshire, and removed to Portsmouth. In 1808, he married Grace Fletcher, daughter of the Rev. Mr. Fletcher, of Hopkinton. Four children were the fruit of this marriage, but one of whom (Fletcher) survives. Mr. Webster lived in Portsmouth nine years; at that time, no bar in the United States possessed so great a number of eminent practitioners.

In November, 1812, in the 30th year of his age, he was elected a Representative of the State, in Congress, and in 1813, he for the first time took his seat in the National councils. On Thursday, June 10th, 1813, he made his first speech in Congress, upon resolutions introduced by himself, relating to the Berlin and Milan decrees. His speech took the House by suprise, not so much from its eloquence as from the vast amount of historical knowledge and illustrative ability which it displayed. Chief Justice Marshall, who heard the speech, writing to a friend some time afterwards, says, "I was so much struck with it that I did not hesitate then to state that Mr. Webster was a very able man, and would become one of the very first statesmen in America, perhaps the very first." The resolutions were carried by a vote of 137 to 26. He entered Congress when the war with Great Britain was being waged. Although he did not approve of all the measures of the administration in regard to the conduct of the war, he never made a factious opposition. He belonged to what was then known as the Federal party. He was in favor of fighting the war upon the ocean, and in his speech many years afterwards, when taunted by Mr. Calhoun in the United States Senate, with being hostile to the war, he said: "To her maritime ascendency England owed everything, and we were at war with her. One of her most charming poets had said of her that 'Her march is o'er the mountain wave,

Her home is on the deep.'

Now, since we were at war with her, I was for intercepting this march; I was for calling upon her, and paying our respects to her at home; I was for giving her to know that we, too, had a right of way over the seas, and that our marine officers and our sailors were not entire strangers on the bosom of the deep; I was for doing something more with our navy than to keep it to guard our shores, for the protection of our shores and our own harbors; I was for giving play to its gallant and burning spirit; for allowing it to go forth upon the seas and encounter, on an open and equal field, whatever the proudest and bravest of the enemy could bring against it. I knew the character of its officers and the spirit of its seamen; and I knew that in their hands, though the flag of the country might go down to the bottom, while they went with it, yet, that it could never be dishonored or disgraced." He concluded with these words; "As I do not mean to recur to this subject often, or ever, unless indispensably necessary, I repeat the demand for any accusation, any allegation whatever, that throws me behind the honorable gentleman, or behind any other man, in honor, infidelity, in devoted love to that country in which I was born, which has honored me, and which I serve; I, who seldom deal in defiance, now, here, in my place, boldly defy the honorable member to put his insinuation in form of a charge, and to support that charge by any proof whatever."

The challenge thus boldly and eloquently put forth, was never accepted by Mr. Calhoun or any other man, and the question was never again raised.

Mr. Webster was re elected to Congress in 1814. Representatives to Congress were at this time elected in New Hampshire on the general ticket; such member was voted for by the voters of the entire State. In the session of 1824, Mr. Webster spoke against Mr. Dallas's bill to re-charter the U. S. Bank. His objections were to the details of the bill, and not because he doubted the constitutional power of Congress to grant a charter. At the close of the 13th Congress, Mr. Webster returned to Portsmouth, and resumed the active practice of his profession. At this time he first thought of changing his residence, and his mind hesitated between Boston and Albany. It finally fixed on Boston, and after the adjournment of Congress, in 1816, he left Portsmouth and took up his abode in this city. Since then he has never gone into a New Hampshire Court but on one occasion, in the great Dartmouth College case. He had been but two years in Boston when he was solicited to stand as a candidate for Congress. He refused. He was then solicited to accept a seat in the U. S. Senate. This honor he also declined. He preferred a more humble position, and followed the pursuit of his profession. He served, however, a few weeks as a member of our Legislature, and was chosen an elector of President and Vice President of the United States, at Mr. Monroe's second election, in 1820. He was also chosen a delegate to the Convention to revise the Constitution of the State, in 1821, and served in that body with distinguished ability.

Yielding to the solicitation of friends, he was elected in the fall of 1822 a Representative in Congress from the city of Boston, by 1000 majority over Jesse Putnam. When he re entered Congress, Mr. Clay was again Speaker. It was during this Congress that he made his speech on the Greek question, in which he gave his views on the policy which the country should assume in its relations with despotic governments, in their schemes to crush the efforts of the people to establish free governments, a question which has been revived of late years by the advent of Kossuth upon our shores,

Mr. Webster's views were highly patriotic and liberal, and his speeches produced a profound sensation. In the fall of 1824, Mr. Webster was re-elected to Congress. He received 4990 votes out of a poll of 5000. This was the Presidential year.—Mr. Webster gave his support to John Quincy Adams, and afterwards defended Mr. Clay from the charges of corruption which were brought against him for taking a seat in Mr. Adams' cabinet, In 1826, Mr. Webster made his admirable and celebrated speech on the Panama mission. In the summer of the same year, he delivered his eulogy upon the characters of Adams and Jefferson, one of the most magnificent productions in the language; the closing paragraph of which, is not unappropriate to be ascribed to the memory of the departed orator; "Although no sculptured marble should rise to their memory, nor engraved stones bear record of their deeds, yet will their remembrance be as lasting as the land they honored. Marble columns may indeed moulder into dust, time may erase all impress rom the crumbling stone, but their fame remains, for with "American Liberty only" can it perish It was the last swelling peal of yonder choir: "Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name liveth ever more." I catch that solemn song; I catch that lofty strain of funeral triumph, "their name liveth ever more."

These words sound like the footfall of a votary in the deserted mausoleum of his patron shrine. There is a majestic solemnity, a cathedral like eloquence, an Isaiah like rhapsody in them, that subdued the heart and awakened emotions of the most lofty and sublime piety; and we, changing number, repeat involuntarily—Thy name liveth evermore. But we must pass on.—In November, 1826, he was re-elected to Congress with almost entire unanimity; but before taking his seat, he was elected by the Legislature to a seat in the U. S. Senate. The vote in the Legislature stood as follows;—In Senate, Daniel Webster, 26, John Mills 11, Edward Everett 1, Levi Lincoln 1. In the House, Daniel Webster 202, John Mills 32, scattering 44. The illness and death of his wife prevented him from taking his seat in the Senate, until 1828. Among his first efforts in the Senate, was a speech in favor of giving relief to the surviving soldiers of the Revolution, and speeches of a protective tariff.

The "great debate," as it was called, and by which name it ever will be remembered, upon Foot's resolution, commenced in the Senate in January, 1830. Out of his debate, and in the course of it, Mr. Hayne, of South Carolina, made his attack upon New England, and especially upon Massachusetts and upon Mr. Webster personally. His "speech in reply to Hayne" has become, since then, a household God in our Commonwealth. It is, beyond comparison, the greatest speech ever made in Congress, and it will live side by side with the best speeches of Demosthenes or Cicero, of Chatham or Burke. It at once established his name as the unrivalled orator of America, and gave to him, by general consent, the honored title of "Defender of the Constitution." The history and incidents of this debate we may refer to hereafter.

His next great speech was in the case of the "Salem murder," when John Francis Knapp was upon trial for his life. In the opinion of many, his speech on this occasion is the greatest he ever made. There are certainly some portions of it which are unsurpassed—and taken as a whole, it is unquestionably the most powerful argument ever addressed to an American jury.

Mr. Webster remained in the Senate until 1841, when he accepted the appointment of Secretary of State, in the cabinet of Gen Harrison. He was afterwards elected by the Legislature again, to the United States Senate, and upon the death of Gen. Taylor, he was again transferred to the State Department, at the solicitation of Mr Fillmore, which office he held to the day of his death. We have not room in this article to speak of his profound statesmanship as shown in his new capacity. During the administration of John Tyler, it was his fortune, in connection with Lord Ashburton, to settle by treaty, the North Eastern boundry, and by his unanswerable logic to fix and establish forever the principle of international law relating to the right of search. His services as Secretary, are second only to his services in the Senate. In 1836, he received the vote of Massachusetts for President of the United States.

We have, in the above, sketched only a mere outline of his public life. It remains for the historian of America to fill it up, and place it among the imperishable records of our country.

Besides his great speeches in the Senate and House, we have his orations at Plymouth, at the laying of the corner-stone of Bunker Hill Monument, and his oration on the occasion of the completion of the Monument, and his address on the 4th of July last, at Washington, on laying the corner stone of the adition to the Capitol, with many other orations, addresses and speeches, which even to enumerate would far exceed the limits which we have prescribed for ourselves in this article. Nor is it necessary. They have all been preserved and ably edited by Governor Everett, in the late edition of the works of Daniel Webster, issued by Little & Brown of this city.

Such as we have meagrely sketched was the public life of Daniel Webster. But with him as with other great men, his public life was but a small part of his real existence. As we stated on Saturday, in private social life he shone conspicuously as he did in public life, and no man can fully appreciate his great pre-eminence, who has not enjoyed the favor of his private friendship.

When Mr. Webster entered public life, he found among his associates, Clay, Calhoun, and Forsyth, in the first rank of talent. He has survived them all. He has followed them in the path of fame. Clay, Calhoun, and Forsyth preceded him in the Cabinet. Like himself, they were successively Secretaries of State, an office requiring the most exalted talent to perform well his duties. Like him, neither of them reached the Presidential chair, and in this is developed a curious philosophical fact, connected with our popular institutions. His illustrious associates have gone down to the grave. He was left alone, the last of the glorious throng South Carolina and Georgia hold the ashes of their illustrious sons, Calhoun and Forsyth' and amid the beautiful and fertile glades of the dark and bloody ground, slumber in the sleep of death the ashes of his greatest compeer and associate, the orator of feelings and of the heart, the statesman, the patriot, and the public idol, Henry Clay. There the soft breezes chant his requiem, as they fan the leafy branches of the oak and the sycamore, in his far off western home, in the secluded valo of Ashland. At Marshfield, in the far East, within sight of the mighty ocean, upon which he loved so well to look, and to draw great thoughts from its vast expanse, tumultous and ever heaving with the current and the storm, rest the lifeless remains of the great New England orator and statesman. There he lived for many years—his mansion the home of a generous hospitality There he died in the fullness of years, and amid friends whom he loved, and there will he be buried. The deep, solemn roar of the ocean billow will roll on, like nature's cathedral music, until time shall be no more as it has since the morning stars first sang together; but it will fall in silence upon the ear of the mighty dead, sounds which when living he loved so well to hear.

That man is a superficial observer of life, and a still more superficial reader of history and of human events, if from the seed of the tomb of illustrious dead he can discover no flower which is to spring forth and blossom, and to throw its sweetness on the future glory of our land. The memory of the good, in the humblest walks of life is among the choicest blessings which a wise Providence vouchsafes to mould the character and subdued the evil passions of our race. In the death of a great statesman, one who has deserved well of his country, who has passed his long and valuable life in her service, whose deeds are among her richest treasure, around whose words are entwined the high resolve and the patriot t[illegible] ligaments which binds a nation shoot forth like the rooty fibers of a spear of grain or a young oak, after the kernal and the acorn have decayed and mingled with their mother earth.

Flogging an Editor.

About twenty years ago, when a certain Western State (which we shall not name) was a territory, and with a very few inhabitants, a young lawyer from one of the old States emigrated thither, and settled in the town of K———. He succeeded admirably in his profession, and rose rapidly in popular favor. He had been there nearly two years, when he had induced a printer to come and print a weekly paper, of which he was editor and proprietor. Squire S— was much pleased for a while with editing a paper. He was a man of very low stature, but the use of the editorial "we" as frequently as if there was a dozen of them, and each of them as big as Daniel Lambert or the Kentucky Giant. Strange to say, there were at that time men in office who were not a particle more honest than they should be—a thing which probably never happened before, and never will again. Squire S— felt all the patrotism of a son of '76' and poured out grape and canister against the public abuses. This stirred up a hornet's nest about his ears; but, as there was no reply and he enjoyed his warlike propensities in security.

At length he published an article more severe and cutting against malfeasance in office than any that had preceded it, in fact, though pointed at no one individual in particular, it was a scorcher. Some three or four days after, he was sitting in his editorial office, which was about a quarter of a mile from the said printing establishment. His pen was busy with a paragraph, when the door was opened without much ceremony, and in stalked a man about six feet in his stockings. He asked "Are you S—, the proprietor of this paper!", Thinking he had found a new patron, the little man, with one of his blandest smiles, answered in the affirmative. The stranger deliberately drew the last number from his pocket, and pointing to an article against rogues in office, told the affrighted editor it was intended for him. It was in vain that S— protested that he had never heard of him before. The wrath of the visitor rose to fever heat, and, from, being so long restrained, boiled over with double fury.—He gave the choice, either to publish a very laudible recantation, or take a flogging on the spot.

He agreed to retract, and as the visitor insisting on writing it himself, he sat down at the desk. Squire S—— made an excuse to go to the printing-office, with a promise that he would be back in season to sign it as soon as it was finished. S—— had hardly gone fifty yards when he encountered a man who inquired where Squire S—'s office was, and if he was at home. Suspecting that he was on the same errand as the other suitor, he pointed to the office, and told him he would find the editor within, writing a most abusive article against office-holders. This was sufficient. The eyes of the comer flashed fire. He rushed into the office, and assailed the stranger with the epithets, "liar," "scoundrel," "coward," and told him he would teach him how to write. The gentleman supposing it was some bully sent there by the editor, sprang to his feet, and a fight ensued. The table was upset and smashed into kindling wood—the contents of a large jug of ink stood puddled on the floor—the chairs had their legs and backs broken beyond the skill and surgery to cure them. This seemed to inspire the combatants with still greater fury, blow following blow, with the rapidity of lightning. First one was kicked on the floor, then the other, each taking it in turn pretty equally. The ink on the floor had found its way to their faces, till both of them cut the most ridiculous figure imaginable. The noise and uproar was tremendous.—The neighbors ran to the door, and exclaimed that two negroes were fighting in Squire S—'s office. None dared separate them. At length the circumstance became known, and the next day, hardly able to sit on horseback, their heads bound up, they started homewards, convinced that they had obtained very little satisfaction from their attempt to flog an editor.

A BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.—Labor! Why man of idleness, labor has rocked you in the cradle, and nourished your pampered life, without it, the woven silks and wool upon your back would be in the silk worms nest, and the fleeces in the shepherds fold. For the meanest thing that ministers to human want, save the air of heaven, man is indebted to toil; and even the air, by God's wise ordination, is breathed with labor. It is only the drones who toil not, who infest the hive of the active, like masses of corruption and decay. The lords of the earth are workingmen, who build or cast down at their will, and who retort the sneer of the "soft headed," by pointing to their trophies, wherever art, science, civilization and humanity are known. Work on, men of toil, thy royalty is yet to be acknowledged, as labor rises onward to the highest throne of power.

PICKING UP THOUGHTS.—Boys, you have heard of blacksmiths who have become mayors and magistrates of towns and cities, and men of great wealth and influence. What was their secret of success? Why they picked up pins and nails in the streets and carried them home in the pockets of their waistcoats. Now, you must pick up thoughts in the same way, and fill your mind with them; and they will grow into other thoughts almost while you are asleep The world is full of thoughts, and you will find them strewed everywhere in your path.—Elihu Burritt.

"I'm glad your head isn't on my shoul- man said to the fellow that was sung.

Rules of Politeness.

Many otherwise polite individuals are guilty of a violation of the rules of politeness—i. e. of not answering letters. It is an erroneous impression, pretty generally labored under, that it is not necessary to acknowledge the receipt of every letter. Now it must be generally conceded that a question couched in becoming language, deserves, if not requires an answer. The principle herein involved bears a striking analogy to that of answering a letter, for generally they are either affirmative, interrogative or narrative, and in each case meriting some sign of recognition. There is no excuse for silence, unless the subject of the writer is beneath our notice. Silence, under any other circumstances, may often be constructed into want of friendship, want of politeness, as an evidence of hostile contempt, or at least into an indifference to our feelings.

It is the privilege of every person, paying another the compliment of a visit, to expect reciprocity. "One good turn deserves another," is an old trite saying; and, certes, nothing can be more consistent with our own respect and that for others, than to manifest a proper estimate of what is justly due. It is not necessary—nay, not even possible—to live with every one on a footing of intimacy of even sociability, nor is it all expected that we would waste our time in unprofitable visits, but it is required that we should return one lent us for that purpose. though it may be considered the first and last, without the intention of a renewal.

There is nothing so truly blamable as the excess to which the opening of that safety valve of our mirth is often carried in company. No lady who entertains the wish to be considered sensible, intelligent or polite, will ever allow her laughter to border on the boisterous, or indulge in such an unguarded petection of our neighbor's ridicule. To a sensitive mind there is nothing more galling, more mortifying than to imagine oneself the object of such ebulition.

It often happens that ladies will burst into a laughter after having scrutinized the appearance of a stanger, though that laughter may have no reference to the victim writhing under its infliction. We all know that the smiling countenance of a lady drops cheerfulness into hearts but a moment before filled with sorrow, but laughter, is at best a silly display of one's ridicule.

The habit of whispering in company so often indulged in by young ladies in the presence of friends or stranger, savors strongly of rudeness, if not gross ignorance. The vainest being the most conceited, or the most perfect, suffers alike under that emancipation from the government of true politeness.

We cannot help, though perfect we may imagine ourselves, to consider our humble self the theme of a merry whisper, and the pain rankling in our wounded self-love leaves a thorn which sooner or later will sting the aggressors.

The Good Natured Countryman at the Theatre.

Some few years since, I witnessed rather a strange scene in Shakespear's beautiful tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet:" it was at one of the Western Theatres. The piece had passed well without interruption, until the last scene. The character of Romeo was excellently enacted, and loudly applauded. The very model of the lover was before the tomb of the Capulets, gazing upon the motionless form of her who had so attracted his soul, and meditating upon committing an act which would sent his spirit to that undiscovered country where he had supposed Juliet's had gone. Just as he exclaimed "Here's to love!" and at the same time raised the vial which contained the poison to his lips, a stalwart young countryman jumped upon the stage, seized him, dashed the vial from his hand, crushing it to atoms, and yelling:

"Yer darnd fool, she ain't dead! Only been takin' sleepin' medicine. Didn't you get the parson's letter?"

"Sirrah?" growled the enraged tragedian, while the whole house fairly shook with laughter.

"Why, yer gal ain't dead, I tell ye.—The way it was, they wanted to make Julie to marry that chap thar," pointing to Paris, "whose business you've just settled, but I tell you Julie was spunk—she got her back right up, and vowed she wouldn't do it, even if she war living in the vault the ghost of the other fellow whom you kilt she'd dash her brains out with the bones of some of her dead cousins. Wal, her spunk war up, and she took the stuff the parson fixed, as she could play possum till you got home. That's the way it war," replied the countryman, giving the desperate lover a tremendous poke in the ribs with his elbow, and at the same time loosing his hold.

"Hell's ourses on the fellow!" muttered the raving tragedian, as he stalked behind the scenes.

"Wal, now," said the countryman, fronting the audience, if that ain't a little the dod darned meanest cuss I ever did see I hope to be swowed. That's all the thanks I git for stopping him from pizinin' himself. Hope to be tarnley smashed if ever I go to interfere again when a feller wants to murder himself, he continued, as he clamered back to his seat, just in time to prevent his upper story from coming in contact with the courtain as it descended.

"Who murdered Downie?"

ABOUT the end of the eighteenth century, whenever any student of the Marischal College, Aberdeen, incurred the displeasure of the humbler citizens, he was assailed with the question, "Who murdered Downie?" Reply and rejoinder generally brought on a collision between "town and gown;" although the young gentlemen were accused of what was chronologically impossible. People having a right to be angry at being stigmatised as murderers, when their accusers have probability on their side; but the "taking off" of Downie occurred when the gownsmen, so maligned, were in swaddling clothes.

But there was a time, when to be branded as an accomplice in the slaughter of Richard Downie, made the blood run to the cheek of many a youth, and sent him home to his books, thoughtful and subdued.—Downie was sacrist or janitor at Marischal College. One of his duties consisted in securing the gate by a certain hour; previous to which all the students had to assemble in the common hall, where a Latin prayer was delivered by the principal.—Whether, in discharging this function, Downie was more rigid than his predecessor in office, or whether he became stricter in the performance of it at one time than another, cannot now be ascertained; but there can be no doubt that he closed the gate with austere punctuality, and that those who were not in the common hall within a minute of the prescribed time, were shut out, and were afterwards reprimanded and fined by the principal and professors. The students became irritated as this strictness, and took every petty means of annoying the sacrist; he, in his turn, applied the screw in other points of academic routine, and a fierce war soon began to rage between the collegians and the humble functionary. Downie took care that in all his proceedings he kept within the strict letter of the law; but his opponents were not so careful, and the decisions of the rulers were uniformly against them, and in favour of Downie.—Reprimands and fines having failed in producing due subordination, rustication, suspension, and even the extreme sentence of expulsion had to be put in force; and, in the end law and order prevailed. But a secret and deadly grudge continued to be entertained against Downie. Various schemes of revenge were thought of.

Downie was, in common with teachers and taught, enjoying the leisure of the short New Year's vacation—the pleasure being no doubt greatly enhanced by the annoyances to which he had been subjected during the recent bickerings—when, as he was one evening seated with his family in his official residence at the gate, a messenger informed him that a gentleman at a neighboring hotel wished to speak with him. Downie obeyed the summons, and was ushered from one room into another, till at length he found himself in a large apartment hung with black, and lighted by a solitary candle. After waiting for some time in this strange place, about fifty figures, also dressed in black, and with black masks on their faces, presented themselves They arranged themselves in be form a Court and Downie, pale with terror was given to understand that he was about to be put on his trial.

A judge took his seat on the bench; a clerk and public prosecutor sat below; a jury was empanelled in front: and witnesses and spectators stood around. Downie at first set down the whole affair as a joke; but the proceeding were conducted with such persistent gravity, that, in spite of himself, he began to believe in the genuine mission of the awful tribunal. The clerk read an indictment, charging him with conspiring against the libertics of the students; witnesses were examined in due form, the public prosecutor addressed the jury; and the judge summed up.

"Gentlemen," said Downie, "the toke has been carried far enough—it is getting late, and my wife and family will be getting anxious about me. If I have been too strict with you in time past, I am sorry for it, and I assure you I will take more care in future."

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge without paying the slightest attention to this appeal, "consider your verdict; and, if you wish to retire, do so."

The jury retired. During their absence the most profound silence was observed; and except renewing the solitary candle that burns beside the judge, there was not the slightest movement.

The jury returned and recorded a verdict of GUILTY.

The judge solemnly assumed a huge black cap, and addressed the prisoner.

"Richard Downie! The jury have unanimously found you guilty of conspiring against the just liberty and immunities of the students of Marischal College. You have wantonly provoked and insulted those inoffensive lieges for some months, and your punishment will assuredly be condign. You must prepare for death. In fifteen minutes the sentence of the Court will be carried into effect."

The judge placed his watch on the bench. A block, an axe, and a bag of sawdust were brought into the centre of the room. A figure more terrible than any that had yet appeared came forward, and prepared to act the part of doomster

It was now past midnight, there was no sound audible save the ominous ticking of the judge's watch. Downie became more and more alarmed.

"For any sake, gentlemen," said the terrified man, "let me home. I promise that you never again shall have cause for complaint."

"Richard Downie," remarked the judge, "you are vainly wasting the few moments that are left you on earth. You are in the hands of those who must have your life.—No human power can save you. Attempt to utter one cry, and you are seized, and your doom completed before you can utter another Every one here present has sworn a solemn oath never to reveal the proceedings of this night; they are known to none but ourselves; and when the object for which we have met is accomplished, we shall dispurse unknown to any one Prepare, then, for death; other five minutes will be allowed, but no more."

The unfortunate man, in an agony of deadly terror raved and shricked for mercy; but the avengers paid no heed to his cries. His fevered trembling lips then moved as if in silent prayer; for he felt that the brief space between him and eternity was but as a few more tickings of that ominous watch.

"Now!" exclaimed the judge.

Four persons stepped forward and seized Downie, on whose features a cold clammy sweat had burst forth. They bared his neck, and made him kneel before the block.

"Strike!" exclaimed the judge.

The executioner struck the axe on the floor; an assistant on the opposite side lifted at the same moment a wet towel, and struck it across the neck of the recumbent criminal. A loud laugh announced that the joke had at last come to an end.

But Downie responded not to the uproarious merriment—they laughed again—but still he moved not—they lifted him, and Downie was dead!

Fright had killed him as effectually as if the axe of a real headsman had severed his head from his body.

It was a tragedy to all. The medical students tried to open a vein, but all was over; and the conspirators had now to bethink themselves of safety. They now in reality swore an oath among themselves; and the affrighted young men, carrying their disguises with them, left the body of Downie lying in the hotel. One of their number told the landlord that their entertainment was not yet quite over, and that they did not wish the individual that was left in the room to be disturbed for some hours. This was to give them all time to make their escape.

Next morning the body was found.—Judicial inquiry was instituted, but no satisfactory result could be arrived at. The corpse of poor Downie exhibited no mark of violence internal or external. The ill will between him and the students was known; it was also known that the students had hired apartments in the hotel for a theatrical representation—that Downie had been sent for by them; but beyond this nothing was known. No noise had been heard, and no proof of murder could be adduced. Of two hundred students at the college, who could point out the guilty or suspect fifty? Moreover, the students were scattered over the city, and the magistrates themselves had many of their own families amongst the number, and it was not desirable to go into the affair too minutely.—Downie's widow and family were provided for—and his slaughter remained a mystery; until, about fifteen years after its occurrence, a gentleman on his death bed disclosed the whole particulars, and avowed himself to have belonged to the obnoxious class of students who murdered Downie.

"I have paid a visit to the sacred spot where I drew my first breath—to the house in which I was born—and have rambled over the meadows and fields where I alternately toiled and frolicked away my early days. The house still stands, but its former inmates are gone—all gone! The beloved parents sleep in the dust—the brothers and sisters are scattered abroad, the old barn is still there; and the noble elm in front, in whose shade I have so often reposed, still extends its wide branches over the surrounding earth. But the 'loved ones' were not there; and, oh, how lonely and melancholy was this once joyous home! 'Twas too much. I left with a heavy heart. I visited the old grave yard on 'the hill,' and knelt by the grave of my ancestors. The green grass grows luxuriantly over their graves, and they seem to 'sleep well.' I wandered among the tombs of my departed friends—the companions and school-fellows of my youth—and read with mournful interest, from the cold stone, the simple but affecting record of their early doom.—'Twenty five years had rolled away since I last visited that 'Old Grave Yard,' and how startling the changes that had taken place! What a lesson of wisdom does such a scene inculcate? I felt 'twas good to be there.' I have also roamed in solitude over the familiar mountains and hills of my native town, and when worn with fatigue, have, as I was wont to do in boyhood, rested my weary limbs on the green sward beneath the wide spread oak of the valleys. I gazed with new and increased veneration upon the majestic waterfalls on which I had so often gazed before; have bathed in the same limpid 'pond, where I so often bathed in my youth, and have paid my devotion to the high hills, where, of a cold winter's night, when the earth was covered with snow and the moon shone brightly in the heavens, I used to engage in the indescribably amusing exercise of 'sliding down the hill.' Oh, how pleasant it is to re-visit the scenes of childhood and youth!"

Foreign Items per Pacific—The most interesting news brought by the Steamer Pacific which arived at New York on monday, is from France. The long looked for Empire is now, undoubtedly at hand, Louis Napolen returned to Paris on the 16th and was received more like an Emperor than a Prince President.

Splendid triumphal arches were erected on which were inscriptions such as the following: "God Protect the Emperor;"—"To Napoleon III. Emperor, the Savior of modern Civilization" &c.

The Prince entered the city on horseback, followed by troops, and by an immense crowd shouting Vive Napoleon III.

The retirement of Mr. de Persigny is again spoken of. He is to have a high appointment in the new imperial household.

The 25th of November, instant, has been appointed by Gov. Hunt, as a day of Thanksgiving and prayer in this State.

The Battle—The Defeat.

The result of 1840 is reversed with this difference; that was the triumph of principle, which resulted in the tariff of 1842—this is the triumph of Free Trade, of foreign over domestic labor, of a non-entity over a man whose deeds stand out in American history in letters of living light, of external expansion over internal development, of the spirit of war, aggression and aggrandizement, over the conservative principles of the patriots of the Revolution, of Great Britain over her mortal foe, of Austria over the friends of rational Liberty, of Fillibusters, rowdies and mobocracy over the Republican sentiment of the Union, of a combination of Free Soil, old Hunkerism and secession over a National party. Such were some of the influences which have given to the democracy a victory which will prove as short and as inglorious, as our defeat is disastrous, and complete.

Masonic.—Ausable River Lodge, No. 149, of Free and Accepted Masons, of this place, celebrated the centennial anniversary of the initiation of Gen. George Washington into the ancient and honorable Fraternity, on the 4th inst. The procession formed immediately after the arrival of our brethren from Burlington, under the direction of Oliver Keese, Marshal, and proceeded, headed by the Clintonville Brass Band, to the Baptist Church, where P. C. Tucker, Esq., Grand Master of Vt., the Orator of the day, made a thrilling and learned speech that was worthy of his own great reputation as a profound masonic scholar, and of the occasion. The speaker brought to bear an array of facts which he conclusively established, clearly proving the orthodox masonic faith of that great and good man, who will be pointed to through all time as the brightest light in the galaxy of worthies that grace the pages of our masonic history. We were sorry, on their own account, that there were not a greater number of our citizens present, as they could not fail of being interested in a speech so pregnant with historical information of the Father of his country, in connection with that Institution he loved so well, and which he served so faithfully for a period of more than half a century.

After the Address the brethren re-formed and proceeded to the Ausable House, where a most sumptuous dinner was provided by its gentlemanly proprietor, J. W. Reynolds. For variety and neatness the tables would compare favorably with any city hotel—every thing was in "apple pie order," and we undertake to say that for attention to the wants of his guests, gentlemanly deportment and urbanity of manners, he is unsurpassed. After dinner toasts were given and pertinent speeches made by brothers Barton, Tucker, Tarbell, Richardson and Follett. At 5 o'clock, P. M. our brethren from Burlington took their leave, when the meeting broke up in the best of feeling. † Congressional.

The election of Hon. G. A. Simmons is a result which does honor to all concerned as he will honor the place which he is to occupy. He will be in a minority of talent, and patriotism. Much credit is due to those democrats who threw off the shackles of party, and voted from principle, and for superior moral, and intellectual worth. His election is a source of sincere congratulation among all parties, and all classes. We point with pride to his vote in Essex County as a just rebuke of the despicable means used to cause his defeat. To us personally his election is a sufficient recompense for all the toil of the campaign.—May he live long in the continued enjoyment of the confidence of an admiring constituency.

No You Don't.—The editor of the Northern Gazette says, election being over he shall "lose sight" of us. No doubt, looking at the result about here, he would be glad to "lose sight" of us, but we intend to stick to him like the nightmare. It is true that the course of that editor is such as no honorable man would condescend to, and as a general rule, we should not take further notice of him, but as he chooses to play puppy, we deem it our duty to chastise him till he abandons his tricks.

Overborne but not vanquished.—Scott was overborne, and taken prisoner at Queenstown in the very outset of his military career, but his release was the signal of a series of victories, which astonished the world. So it will be with whigs now and such is our faith in Scott and the gratitude of the American people, that we believe the time will come, when he will be wafted into the Presidential chair by acclamation. Beaten once in his military career, it is proper that he should be in politics, but the return tide will be his triumph and that will be after the Conquest of Cuba, and Canada, which are to be the fruits of the next four years! Whigs, therefore, furl, but do not strike their colors.

Clinton and Franklin.—Returns from these counties are incomplete. Reports vary from 250 to 450 each, dem. We shall be able to give them next week.—There is no doubt of the election of Mr. Simmons to Congress, and of Mr. Hoyle, Whig, Assembly, in Clinton.

To the Whig Electors of the County of Essex.

The political contest is now over, and we have the consolation of having done our duty, our whole duty and nothing but our duty, by an effort worthy of all praise. We have sustained the men of our choice and the Principles for which Whigs contended. We have elected by large majorities, the Candidates Nominated by the Whigs of the Co. We have carried as far as we were concerned the National, State, Cogressional, and County Nominations, against our opponents and against the mighty dollar.—We claimed a Legitimate Victory. We acknowledge a debt of gratitude to our Democratic friends who came up to the mark and aided Mr. Simmons in particular and others in general from principle. It looks well for Old Essex. The palmy days of Locofocoism are past and gone from among us. The wire brings us the sad news that Gen. Winfield Scott has for the first time been defeated, and that Gen. Franklin Pierce has been Elected to the highest post of honor known in the land. With him prevails the doctrine of Free Trade. We bow in submission. We are bound to obey the voice of the Majority. Let us then hope for the best. If we get the relief we need let us give him and his administration the praise.

E. F. WILLIAMS,
C. C. C. C.

Elizabethtown, Nov. 4, 1852.

Neglected Friends.—Among these are correspondents, our Agricultural friends in Clinton and Essex Counties, and some personal friends, who had articles on exhibition, the survey of the County by Mr Watson, our advertising friends, the Keeseville Academy, and its Lyceum, our worthy little cotemporary the Keeseville Sentinel, conducted by the Students of the Academy, Ladies Book, Graham's Magazine Blackwood and the Reviews, Whig Review, Knickerbocker, business friends &c., &c. These shall be attended to in due time.

To Mr. Battey of the Union Nurseries we are indebted for a fine basket of assorted fruit. It is so long since we have forgotten the varieties, but we shall never forget that they had a most delicious [illegible]. Now is the time to transp[illegible] Battey's advertisemen[illegible]

Look Ahead.

We trust whigs will profit by the experience of the past. Though dearly bought the lesson of this defeat will work out our future success. We have already ceased to mourn the result. The very next six months will see the democracy environed in difficulties more than those which beset the whigs after the Election of Harrison, and with a like result. The whigs who survive this defeat will be "good men and true." Bickerings will cease, contentions at an end, jealousies appeased. In the next Congress will be a band of as able, and patriotic whigs as ever consulted over the destinies of the party, and the country. They will be there from all parts of the country and they will send forth an appeal which will again rally the whig party to victory.

Whigs of Essex County.—You have done your duty, and your whole duty.—Had others been as faithful there would have been a whig Administration for the next four years. But let us not repine, and whatever others may do, let us not indulge in any reflections, which shall open past controversies. We have worked together in good faith, in honor, and in local success. Let nothing again divide us.—Let us "sink or swim, survive, or perish" together. Be not hasty in remarks, or vows or committals, but keep cool and await the future in confidence.

"It is darkest just before day."

Religious Sentiments of Mr. Webster.

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

On one occasion, when seated in the drawing-room with Mr. and Mrs. Ely, Mr. Webster laid his hand on a copy of the Scriptures, saying with great emphasis, "This is the book!" This lead to a conversation on the importance of the Scriptures; and the too frequent neglect of the study of the Bible by gentlemen of the legal profession, their pursuits in life leading them to the almost exclusive study of works having reference to their profession. Mr. Webster said, "I have read through the entire Bible many times. I now make a practice to go through it once a year. It is the book of all others for lawyers as well as for divines; and I pity the man that cannot find in it a rich supply of thought, and of rules for his conduct, it fits man for life—it prepares him for death!"

The conversation then turned upon sudden deaths: and Mr. Webster adverted to the then recent death of his brother, who expired suddenly at Concord, N. H. "My brother," he continued, "knew the importance of the Bible truths. The Bible led him to prayer, and prayer was his communion with God. On the day on which he died he was engaged in an important cause in the Court then in session. But this cause, important as it was, did not keep him from his duty to his God; he found time for prayer, for on the desk which he had just left was found a prayer written by him on that day, which for fervent piety, a devotedness to his heavenly Master, and for expressions of humility, I think was never excelled."

What Mrs Smith said.—"Saint Agatha! not been out of the city this summer?"

"No: Jones said he couldn't afford it."

"My dear innocent Abigail!! Mr. Jones smokes his forty nine cigars a day as usul, don't he?"

"Yes."

"Well, put that and that together! Just so Smith told me—'couldn't afford it.' I didn't dispute the point. It was to much trouble.—I smiled just as sweetly at him, as if I didn't know it was all humbug: but I very quietly went into my boudoir, 'and despatched a note to the jewel of a doctor ——saying that I should be taken violently ill about the time Smith came home to dinner, and shouldn't probably recover, till after a trip to Saratoga or Niagara, or some of those quiet places. Well he is known as a keen briar and when Smith sent for him, he came in and found me in a state of foreordained exhaustion, in the hands of my maid Libby. He felt my pulse, looked wise and oraculars, and said I 'must have instant change of air.' Of course I objected, declared I never could bear to be moved was quite entirely run down, &c. Doctor said he wouldn't be answerable for the consequence,' and finally to oblige Mr. Smith, I gave in! Understand? Nothing like a little diplomacy. Always use the checkrein, my dear if you want to start Jones off in a new direction. Men are a little contrary, that's all. They'd be perfect treasures, every mother's son of them, if it wasn't for that.—Fanny Fern.

Its Effect.—As a Whig we are more devotedly so to day than at any previous moment of our life. The influences which have defeated the whig party we must ever oppose, whether in success, or defeat.—Such is undoubtedly the feeling of every true whig. To such we extend the hand of fellowship and vow eternal devotion to whig principles. They are right, and will prevail.

The Naturalized Vote.—We cannot permit this election to pass off without a slight tribute to this class of voters consisting of Irish, German and French, who stood up faithfully shoulder to shoulder with the most devoted whigs, against the allurements, temptations, and misrepresentations of the false democracy. It is worthy of especial notice that they sought to know the truth, and voted understandingly. Such men make good citizens and good whigs.

Epidemic.—Gen. Clark of the Burlington Free Press says, the whigs there on the receipt of the news of the election were taken with a sudden "pain in the bowels."

☞ Rev. Mr. Eaton will preach a fu[illegible]eral sermon on the death of Daniel Web[illegible]ster to-morrow afternoon.

A Setter.—A raw boy, coming into a printing office to learn the business, the foreman asked the question:—"Have you ever set any?" meaning type of course.—"Set! reckon I kin; haven't I set all our old hens, and didn't every one on 'em hatch out every egg put 'under 'em, except old Speckle, that went off and left her nest—consarn her old picter!" "You'll do," said the foreman. "I don't want you to set hens, but to set at that stand." "Waal that's square; you want me to set at a stand, like them set of fellers picking up them little jigamarees, do you? Waal, here goes." John went to work, and "learnt his letters" at the case, until he could compose and punctuate correctly—so that he is now a first rate setter and pointer.

☞ Brazil and the United States.—The Journal de Commercio, published at Rio Janeiro, of Sept. 14, contains a very readable account of an excursion of their Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Brazil, on board the American propeller City of Pittsburg, that vessel having stopped at that port while on her way from New York to San Francisco. Nearly all the Ministers of the Empire and a large number of naval officers in the Brazilian service, were on board. Many ladies of the Court were also on board. The excursion appears to have been one of great pleasure to their Majesties, who were delighted with everything they saw, and particularly with the attentions of the jolly tars.

News!—According to the best of our information and belief. Vermont, and Essex County are whig! The rest of the Union has gone for "King and that other feller! So, whigs might as well be packing up as the Salt River boat loaded with democracy is coming down, and will be along soon. We would just say to the democracy, however, while passing that we should have given no quarter, and ask none. So throw your banners to the breeze and run out the big gun, but remember that "we meet again."

One Bright Spot.—In all this glorious Union there is no brighter spot to a whig eye than the good, old, glorious, ever faithful Essex county. All honor and praise to her indomitable whigs. They fought nobly, faithfully, every man of them. Old Essex—"there she stands—behold her"!

A Vile Slander.—The Albany papers have put the whig majority in Essex co. at 400! Whigs here feel indignant at such a report. Will those papers please make the amende honorable? ☞ If they wish to move up to this county they can make an application and it will be duly considered!

No Stomach for it.—Democrats have been so completely thrashed about here they have no disposition to exult over the election of Pierce. All the spoils they get will be as a matter of "grace," and not by merit, which is anything but consoling.

Our Candy-date has retired. He says he can't afford to suck candy any more unless some benevolent gentleman wishing to be President gives him a cent.

Those Banners.—We beg leave to remind whigs that Essex County can take care of all such banners as become useless by the late disaster!

Married,

At Moriah, October 29th, by Rev. C. Ransom, Mr. Thomas Whelan of Troy N. Y. to Miss Alida M. Stephens, of Utica New York.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices.

Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters No 5 Beaver-street ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, i[illegible] that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres, Pimples and Scury Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender skin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5 000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating these diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in a secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK. Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASES, or secret habits, with but one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timid persons, take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up, flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening, side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Geddes's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour.

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batchelder's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—Low, ence, used for sawing wood for locomotives [illegible]. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

MARRIAGE HAPPINESS AND COMPETENCE.

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life at an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefited by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the full consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

MELANCHOLY AND STARTLING

To behold the sickness and suffering endured by many a wife for many years, from causes simple and controllable, easily remedied—or better still,—not incurred, if every

WIFE AND MOTHER

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (within the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By becoming in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, 50 cts

[ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.]

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE; WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is so conducive to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

SHERIFF SALE.

By virtue of an execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York to me directed and delivered, I have seized and taken all the interest which John H. Morhous and David W. Morhous, had on the 15th day of March, 1852, or which they may have since acquired of in and to all that certain tract or parcel of Land situate, lying and being in a patent of land originally granted to John Conoly, on the west of the River Bouquet, and bounded as follows: begining about the distance of 27 chains and 6 links west of said River Boquet in the South line of said patent thence west in the patent line 50 chains 86 links, thence north at right angles 19 chains 66 links: thence East at right Angles 50 chains 86 links, thence South in a straight line to the place of beginning exactly one hundred acres of land subject to the reservations contained in the original letters patent, the courses all running as the needle pointed in 1764. The said Lands above described are lots No. 3 and 8 containing each 50 acres of Land. Also one other certain piece or parcel of land Bounded as follows, to wit: Beginning at the Northwest corner of lot No. 5 in Conollys patent at a beach tree Marked 5 and 6, thence west 25 chains 43 links to a stake, thence South 19 chains 66 links to a stake thence East 25 chains 43 links to a bench of stones on a high ledge of rocky land, thence north 19 chains 66 links to the place of begining, courses all run as the needle pointed in year 1764, containing 50 acres of land being Lot No. 6. Also one other certain piece or parcel of land bounded as follows; to wit beginning at a Patent of land, originally granted to John Conally in the town of Willsboro, the first acre is to begin at the north east corner of the lot on which J. H. Morhouse now resides and is laid out in a square form, the 2d lot to begin at the North West corner of the above mentioned acre and runs on north line or farm so far west that a line to be run South East to the centre of the highway, including all the land between the North line aforesaid and the centre of the highway as will make one acre of land so as to contain 2 acres in the whole.

Also all the equal undivided half of that certain lot of land lying in the town of Willsborough, known and distinguished as lot No. 11 of the back lots in Conolly's patent, containing 50 acres more or less, said lands all lying and being in the county of Essex and State aforesaid, all of which I shall expose to sale at publick vendue at the Adirondac Hotel in the village of Keeseville in said county on the 22d day of November 1852 at 12 o'clock at noon of that day.

Dated at Keeseville this 9th day of Oct, 1852.

A Nation's Loss.

BY F. J. COOK.

Why sounds you tolling bell so slow?
Deep booming through the air;
Why hangs our nation's banner so,
With sable edge, and darkened brow?
And silent sadness there?
Why is the sorrow of our hearts,
Fast growing more and more?
A nation's strength, a people's guide,
A WEBSTER IS NO MORE!

Why is yon mourning, weeping crowd
Of rich, and high, and low?
Why runs there through our nation proud
A murmur long, and deep, and loud
Of misery, and woe?
Why swells it through our mighty heart,
And breaks from shore to shore?
Our mighty leader, strength and chief
GREAT WEBSTER IS NO MORE!

Cold is the brow that once with life
And god-like action shone,
Silent that tongue which once in strife
With eloquence and reason rife,
Stood forth for truth alone.
The silvery accents of that tongue
Are heard not as of yore.
The words on which the millions hung
THE STATESMAN IS NO MORE.

Great man! Bold Champion of truth!
How few we have like thee,
Thy praise shall be our nations pride,
Thy pathway be our statesmen's guide,
To all eternity!
And when with troubles girt around,
Our nation looks to thee;
Then shall we miss thy cheering voice,
THOU FREEMAN OF THE FREE!

Keeseville, Nov. 10th, 1852.

Miscellany.

Unpublished Letters of Mr. Webster.

WASHINGTON, March 13, 1852.

"JOHN TAYLOR: I am glad to hear from you again, and to learn that you are well, and that your teams and tools are ready for spring's work, whenever the weather will allow you to begin. I sometimes read books on farming: and I remember that a very sensible old author advises farmers 'to plow naked and sow naked.' By this he means that there is no use in beginning spring's work till the weather is warm, that a farmer may throw aside his winter clothes and roll up his sleeves. Yet he says we ought to begin as early in the year as possible. He wrote some very pretty verses on this subject, which, as far as I remember, run thus:

'While yet the spring is young, while earth unbinds
The frozen bosom to the western winds:
While mountain snows dissolve against the sun,
And streams, yet new, from precipies run,
Even in this early dawning of the year
Produce the plow, and yoke the sturdy steer;
And goad him till he smoke beneath his toil,
And the bright share is buried in the soil.'

"John Taylor, when you read these lines do you not see the snow melting, and the little streams beginning to run down the slopes of your Punch brook pasture, and the new grass starting and growing in the trickling water, all green, bright and beautiful? And do you not see your Durham oxen smoking from heat and perspiration as they draw along your great breaking up plough, cutting and turning over the tough sward in your meadow in the great field? The name of this sensible author is Virgil; and he gives farmers much other advice, some of which you have been following all the winter without even knowing that he had given it.

'But when cold weather, heavy snow and rain,
The laboring farmer in his house restrain,
Let him forecast his work, with timely care,
Which else is huddled when the skies are fair;
Then let him make the sheep, and whet the shining share,
Or hollow trees for boats; or number o'er
His sacks; or measure his increasing store;
Or sharpen stakes, and mend each rake and fork.
So to be ready, in good time to work—
Visit his crowded barns at early morn,
Look to his granary, and shell his corn:
Give a good breakfast to his numerous kine,
His shivering poultry and his fattening swine."

And Mr. Virgil says some other things which you understand up at Franklin as well as ever he did:

'In chilling winter swains enjoy their store,
Forget their hardships, and recruit for more;
The farmer to full feasts invites his friends,
And what he got with pains, with pleasure spends;
Draws chairs around the fire, and tells once more
Stories which often have been told before;
Spreads a clean table with things good to eat,
And adds some moistening to his fruit and meat;
They praise his hospitality, and feel
They shall sleep better after such a meal!'

"John Taylor, by the time you have got through this you have read enough. The sum of all is, be ready for your spring's work as soon as the weather becomes warm enough, and then put your hand to the plow and look not back.

DANIEL WEBSTER."

WASHINGTON, Wed. March 17, 1852

"JOHN TAYLOR: Go ahead. The heart of the winter is broken, and before the 1st day of April all your land may be plowed. Buy the oxen of Captain Marston, if you think the price fair. Pay for the hay, I send you obeck for $160, for these two objects. Put the great oxen in a condition to be turned out and fatened. You have a good horse team, and I think in addition to this, four oxen and a pair of four year old steers will do your work. If you think so, then dispose of the Stevens oxen, or unyoke them, and send them to the pasture for beef. I know not when I shall see you, but I hope before planting. If you need anything, such as guano, for instance, write to Joseph Buck, Esq., Boston, and he will send it to you.

"Whatever ground you sow or plant, see that it is in good condition. We want no pennyroyal crops. 'A little farm well tilled,' is to a farmer the next best thing to a 'little wife well willed.' Cultivate your garden. Be sure to produce sufficient quantities of useful vegetables. A man may half support his family from a good garden. Take care to keep my mother's garden in good order, even if it cost you the wages of a man to take care of it. I have sent you many garden seeds. Distribute them among your neighbors. Send them to the stores in the village that every body may have a part of them without cost. I am glad that you have chosen Mr. Pike Representative. He is a true man; but there are in New Hampshire many persons who call themselves Whigs, who are not Whigs at all, and no better than disunionists. Any man who hesitates in granting and securing to every part of the country its just and its Constitutional rights, is an enemy to the whole country.

"John Taylor if one of your boys should say that he honors his father and mother, and loves his brothers and sisters, but still insists that one of them shall be driven out of the family, what can you say of him but this, there is no real family love in him? You and I are farmers; we never talk politics; our talk is of oxen; but remember this—that any man who attempts to excite one part of the country against another, is just as wicked as he would be who should attempt to get up a quarrel between John Taylor and his neighbor, old Mr. John Sanborn, or his other neighbor, Captain Burleigh. There are some animals that live best in the fire, and there are some men who delight in heat, smoke, combustion, and even general conflagration. They do not follow the things which make for peace. They enjoy only controversy, contention and strife. Have no communion with such persons, either as neighbors or politicians. You have no more right to say that Slavery ought not to exist in Virginia, than a Virginian has to say that Slavery ought to exist in New Hampshire. This is a question left to every State to decide for itself; and if we mean to keep the States together, we must leave to every State this power of deciding for itself.

"I think I never wrote you a word before upon politics. I shall not do it again. I only say love your country, and your whole country; and when men attempt to persuade you to get into a quarrel with the laws of other States, tell them 'that you mean to mind your own business,' and advise them to mind theirs. John Taylor, you are a free man; you possess good principles; you have a large family to rear and to provide for by your labor. Be thankful to the Government which does not oppress you, which does not bear you down by excessive taxation, but which holds out to you and to yours the hope of all the blessings which liberty, industry and security may give. John Taylor, thank God morning and evening, that you were born in such a country. John Taylor, never write me another word upon politics. Give my kindest remembrance to your wife and children; and when you look from your eastern windows upon the graves of my family, remember that he who is the author of this letter must soon follow them to another world.

DANIEL WEBSTER."

[From the New York Commercial.]

We have been favored with the perusal of a letter, written by Mr. Webster to an intimate friend in this city, dated Franklin, May 8, 1846, from which we make the extract below, and which we are sure will be read at this time with unusual interest:

"I have made satisfactory arrangements respecting my house here, the best of which is that I can leave it where it is, and yet be comfortable, notwithstanding the railroad.

"This house faces due north. Its front windows look toward the river Merrimack. But then the River soon turns to the south, so that the eastern windows look towards the river also. But the river has so deepened its channel in this stretch of it, in the last fifty years, that we cannot see its waters without approaching it or going back to the higher lands behind us. The history of this change is of considerable importance in the philosophy of streams. I have observed it practically, and know something of the theory of the phenomenon; but I doubt whether the world will ever be benefitted, either by my learning or my observation, in this respect.

"Looking out of the east windows, at this moment, (2 p. m.,) with a beautiful sun just breaking out, my eyes sweeps a rich and level field of 100 acres. At the end of it, or a third of a mile off, I see plain marble grave stones, designating the places where repose my father, my mother, my brother Joseph, my sisters, Mehitable, Abigail, and Sarah; good Scripture names inherited from their Puritan ancestors.

"My father! Ebenezer Webster!—born at Kingston, in the lower part of the State, in 1789—the handsomest man I ever saw except my brother, Ezekiel, who appeared to me, and so does he now seem to me, the very finest human form that I ever laid eyes on. I saw him in his coffin—a white forehead—a tinged cheek—a complexion as clear as heavenly light!—But where am I straying?

"The grave has closed upon him, as it has on all my brothers and sisters. We shall soon be all to gether. But this is melancholy—and I leave it. Dear, dear kindred blood, how I love you all.

"This fair field is before me—I could see a lamb on any part of it. I have ploughed it, and raked it, and hoed it, but I never mowed it. Some how, I could never learn to hang a scythe! I had not wit enough. My brother Joe used to say that my father sent me to college in order to make me equal to the rest of the children!

"Of a hot day in July—it must have been one of the last years of Washington's administration, I was making hay, with my father, just where I see a remaining elm tree, about the middle of the afternoon.—The Hon. Abial Foster, M. C., who lived in Canterbury, six miles off, called at the house, and came into the field to see my father. He was a worthy man, college learned, and had been a minister, but was not a person of any considerable natural powers. My father was his friend and supporter. He talked a while in the field, and went on his way. When he was gone my father called me to him, and we sat down beneath the elm, on a hay cock.—He said, "My son, that is a worthy man—he is a member of Congress—he goes to Philadelphia, and gets six dollars a day, while I toil here. It is because he had an education which I never had. If I had had his early eduction, I should have been in Philadelphia in his place. I came near it, as it was. But I missed it, and now I must work here." "My dear father," said I, "you shall not work. Brother and I will work for you, and wear our hands out, and you shall rest"—and I remember to have cried—and I cry now, at the recollection. "My child," said he, "it is of no importance to me—I now live but for my children; I could not give your elder brother the advantages of knowledge, but I can do something for you. Exert yourself—improve your opportunities—learn—learn—and when I am gone, you will not need to go through the hardships which I have undergone, and which has made me an old man before my time."

"The next May he took me to Exeter, to the Philips Exeter Academy—placed me under the tuition of it excellent preceptor, Dr. Benjamin Abbot, still living.

"My father died in April, 1806. I never left him nor forsook him. My opening an office at Buscowan was that I might be near him. I closed his eyes in this very house. He died at sixty seven years of age—after a life of exertion, toil and exposure—a private soldier, an officer, a legislator, a judge—everything that a man could be, to whom learning had never disclosed her "ample page."

"My first speech at the bar was made when he was on the bench—he never heard me a second time.

"He had in him what I recollect to have been the character of some of the old Puritans. He was deeply religious, but not sour—on the contrary, good humored, facetious—showing even in his age, with a contageous laugh, teeth, all as white as alabaster—gentle, soft, playful—and yet having a heart in him that he seemed to have borrowed from a lion. He could frown; a frown it was, but cheerfulness, good humored and smiles composed his most usual aspect. "Ever truly, your friend,

DANIEL WEBSTER."

THE NECESSITY OF LABOR.—Many people look upon the necessity man is under of earning his bread by labor as a curse. But it is evident, from the structure of the body, that exercise is not less necessary than food for the preservation of health. Those who labor are not only the most healthy, but generally the most happy part of mankind. This is peculiarly the case with those who live by the culture of the ground. The great increase of inhabitants in infant colonies, and the longevity everywhere, of such as follow agriculture, evidently prove it to be the most healthful as well as the most useful employment.

The love of activity shows itself very early in man. So strong is the principle, that a healthy youth cannot be restrained from activity. Our love of motion is surely a strong proof of its utility. It seems to be a law throughout the whole animal creation, that no creature without exercise should enjoy health, or be able to find subsistence.

Inactivity never fails to produce a universal relaxation of the solids, which disposes the body to innumerable diseases. When the solids are relaxed, neither the digestion or the secretion can be duly performed. How can persons who loll all day on easy chairs, and sleep all night on beds of down, fail to be relaxed? Nor do those much mend the matter who never stir abroad but in a coach.

Glandular obstructions generally proceed from inactivity. Those are the most obstinate maladies. So long as the liver, kidney, and other glands duly perform their functions, health is seldom much impaired; but when they fail, it is difficult to be restored.

Weak nerves are also the constant companions of inactivity. We seldom hear the laborious complain of weak nerves. This plainly points out the sources from which nervous diseases generally originate, and the means by which they may be prevented.

It is absolutely impossible to enjoy health, when the preseperation is retained in the body, it vitiates the humors, and occasions the gout, rheumatism, &c.

No piece of indolence injures the health more than the custom of lying in bed too long in the morning; the morning is undoubtedly the best time for exercise, as the air braces and strengthens the nerves.—Custom soon renders early rising agreeable, and nothing contributes more to the [illegible] vation of health.

Every person should lay himself [illegible] some necessity to take exercise. Indo[illegible] like other vices when indulged, gains ground and at length becomes agreeable.—Hence, those who are fond of exercise in the early part of life become quite averse to it afterwards. This is often the case with gouty or hypochondriac persons, and frequently renders their cases so difficult to cure.

Indolence not only occasions disease and render man useless to society, but promotes all manner of vice. The mind if not engaged in some useful pursuits, is constantly in quest of some ideal pleasures. From these sources proceed most of the miseries of mankind. Certainly man was never intended to be idle. Inactivity frustrates the very design of his creation, whereat an active life is the best and greatest preservation of health.—Oracle of Health.

To the Ladies.

☞Now is the time for convivial parties. Men flushed with triumph at the results of the election, will give entertainments at which wit, and we fear wine, will prevail. Ladies, you may, many of you—be present. Young, beautiful, accomplished, you have the power to do great good in the most excellent cause of temperance.

Shall your smile tempt, your hand point to the flowing goblet? Will you pass the soul-destroying liquid to the very lips of timid admirers? Bethink you of your future.

Wives as lovely as you ere they weded, with words of triumph leading their devotees whither they would—young creature, glad, happy, brilliant—nursed in ease, accustomed to luxury, such have tempted their own fate as you may yours. With siren songs, merry music, they held up that ruby glass: more than sang—for they looked its praise—more than asked—for they challenged its draught.

Where are they now? Many a little head-stone tells their names, and alas! many more a neglected grave mound-over which living foot has never passed, silently testif- that the broken hearted sleep there.

You know not your future, and yet perhaps you may avert, or welcome misery and disgrace by your own free will.

We want to see our young ladies possess the moral courage to refuse their countenance to this debasing practice. They know the harm it works; there is not a child but can point its little finger to some wretched drunkard—and oh! remember the children whose nature are made fiendish by the brutality of parents too degraded to honor the holy ties that bind families together.

We are aware that the great in power use this beverage—but you can control even them. Too often, with shame we say it, have they your entire sympathy. And would your firm, yet ladylike denial to partake with them, lessen you in their esteem? Never! there is a god like beauty in virtue, which while it covers its calumniator with confusion, shines into his very soul, and sweeps away the darkness of error, while he sees, as in a mirror, his own deformity.

It is a great virtue to practice strict, entire abstinence from all that can intoxicate, and as great a crime to throw temptation in the way of another, or passively yield your assent.

Think on these things, dear readers.—Boston Olive Branch.

Smoking.

"Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For 'tis their nature to."

And by that they are so much better than their illustrious masters,—for they smoke against nature.

You can't meet a gentleman (?) now-a-days, but what you would fain turn your head when he speaks to you. We often wonder what young ladies are thinking of when they tolerate the practice of smoking in their lovers! Surely, surely, they must know it. Love is very blind—he cannot see, you know; but we have never heard that he lacks the sense of smell. At any rate, friendship don't, nor as to that matter, common acquaintanceship.

O! Yankee land! thy name should be universal smokedom! Turn where we will, cigars and tobacco are pre-eminent.—Smoke, smoke, smoking!—smoking at the corners of the streets—in doorways—on the steps of the meeting-house—in the butcher's shop—the baker,s shop—the grocer's shop; in the attic, the cellar, the kitchen, the parlor; at morning, noon and night; when it rains, and when it shines; in sickness and in health; before dinner and after; by boys of six and men of sixty; by millionaires, loafers and dandies; by masters and apprentices; by editors and their—Lucifers; by black men and white men; over the breakfast, under the newspaper, before eating peaches, and after eating ice-creams—faugh!

Chew, chew, chewing! Chewing in stages and cars; in drawing-rooms, concert rooms, and exhibition rooms; at Amory Hall and the Athenæum; in printing and publishing offices; in this city and every other city; in public houses, station-houses, court houses, school houses, and meeting-houses; on birth-days, burial days, wedding days, holidays, Sundays, and all days.

O! tobacco! "Let thy devotees extol thee," but thou art an utterly contemptible, useless, demoralizing idol, and thy chief temple is in America!—Ibid.

Philosophers says that shutting the eyes makes the sense of hearing more acute. A wag suggests that this accounts for the many closed eyes that are seen in our churches on Sundays.

We waste our best years in distilling the sweetest flowers of life, into love portions, which, after all, do not immortalize, but [illegible].—Longfellow.

PROVERB.

"A woman, a dog and a walnut tree,
The more they are beaten the better they be."

"Any man who believes that, had better step into my shoes," said a little Mr. Wessel. "I suppose I'm what you call 'the head of the family,' but I shouldn't know it, if somebody didn't tell me of it.—Heigho! who'd have thought it, five and twenty years ago? Didn't I stifle a tremendous strong penchant for Diana Dix, (never smoked, I remember, for four hours after it) because I had my private suspicions she'd hold the reins, in spite of my teeth, and so I offered myself to little Susy Snow, (mistake in her name, by the way) you might have spanned her round the waist or lifted her with one hand. She never looked any body in the face when she spoke to her, and her voice was as soft as ——my brains! I declare it's unaccountable how deceitful female nature is! Never was so taken in in my life; she's a regular Vesuvius CRATER! Her will? (don't mention it!) Try to pry up the Alps with a cambric needle! If she'd only fly into a passion, I think I could venture to pluck up a little spirit; but that cool, determined, never say die look! would turn cayenne pepper to oil. It wilts me right down, like a cabbage leaf. I'd as lief faced a loaded cannon! I wish I could go out evenings: but she won't let me. Tom Jones asked me yesterday why I wasn't at Faneuil Hall the night before. I told him I had the bronchitis; HE saw through it! Sent me a pair of REINS, the next day 'said to be a certain cure!" Ah! it's very well for him to laugh, but it's no joke to me. I suppose it's time to feed that baby; Mrs. Wessel will be home pretty soon, from the 'Woman's Rights' Convention' No, I won't either; I'll give it some Paregoric, and run up garret and smoke one cigar, any how. I feel as though I couldn't look a humming-bird in the eye! Nice cigar! very nice! What a fool I am to be ordered round by a little blue-eyed woman, three feet high! I'm a very good-looking fellow, and won't stand it! That little Weasel is as much her baby as it is mine! I'm blest if it ain't! Let it squeak! good for its lungs."

"M-r. W-e-a-a-e-l!"

"Diabolus!! hem—my—dear (oh! scissors, that eye of hers!) you see, my dear (there, I won't do it again, Mrs. Weasel.) How's the Convention,' dear? carried the day, I hope? made one of your smart speeches, hey? 'Tisn't every man owns such a chain lightning wife—stand up for your rights, dear; (duce knows I darsn't!!)

FANNY FERN.

Hints for the Unmarried.

Of all the gratifications human nature can enjoy, and of all the delight it is formed to impart, none is equal to that which springs from a long tried and mutual affection. The happiness which arises from conjugal felicity is capable of withstanding the attacks of time, grows vigorous in age and animates the heart with pleasure and delight when the vital fluid can scarcely force a passage through it. No man ever prospered in the world without the consent and co-operation of his wife, let him be ever so frugal, industrious, or successful; and it avails nothing if she be unfaithful to his trust, or profusely squanders in pleasure or dissipation those sums which toil and application gained; but, if she unite in mutual endeavors, or reward his labor with an endearing smile, with what confidence will he resort either to his merchandise or farm, fly over lands, sail upon the sea, meet difficulty and encounter dangers, if he know that it is not spending his strength in vain, but that his labor will be rewarded by the sweets of home!—How delightful it is to have a friend to cheer and a companion to sooth the solitary hours of grief and pain! Solitude and disappointment enter into the history of any man's life; and he is but half provided for his voyage who finds but an associate for happy hours, while for months of darkness no sympathising friend is prepared! Prudence and foresight can neither ward off the stroke of disease, nor prevent the calamities ordained by heaven. Affluence cannot purchase release from pain, nor tenderness cool a fever in the blood, a heart ready to sympathise with tender drops of compassion, and a life that is absolutely bound up in his; and as enjoyment derives additional relish from anticipation, so misery loses the poignancy of its barb in the bosom formed for sympathetic kindness.—[Empson.

Keeseville Academy.

At a meeting of the Students Lyceum, held on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3d the following resolutions was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That a committee of two be appointed to write an account of the condition and prospects of the Keeseville Academy, together with a description of the Students Lyceum, connected with the same, and that said accounts be published in the Village papers. In accordance with which resolution we submit the following report.

C. H. DANN, } Committee.
F. J. COOK. }

After a vacation of several months caused by the resignation of Mr. I. N. GREGORY the former Principal, Keeseville Academy was again opened on the 2d of Sept. last by Messrs. C. H. Dann and G. Thayer, as associate principals, assisted by a competant corps of subordinate teachers. The encouragement of that "first day" gave an omen of success which has not failed and as yet shows no signs of failure,

Ninety seven names were registered, and in less than two weeks from that time, the number of scholars in attendance was one hundred and twenty-five; a fair proportion of whom were young people grown. Until the present time the number of pupils has been steadily increasing, and by the united efforts of scholars and teachers an unusual degree of interest has been excited in the school as well as in the community. It has been and ever will be the aim of the Instructors to impart not a superficial knowledge, but a thorough understanding and clear perfection of the first elements of science upon which all true improvement must be based. "Festina lente" is their motto and to them one reason is worth a score of rules. For the gratification of the public as well as the great benefit of the members of the school, the exercises of declamation and composition have been transferred from Wednesday afternoon to Friday Evening, and a general invitation has been and is extended to the patrons of the school and the friends of education generally, to avail themselves of the pleasure we hope they may derive from an occasional visit to the Hall of Science. The greatest possible variety will be given to these exercises by the introduction of spicy articles, letters of correspondence etc., into the papers of each week, published by the students, by occasional dialogues, original orations and the like

The Students Lyceum as its name indicates, originated primarily from that spirit of improvement and readiness in action among the Students of the Academy; but by its constitution others without the school are admited to its privileges, so that this organization is fast becoming one of much practical benefit and importance, not only to the students, but also to the young men of the village. Already have about forty of our young men and ladies manifested their desire of improvement, by joining in the support of this society; and each Tuesday evening the Lyceum Hall is crowded with the most intelligent and respectable of our citizens, to witness these exercises, which besides, the regular debate, we have endeavored to make more interesting by periodical lectures of a scientific, literary and moral character; and to enliven by written discussions, essays, and critiques, from the ladies. According to our established motto, "Perge ad majora," or "onward to greater things;" we have in view the organization of a society of a higher nature than this, and it is only the want of proper means and support, which now withholds us from the same. This Academy has been designated by the Board of regents to instruct a limited number of common school teachers gratis. These with other advantages which the Institution enjoys must recommend it to the favorable consideration of those who seek the benefit of literary association and of a thorough practical scientific or classical education

A WORD FITLY SPOKEN.—Dr. Jewett, in the course of his travels with his own horse, one day entered a country tavern, and sat down by the bar-room fire to warm his fingers. His keenly roving eye soon discovered, prominent over rows of bottles with highly colored contents, in large letters, the inscription, "No credit given here." Turning to the landlord (to whom he was personally unknown) he said, "Ah! I see that you bring your people square up to the mark here!"

"Yes," replied the landlord, "it's no use to trust my customers now a days.—We must get it as we go along or never get."

Jewett warmed his fingers a while, and then turning to the other said, "I think I could add a line or two to your inscription that would make it very nice."

"What would you add?" inquired the landlord.

"Give me a pen and a piece of paper, and I will show you."

"Walk into the bar; there's pen and ink; help yourself."

The Doctor walked into the bar, and taking up a pen, wrote as follows:—

"No credit given here,"
And yet I've cause to fear
That there's a Day book kept in Heaven
Where charge is made, and CREDIT GIVEN.

Laying down the pen, and leaving the lines, he walked to the fire and again sat down, expecting an explosion. The landlord, whose curiosity was some what moved, went behind the counter, and read what he had written. A pause of some minutes ensued, when the Doctor, glancing round, saw, to his great pleasure and somewhat surprise, from the intimations of dampness about the eyes, that he had driven a nail in a "sure place" "A word fitly spoken," how good it is.

In anticipation of spending another term at this celebrated "watering place" the Democracy had made every preparation for the winter, in the way of victuals, and drink and firewood. The houses were also well "banked," and indeed their descent was so entirely unexpected and rapid, they neglected to gather up any of their household furniture, or other useful implements of which they had a large supply, so that whigs will find themselves at once the possessors of every comfort and convenience—the desolation of that distant land will be entirely removed, and our residence there will be but a preperation, for a return, which will not be long delayed.

The Salary of the Cloark was fixed at $125, a very small pittance for a years service. $150, would be about right.

Official Majorities.

Governor 741; Lt. Governor 742; Canal Com. 739; Prison Inspector 734; Congress 979; Assembly 701; Sheriff 828; District Attorney 755; Judge 793;

The whole vote for Coroners was thus: Wilder 2733; Blish 2762; Eddy 2025; Tobey 2024.

The Vote for justice of sessions thus: Carter 2760; Potter 2013; Both are elected. Personally, we almost wish all the candidates could be so declared.

N. B. The Gazette will please not quote this against us in the next campaign.

County Survey.

We are requested by Mr. Watson to call the attention of the numerious gentlemen to whom he has directed, circulars or momoranda of enquiries, in relation to the survey, to the subject. A few only have responded. He is extremely anxious to obtain the information he desires from them at an early day and would be greatly obliged if the friends to his work would give the subject their immediate consideration.

Important from Mexico.

The Picayune has received advices from the city of Mexico, the 19th ult., 12 days later.

The news is important. An extra session of Congress convened on the 15th, but there were attempts at revolution, as had been anticipated.

The only important act passed by Congress during the four days was one abolishing the late arbitrary law against the Press.

Considerable excitement existed at Vera Cruz in consequence of the receipt of intelligence that a French squadroon would soon arrive to back the French Minister in his demands for the payment of the French creditors.

Also, for the liberation of La Monte, the Frenchman who, it will be remembered, was unjustly cast into prison a short time since.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 5.

The steamship Crescent City, Capt. Davenport, from New York, via Havana is coming up. The authorities at Havana permitted the landing of her mails and passengers on the present occasion, but gave notice that such permission would not again be granted. The difficulty is not yet settled.

OUTRAGE.—A TOUCH OF MOB LAW.—A Daguerreotypist, named Abbett, who has been travelling about the country with a Car fitted up for taking pictures, located himself in Perry on Monday of last week. On Thursday he induced a small girl, about 10 years of age, to have her picture taken in a nude state. The child told of the transaction, and Mr. Abbott soon found the place growing too warm for him, and decamped leaving his car and apparatus behind him. The next day he sent a man to haul his vehicle, &c., out of town; but before it had got half a mile from the village it was attacked by a large number of boys and men with stones and eggs, and after barely giving the teamster time to got his horses detached, they upset the concern completely demolished it—leaving a total wreck. We understand that the original cost of the Saloon was $700. This with the loss of other valuables makes the picture an expensive one.—[Warsaw New Yorker.

CAUSES OF DEFEAT.—A portion of the whig papers are disputing about the causes of our defeat. In our opinion they are all partially, but not wholly correct. Our defeat was the result of numerous causes and not of any single influence. These we may enumerate and discuss—not as against whigs, but against the democracy.

Communications.

County Survey.

The following highly interesting material is from the farm of Mr. William Russel of Chesterfield.

The following is the analysis of the "Debris" No. 15. This material is so interesting on account of the large amount of Sulpher and Sulphate of Iron it contains, that I gave it a thorough chemical examination. If the deposit is sufficiently extensive it may some day prove a source of wealth to the county.

100 parts dried at 210°	No. 15, Debris.
gave of Silicia	41,21
Iron	15,23
Alumina	5,36
Sulpher	27,14
Sulphuric acid	8,85
Lime	1.44
Magnesia	0,11
Potassia	0.23
Soda	0,17
Chlorine	Trace
	99,70

100 lb. of this dry material contains 27,14 lbs. of Sulpher. This 27,14 lb. of sulpher will make about 68 lbs. of sulpheric acid. In every 100 lbs. there is also enough Iron to make 19,66 lbs. of oxide of Iron. This oxide of Iron will combine with 21,84 lbs. of sulpharic acid and form 41,5 lbs. of sulphate of Iron.

I see no reason if this material is in sufficient quantity, why it may not be used with profit for the manufacture of sulphate of Iron. On heating the rock up to a low red heat it takes fire and burns for some time giving off large quantities of sulphurous acid. A rock similar to this in Orange Co., I think is used with good success as a manure. If the statements are true, it excells plaster in its immediate effects.

Yours Truly,
T. H. SALISBURY.

W. C. WATSON Esq.
Albany Sept. 28, 1852.

ELIZABETHTOWN Nov. 10th 1852.

I send herewith a list of Supervisors composing the present board now in session at this place. Mr. Finch is again chairman by the unanimous voice of the board. This is the sixth, or seventh time he has been thus honored, a merited compliment to intelligence, integrity, and impartiality. Mr. Finch is a worthy citizen in the very fullest sense of that term. He is one of those rare men, who gain steadily, and never lose in public and private esteem.

Jas. W. Steele of Lewis it will be seen is elected clerk, a post he will fill with entire satisfetion.

The various committees are now actively engagod in their various duties, and we believe the business of the county will be attended to with as much ability as at any former time.

I also send the official majorities. The canvass will be published next week.

The result of the late campaign is the subject of pleasantries, of which I may "make a note," but have not time at "this present writing."

A. C. Nelson, of the Gazette, is here trying to have his paper designated as one of the papers to publish the laws, &c. by means of a threat at once contemptible, and shallow. He says if he is not elected the patronage hitherto given to the Clinton Co. whig shall be bestowed upon Turner!—That he was not elected last year was not the fault of whigs, but because democrats chose to select the Post. Whigs did not then, and will not now attempt to control the opposition. If the latter wish they can elect the Gazette. The "threat" is a forgone conclusion anyway, and will be executed as part consideration for that gross attack of Turner upon Mr. Simmons. The half of the corruption carried on by the opposition during the last campaign is not, and may never be known to the public.

The Editor.

Infumous attempt to take the Life of the Editor of the New York Herald by means of an Infernal Machine.—A most diabolical attempt has recently been made to take the life of Jas. Gordon Bennett, proprietor of the New York Herald, by means of a torpedo, or infernal machine, which was left at his office on the evening of the 18th of October last.

The following is a description of the machine. It cosists of a paste-board box, similar in appearance and size to those used for men's shirt collars. Inside of this box was insorted an instrument much like a spool stand, such as are used by women for keeping spools of thread or silk upon. This had two decks, and in the centre of the upper one a hole had been bored, and the ends of about twenty lucifer matches inserted into it, so arranged that they rested upon a piece of sand paper glued upon the upper side of the lower deck, and all fixed so that in taking off the lid of the box, by twisting it, the matches would ignite, and explode about half a pound of powder which was contained in the box.—Pasted upon the lid of the box was the following inscription:

SPECIMENS AND PRIVATE DOCUMENTS
FROM THE INTERIOR OF HAVANA,
FOR MR. BENNETT, (only),
Should he be out of town, keep for him.
ISLAND OF CUBA, Sept., 1852.

Enclosing the box was a brown paper cover, on which the following inscription was pasted:

Native Silver and Copper Ore
From the Cuba Mountains,
With letters inside the box
For James Gordon Bennett.
Private with care.

A card was handed in with the package, on which was inscribed "Senor V. Alcazor, of Cuba, for Mr. Bennett, who will call on his return to the city."

The affair would have been published before, but efforts were being made to discover the party who made the infamous attempt, and it was deemed best to delay the publication of the matter until the efforts had been matured. The perpetrator has not as yet been discovered. These facts are substantiated in every particular by the affidavits (which we have not space to publish) of P. Joyce, the hackman, Horace B. Hinman, Ferrymaster, of the Fulton Ferry, Richard C. Layton, a clerk in the Herald office, Robert C. Crean, cashire, Fredk Hudson, one of the associate Editors of the Herald, and James Leonard, Captain of the second Ward Police.

A Successful Atmospheric Railway.

To the French belongs the credit of having brought to a successful issue the experiment of an atmospheric railway on a large scale. This mode of propelling cars has been adopted at St. Germain, a city about 15 miles from Paris. The distance run is five miles and a half,—the last half mile with an ascent of three and a half per cent. The ascent was too great to be overcome by an engine in all weathers.—The following description of the machinery employed is given by a foreign correspondent of the Ohio State Journal:—

"An iron tube is laid down in the centre of the track, which is sunk about one third of its diameter in the bed of the road.—For a distance of about 5500 yards the tube has a diameter of only 13-4 feet, the ascent here being so slight as not to require the same amount of forceas is required on the steep grade ascending to St. Germain, where the pipe for a distance of 3800 yards is 2 feet 1 inch in diameter.

The manner of applying the atmospheric pressure to the propulsion of the train is exceedingly simple. The air is exhausted from the entire length of the tube, so as to produce a perfect vacuum, just before the arrival of each train, which is every half hour, by means of powerful and beautiful engines, somewhat resembling those at Fairmount. These engines are placed, two of two hundred horse power at St. Germain, and one each at the towns of Nauterreo and Chatton, is a valley towards Paris.

To each engine is adapted two large cylinders which exhaust fourteen cubic feet of air per second. The pressure in the air cauldron (chaudieres) attached to the exhausting machines is equal to six absolute atmospheres. It will be readily understood that when this long tube is completely exhausted of air, if a piston, so nicely adjusted to the size of the tube as to render it air-tight, is allowed to go loose at one end, it will rush through to the other end to fill up the vacuum. To apply the motive power, therefore, to the propulsion of the train, it is only necessary that this piston be attached to the train of cars in such a way as to drag them along after it.

This was the great difficulty to encounter; but so admirably and so simply was this overcome, that the engineer assured us that an accident of any kind seldom ever occured. Throughout the entire length of the tube, a section is made in the top, leaving an open space of about five inches.—In each out edge of the section there is an offset, to catch edges of a valve which fits down upon it.

The valve is made of a piece of sole leather half an inch thick, having plates of iron attached to it on both the upper and corresponding underside to give it strength to resist the suction of the vacuum, which are perhaps one-fourth of an inch in thickness. They are not quite as wide as the leather, but wide enough to touch the offset in the section.

The plates are about nine inches long, and their ends, above and below, are placed threequarters of an inch apart, forming joints; so as to give the leather valve pliability, and at the same time firmness to resist the powerful atmospheric pressure which is brought to bear on it when the air is exhausted. The entire length of the valve, from one end of the tube to the other, is attached to one side, like a sellar door, for example.

From the backside of the piston, a strong iron rod passes up through the aperture, which is made by raising up the edge of the valve, and is attatched to the bottom of the foremost car. As fast as the piston passes along, the valve is released from pressure behind it, the loose edge is liberated, and the bar of iron which is attached to the car a foot or more behind the piston meets with no obstruction to its passage.

The pressure of the atmosphere on the valve in front of the piston, where the vacuum still exists, is so great that there is no danger of the bar of exerting pressure so far forward as to loosen the pliable valve; but to render the matter more certain, and to obviate all doubt, a slide on the bottom of the car slips along on the iron plate of the valve over and in advance of the piston presses firmly down. Every part of the tube is kept well oiled. The rate at which trains ascend varies from fifteen to twenty miles the hour, according to the load.

When we went up, there was six cars very well filled with passengers. After the ascent commences, two bridges across the Seine, and one viaduct of twenty feet high, and wide arches, are accrossed, and one long tunnel through the brow of the hill and under the King's terrace is passed, where the road is parabolically curved.

The road has now been in opperation 5 years, and so safely and so well has it worked that the experiment is regarded as entirely successful. The cost of the working it, or the dividends which the road pays, I did not ascertain."

Dea. Eleazer Blake, a soldier of the revolution, died at Rindge, N. H., on the 28th ult., aged 95 years and 8 months, he marched from Wrentham, Mass., his native town, on the evening of the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775, with the militia under the command of Col. Sheppard; served ten months in the Massachusetts line, and on the day of the battle of Bunker Hill was stationed with a party entrenched on Dorchester Heights. In February 1776, he enlisted in the Continental Army during the war, the last year of which he was honored with the appointment of Sergeant and Quartermaster of Brigade. He was present in the execution guards of Major Andre, and heard his last dying words, and saw with hundreds of others, the traitor Arnold start from West Point and go on board the British man-of-war; and was drawn in the last reinforcement in the capture of Gen. Burgoyne.

The Evening Post says:—"The late election was a decided free trade victory." Then, by all means, let the people be carried out. Time will tell better time than the present.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9th.

Besides the published accounts from Mexico, received by the last arrival, I have seen some private letters from responsible sources, which state the administration of President Arista, and even his life, are insecure. His sudden and instant overthrow, would excite no surprise. The Central Government is without friends or credit, and must soon be succeeded by anarchy and utter confusion.

It appears that many propositions for the contract offered by the government for a carriage road across the Isthmus had been offered, but none were acted upon. The Mexican Congress is in session, but it can do nothing towards a restoration of order or private or public credit.

Sudden Death.

JOHN WAIT, a moulder in the employ of Messrs. He left Peru between 2 and 3 o'clock. About an hour afterwards he was found about two miles from this place dead. He had fallen forward and his head hung over the dashboard. Whether he had a fit or died from suffocation is a mystery.

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, i[...] that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5 000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, disease of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasures of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK. Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND THEN NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASES, or secret habits, with but one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for,

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is hereexplained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy, 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world

N B—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

AGRICULTURAL WARE-HOUSE AND SEED STORE.

DAVEY & ALLEN,

No. 8, COLLEGE STREET, BURLINGTON, Vt.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up, flat furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening, side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Geddes and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour.

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batchelder's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—Lawrence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

AGRICULTURAL & HORTICULTURAL TOOLS AND IMPLEMENTS,

a great variety and extensive assortment, such as Hoes, Shovels, Spades, Rakes, Manure and Hay Forks, Scythes, Snaths, Cattle Ties, Draft Halter and Trace Chains, Garden Syringes, Pruning Saws, Pruning and Budding Knives, Garden Shears and Twig Cutters, Grindstones, Patent Grindstone fixtures, rollers, barn door rolls, &c., &c.

Grain, Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.—We are prepared to furnish Herds Grass, Red Top, Lucerne, White Dutch, Southern, Western and Northern Clover Seed, Beet, Turnip, Onion and Carrot Seed, at Wholesale and Retail at the lowest market prices.

We have by far the largest and most complete assortment of Agricultural Implements, Machines, Field and Garden Seeds to be found in the State, which we offer at our new and spacious Ware-Rooms to Farmers and Dealers on terms the most liberal. We are also Commission Merchants and Wholesale and Retail Dealers in heavy and shelf

HARDWARE,

Saddlery, Axles, Springs, Mechanic's Tools, House Trimmings and Furnishing Goods, Cutlery, Cross Cut, Mill and Circular Saws, Paints, Oils, Bird Cages, etc., etc., etc.

As agents of Messrs. D. Prouty & Co., Boston, Wheeler, Millick & Co., Albany, J. T. Grant & Co., Troy, and others we can fill orders for Plows, Horse Powers, Threshers, Fan Mills, Straw Cutters, &c., at manufacturers prices. A liberal discount made to Dealers.

MARRIAGE

HAPPINESS AND COMPETENCE.

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life at an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefited by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the full consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

MELANCHOLY AND STARTLING

To behold the sickness and suffering endured by many a wife for many years, from causes simple and controllable, easily remedied—or better still,—not incurred, if every

WIFE AND MOTHER

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (within the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By becoming in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, 50 cts

[ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.]

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE, WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriages, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is so conducive to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

Consumption Cured! Wonderful Cases! Friends Astonished!!!

A sense of duty to the afflicted prompto me to give this certificate:—I was taken with pain in my left side in October of 1850, following with a bad cough, and became much alarmed, supposing I must die with Consumption, and this opinion and fear was increased by my physician, who declared I could not live three months. A naturally strong constitution prolonged my life, but I saw myself gradually sinking away and hope became almost extinct, when a gentleman, by the request of Mr. Dean, called in my house and left me a box of Devines Pich Lozenges. I left all other medicines, and commenced using them, with indeed no confidence or hope. But to my own amazement, and to the suprise of all my acquaintance, I began to get well; and in less than three months from the time I began to use them I was able to commence the ordinary care of my family, and am now enjoying my usual and formerly good health. I keep the Lozenges in my house, and if I have any cold or caugh, I use them, and always find immediate relief. and I herebÿ recomend them as the best remedy that has come to my knowledge.

South Adams, Dec. 5, 1851.

Mrs. L. A. WILLIAMS.

We the undersigned, inhabitants of South Adams are well acquainted with Mrs. Williams, and assure the public that her certificate is but a modest statement of facts.

THE WONDER OF THE WORLD.

DEVINES' COMPOUND

PITCH LOZENGE,

A sure and pleasant Remedy for Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and if lungs enough are left to sustain life, A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, safe for the Infant or the Invalid, in any stage of weakness.

"The statements that consumption cannot be cured, has destroyed more lives than the disease itself.—[Dr. Warren

Read the following, which to a candid mind places this "Great Remedy," like Cæsar's wife "above suspicion."

TO THE PUBLIC!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Lee, Mass., are acquainted with Mr. Devines, the proprietor and Manufacturer of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge and from what we know of it ourselves and have learned from others of its beneficial effects, in cases where it has been used, give it as our opinion that it is a valuable remedy in diseases for which it is recommended and is worthy of public confidence. A. G. Hulburt, Leonard Church, F. G. Taylor, Wm Taylor, E. A. Bliss, S. A. Hulburt, Josephus Crafts, T. P. Eldridge.

If any Individual is to be pitied, and needs sympathy, it is the consumptive—always expecting to get well, and yet the painful evidence of decay almost "makes the inner soul shriuk with the outer flesh"

"Some bloom as roses bloom, and live as roses live, A single morning space!"

While others in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HERE IS HOPE! Mr Wm. Devines, the original inventor and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges alone, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk, and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN.

BRANT'S PURIFYING EXTRACT

The Greatest

BLOOD PURIFIER

IN THE WHOLE WORLD!

☞ Price $1 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.

It is now put up in QUART BOTTLES, of the same power and medical efficacy as when in small bottles. Each large bottle contains SIXTY-FOUR DOSES, and the medications are so Strongly Concentrated that only One Tablespoonful is required at a Dose—three times a day while one bottle lasts Twenty-One Days, which is much longer than a bottle of any other medicine lasts, because there is required of this a less quantity at a dose.

The great Superiority of this Blood Purifier over all other medicines, consists in a great measure in its possessing as a part of its compound, the powerful Medical Virtues of some Scarce and Rare which no other medicine possesses. These are the most active Purifiers of the Blood that were ever known to [illegible] Indian or white man, and these being compounded with the [illegible] ly-concentrated Extracts of Poetry.

Indian Roots and Barks,

(Written for the Republican.)

'Tis but a day since Spring was here.

'Tis but a day since spring was here,
Scattering blessings far and near;
Since wood-born flowers, with modest look,
First stooped to kiss the laughing brook—
Since earth, that drank the evening dew,
Smiled every morning fresh and new;
Since in the new-leaved grove were heard
Glad songs from many a bright winged bird—
Since all of nature seemed replete
With youth, and bloom, and blessings sweet—
Since hills were clad in rich array—
Since spring was here—'tis but a day.

And yet I listen—and I hear
Songs of the declining year;
I look about me, and behold
The year already growing old,
Sombre and still the day is now—
Old age is on the forest's brow;
The earth her smiles hath all withdrawn,
And flowers are faded, withered, gone;
The hill and vale are green no more—
The mountain peak is bare and hoar,
In forest paths, with moss o'er grown,
Pale, withered leaves are thickly strewn—
And all that bloomed in youthful spring
Is faded now, and withering.
In yonder field, now brown and nude,
The cricket chirps in solitude.
And far down in a pasture dell
Tinkles a solitary bell;
And every far off sound I hear
Strikes sadly on the watchful ear.
At night the wind with heavy breath,
Sighs fitfully, like groans ere death!
What means it? 'tis the struggling sighs,
The labored breath when summer dies.
And yet, though all around is gloom,
The night winds whisper of the tomb—
Though flowers are gone, and hills are sear,
'Tis but a day since spring was here!

'Tis but a day since youth was here,
With buoyant hope, and joy and cheer;
Since days passed on with pleasures rife.
And every pulse beat high with life—
Since time flew past on airy wing,
And life was one perennial spring—
Since years of pleasures were away:
Since youth was here—'tis but a day!

And yet—I feel it in my veins—
The spring has gone, the summer wanes.
The blood once hot is waxing cold.
Youth, Youth is gone I'm growing old!
My cheeks are marked with years and cares—
My locks are thick with silver hairs,
Infirm upon my staff I bow.
For age is written on my brow.
Full well I know, and yield the strife—
It is the autumn of my life!

And yet, although my locks are hoar,
With many winters frosted o'er—
Though bowed my form, and dim my sight,
Till day seems mingled into night—
Though weak, infirm, I tremble now,
With age deep graven on my brow—
Though death, ago, even death, is near,
'Tis but a day since youth was here!

Thus, ere we know it, spring is fled—
The flowers of yesterday are dead;
Thus frosty age comes on in haste,
The bloom of early life to waste.
Yet when the tender flower fails,
And chill and fierce the autumn gales
Scatter its withered leaves abroad,
It drops its seed upon the sod;
And, when old winter ends its strife,
That seed quickens into life,
And that sweet flower will quit its tomb
And blush again in vernal bloom.
So 'tis with men—first doomed to death—
Like the frail flowers that perisheth!
Yet, when he endeth life's brief term,
He leaves an undecaying form
To spring up into fairest bloom.
Immortal youth beyond the tomb!

Miscellany.

The Little Outcast.

BY MRS. DENISON.

"Mayn't I stay, ma'am? I'll do anything you give me—cut wood, go after water, and do all your errands."

The troubled eyes of the speaker were filled with tears. It was a lad that stood at the outer door, pleading with a kind looking woman, who still seemed to doubt the reality of his good intentions.

The cottage sat by itself on a bleak moor, or what in Scotland would have been called such. The time was near the latter end of September, and a fierce wind rattled the boughs of the two only naked trees near the house, and fled with a shivering sound into the narrow door-way, as if seeking for warmth at the blazing fire within.

Now and then a snow-flake touched with its soft chill the cheek of the listener, or whitened the angry redness of the poor boy's benumbed hands.

The woman was loth to grant the boy's request, and the peculiar look stamped upon his features, would have suggested to any mind an idea of depravity far beyond his years.

But her woman's heart could not resist the sorrow in those large, but by no means handsome grey eyes.

"Come in at any rate till the good man comes home; there, sit down by the fire; you look perishing with cold;" and she drew a rude chair up to the warmest corner, then, suspiciously glancing at the child from the corners of her eyes, she continued setting the table for supper.

Presently came the tramp of heavy shoes; the door was swung open with a quick jerk, and the "good man" presented himself, wearied with labor.

A look of intelligence passed between his wife and himself; he too scanned the boy's face with an expression not evincing satisfaction but nevertheless made him come to the table, and then enjoyed the zest with which he dispatched his supper.

Day after day passed, and yet the boy begged to be kept "only till to-morrow;" so the good couple, after due consideration, concluded that as long as he was so docile, and worked so heartily, they would retain him.

One day in the middle of winter, a pedlar, long accustomed to trade at the cottage, made his appearance, and disposed of his goods readily, as if he had been waited for.

"You have a boy out there splitting wood, I see," he said, pointing to the yard.

"Yes; do you know him?"

"I have seen him," replied the pedlar, evasively.

"And where—who is he? what is he?"

"A jail bird;" and the pedlar swung his pack over his shoulder; "that boy, young as he looks, I saw in court myself, and heard his sentence—'ten months; he's a hard one. You'd do well to look keerfully after him."

Oh! there was something so horrible in the word jail—the poor woman trembled as she laid away her purchases, nor could she be easy till she called the boy in, and assured him that she knew that dark part of his history.

Ashamed, distressed, the child hung down his head; his cheeks seemed bursting with the hot blood; his lips quivered, and anguish was painted as vividly upon his forehead as if the word were branded into the flesh.

"Well," he muttered, his whole frame relaxing as if a burden of guilt or joy had suddenly rolled off, "I may as well go to ruin at once—there's no use of my trying to do better—everybody hates and despises me—nobody cares about me—I may as well go to ruin at once."

"Tell me," said the woman, who stood off far enough for flight if that should be necessary—"how came you to go so young to that dreadful place? Where was your mother?—where?"

"Oh!" exclaimed the boy, with a burst of grief that was terrible to behold, "oh! I haint no mother—oh! I haint had no mother ever since I was a baby. If I'd only had a mother," he continued, his anguish growing vehement, and the tears gushing out from his strange looking grey eyes. "I wouldn't 'a been bound out, and kicked and cuffed, and laid onto with whips. I wouldn't 'a been saucy, and got knocked down and run away, and then stole because I was hungry. Oh! I haint got no mother—I haint got no mother—I haven't had no mother since I was a baby."

The strength was all gone from the poor boy, and he sank on his knees sobbing great choking sobs, and rubbing the hot tears away with his poor knuckles. And did that woman stand there unmoved? Did she coldly bid him pack up and be off—the jail bird?

N—no; she had been a mother, and though all her children slept under the cold sod in the church-yard—she was a mother still.

She went up to that poor boy, not to hasten him away, but to lay her fingers kindly, softly on his head—to tell him to look up, and from hence forth find in her a mother. Yes, she even put her arm about the neck of that forsaken, deserted child—she poured from her mother's heart sweet, womanly words, words of counsel and tenderness.

Oh! how sweet was her sleep that night, how soft her pillow! She had linked a poor suffering heart to hers by the most silken, the strongest bands of love; she had plucked some thorns from the path of a little, sinning, but striving mortal. None but the angels could witness her holy joy, and not envy.

Did the boy leave her?

Never—he is with her still; a vigorous, manly, promising youth. The low character of his countenance has given place to an open pleasing expression, with depth enough to make it an interesting study. His foster father is dead, his good foster mother aged and sickly, but she knows no want. The once poor outcast is her only dependence, and nobly does he repay the trust.

"He that saveth a soul from death, hideth a multitude of sins."—[Olive Branch.

A BOSTONIAN returning from a tour through Europe, relates to the Boston Journal the following incident, which took place at St. Petersburgh: "Several of our shipmates were on shore having 'a good time'; when in passing through the square containg the colossal statute of Peter the Great, one of them declared he would have a ride on that horse; and no sooner said, than he made a leap over the iron fence, and actually commenced climbing up over the tail of the horse, and before the astonished crowd could interfere to stop the movement, the captain was actually seated on the colossal horse, behind the Great Peter. The Yankee had accomplished his purpose, and taken his ride on Peter's horse, but the most difficult part of his enterprise was still before him; viz: to escape from the horse without falling into the hands of the guard, who are constantly stationed around the statue for its protection; and here our captain signally failed. He was arrested in his descent from his lofty seat, and found that there was, in very deed, but a step between the sublime and the ridiculous, as he was led away from Peter's statue to prison. He was tried, convicted, and fined $6,000 for his folly. By the interposition of the American minister, the fine was slightly reduced, and was then paid by the captain's consignees, and he was released from prison after only a few days' confinement. When the captain remonstrated with the judge at the largeness of the fine, saying it was rather an expensive ride, the judge good-naturedly replied that the captain never before rode so expensive a horse.—Household Words.

The Blending of the Seasons.

I looked over the face of nature. The trees were withered, the fields stubbled and brown. The mountains startled me with their naked majesty. Where were the flowers? where the gorgeous mantling of forests and hills? where the hues of heaven that had painted an Eden on every leaf? Soon to be obscured by tempests, and buried underneath snows! I wept over the threatened desolation; wept that for all things there must come a winter.

A form of surpassing beauty moved gently by my side.

"Why weepest thou, oh mortal?" she saie. 'Without rest nothing can live. So hath the bountiful Father ordained sleep, that, coming with sweet odors on her wing, closes thine eyes to the life pictures that Time and Care heaver wear in painting.—Spring, Summer, and Autumn too, take their rest."

Then holding one hand over the earth, a great fissure was rent therein, and while I looked down in wonder, she clasped me in her arms, and we descended together.

I felt no fear the darkness enwrapped us and the way seemed endless. But anon a soft light broke out—it deepened, flushing at intervals, and I saw yet far below what seemed a city of palaces.

'Do then mortals live in the depths of the earth?" I asked.

"You four palaces," she replied, pointing to the fairest and whitest, "belong to Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. All around are granaries where choice seeds are deposited and impliments of labor. Here are locked up the airs and the fruits, and the snows of the seasons."

We stopped at the palace of Spring,—Earthly splendor was more than eclipsed by the shining pillars, the fresh, noble statues that adorned the outer of these structures. Silver and gold lined the inner walls, everywhere surpassing richness and magnificence were visible. I was led up the grand entrance, through wide halls into a spacious chamber.

There softly sleeping upon a couch, whose regal hangings were of a delicate green, bordered with gold, laid a young maiden; in her hand the first flower of the year, now drooping.

Her cheek was somewhat pale, her tresses like amber clouds; soft breezes played around her pillow. I smelt the odor of early violets as her breath came gently between her parted lips. Gazing around, I was startled to observe that what I had taken for statuary, were living beings watching her rest. Some of them held seeds in their hands, others spades and picks upon which they leaned thoughtfully—others ploughs, ready to guide them at her first command.

"Spring taketh her rest," said my guide smiling.

"I was next ushered into another palace, similar in construction to the first. Upon a rosy couch reclined a glorious form.—Never saw I aught so beautiful as her face. Her hair, a golden brown, laid in thick masses against her cheeks, upon which deepened the rich crimson of the sea-shell. At every footstep I trod upon flowers, yet crushed them not. On every side sat maidens braiding wreaths and tinting fruit buds. A gentle rustling like the waving of boughs, and the sighing of zephyrs thro' long grasses, a soft twittering of birds, a murmer of laughing voices, and a scent of ripening fruit saluted me. Warm breezes stole about my temples giving a soft languor, and I longed for the shade of a great tree. The bleating of lambs, the rippling of streams, the musical dripping of water falls, mingled delightfully together. And summer still slept with smiles on her lips.

Methought I entered then the palace of Autumn. Everywhere I saw joy and gladness. Peals of music burst forth; shouts like those in harvest time came up from the terraces. Autumn had just left the upper earth.

Though wearied with her labors, she was more beautiful than her sisters. Night black were her heavy ringlets; night black her lustrious eyes—dark and deeply tinted her full round cheek. She walked between golden sheaves, and methought they bowed to her. Swart attendants followed, loaded with corn, grapes, apples, pears, and all the roots of the earth. About their persons were wound wreaths of gorgeous flowers; their garments glittered, woven with the silk of corn. Now and then a sharp wind whistled by me as the maidens hastened to lead away their queen. Mournful symphonies now commenced, fitful and gentle as the falling of the leaves. I heard a noise like ten thousand great wings beating the air, and but a solitary twitter, it might be that of a wounded bird.

At the door of Winter's palace I paused. What had before seemed glistening marble, I saw was sparkling ice. Frostwork in wild grotesque designs lined all the pannels.—Great figures with cold eyes stood in the portals. Of a sudden a flourish of trumpets broke the stillness. Loud shouts filled me with awe, and peals of music issued from all the entrances. Tall figures in white mantles passed and re-passed, and in an inner chamber stood a kingly form, about which a hundreds persons seemed busy. Sharp and keen, his eyes darted everywhere. Like masses of crystal, his locks hung upon his massive shoulders.—When arrayed he seized an icy spear that reached from the floor to the extreme of the mighty dome, and shook it with a firm hand. Fierce winds leaped from their caves, whirling flakes of snow thickened the air, frost formed over his brow and hung heavy on his locks. I heard shrieks, moans lamenting voices. I saw that the [illegible] had fallen away, even as courtiers f[illegible] frown of their monarch.

Then Winter's brow grew dark.

"None love me," he murmered.

He had hardly spoken, when with sweet strains came Spring, Summer, and Autumn, wrapped in white furs, and trembling with chill.

"O pity the king of the seasons," said one, and have come to offer him consolation.

"I," said Spring, "will give him some of my balmy airs, and my brightest days."

"I," said Summer, "will bequeath to our brother, my sunny skies, my deep blue of evening, and a few genial breezes."

"I," said Autumn, "will lend him some of my glorious evenings, with my moon as yellow as the harvest and my glittering stars. Besides, I have saved for him the choicest fruits of my labor. Let not our brother mourn, many hearts will rejoice at his going forth."

Then winter smiled and his smile came full upon me—I could no longer hate him.

And ever since, through his reign I have marked Spring days, Summer warmth, and and Autumn splendor. [M. A. D.

OBITUARY NOTICE

OF THE LATE.

Dr. AARON F. GARDINER.

The act of doing justic to the memory of the dead belongs to unprejudiced minds, and should devolve upon those, who from their social relations with the deceased have opportunities of learning private character. As one who has known the subject of this sketch for many years, I deem it a duty I owe to him as a friend and fellow citizen to speak of him as he was. Doctor Gardiner (the youngest son of John Gardiner, was born at East Hampton, Long Island, on the 15th of January, 1785.—He received what was considered at that time a good elementary education at the Clinton Academy in his native place, and soon after chose Medicine as a profession suited to his taste. The wisdom of this choice was manifest by the success he met with in after years in the practice of a profession, to which he was ardently attached. The facilities afforded the Medical Students of that day were few indeed in comparison with those now enjoyed. But he availed himself of all those within his reach, and by an intense application to the science for several years, acquired thoroughly its rudiments, and proved himself worthy of the diploma which he received in the year 1808. In a short time he left the Island and went to Easton, Washington county, N. Y. where he practiced several years with a Doctor Mosher who at that time had an extensive business. In a neighboring county he became acquainted with Martha Lathrop Pope, whom he soon after married and removed to Chester, New Jersey, about the year 1811. It was in this state that he may be said to have commenced his career as a Practitioner of Medicine, the arduous duties of which are known only to the profession. A stranger, with no recommendation but his talents, he appeared in the Medical field. He entered the lists with men about him, not youthful adventurers or charlatans, but with hoary headed veterans, men who had grown grey in the profession and whom time and favor had elevated to an eminence in society.—Such were his competitors. But under these unfavorable circumstances he wavered not, and by an unremitting ardor soon built up an extensive practice, which continued to increase during his residence in Chester, a period of sixteen years.

In the midst of a successful professional career, in the bosom of friends who were clustered closely about him, he was induced through the influence of relatives to remove northward, and accordingly went to Keeseville, Essex County, N. Y. in 1827. There being but few Physicians then in this vicinity, he immediately secured a respectable practice and established himself in favor and reputation with the inhabitants of this growing village.

Having continued the active duties of his calling for about twelve years in this place, he found that the prime of life was past, and that his health demanded a relaxation from the more arduous duties devolving upon a country practitioner and accordingly confined himself mostly to town practice. But a few Physicians of his age have devoted themselves more faithfully to the healing art, or have encountered more hardships in the practice of a profession, which perhaps more than any other is attended with that mental anxiety which soonest depresses the powers of life. The scientific followers of Æsculapius in every age (since Medicine has merited the title of a distinct science) have been called upon to combat not only disease, but the whims and caprices of mankind, a task more formidable than the famed Herculean labors of ancient story.

But amid all those false lights in Medicine, which from time to time have arisen in the camp of Quackery, he stood firm, a faithful sentinel to warn men of their danger in trusting to theories based upon unsubstantial fabrics. He lived to see many of these delusions disapperr, before the torch of scientific investigation; theories which for the time served to amuse more than benefit society; and he died in harness an advocate of the axiom; "that nothing should be received as truth in Medicine, which has not been thoroughly tested by experience."—

In his death the Profession have lost an ornament, society a useful member, the Poor a friend. Perhaps no man in Northern New York had a more extensive knowledge of the theory of Medicine in detail than Doctor Gardiner. During a forty years he had been a as well as an attentive observeomena of diseased action. acute perceptive faculties, he was usually correct in his Diagnosis, having a retentive memory he was enabled to draw at will from his storehouse of facts treasured up from the best authors. He possessed a sound judgment which rendered him not only a bold, but a safe practitioner. He was not however like too many in the profession chained down to the exploded dogmas of the schools, but belonged rather to the Eclectics open to conviction and as an independent thinker ready to embrace truth in whatever garb she might appear. These are the outlines of the Professional character of our friend. But should I stop here I should leave the subject unfinished.

Amid the cares incident to his profession he still found leisure to devote his attention to a general course of reading. The English classics were his favorites, although the standard works in almost every department of literature were familiar to him,—Books were his companions with whom he held daily converse, and the midnight hour oft found him communing with his favorite authors. He possessed a correct dramatic taste and had a natural talent for Poetry, as was manifest by his occasional contributions to the Press. His style was decidedly unique and original, his forte the descriptive and sarcastic. He looked upon nature with a poets eye and drew his figures from her book with a graphic pen.

His conversational powers were of the first order, and his turn of mind social which rendered him an agreeable companion with young or old. Having a considerable relaxation from professional duties for the last few years of his life he entered with spirit into the various benevolent enterprises of the day and was found among the foremost in that band of Pioneers, whose object is to ameliorate the condition of man, and elevate the standard of morals in society. Firmness was a prominent trait in his character, yet he was corteous and respectful to those who chanced to differ with him in sentiment. He was cautious in forming an opinion, yet bold to declare it when formed and as firm as Giberalter in its maintenance. Like all positive characters he had strong friends and bitter enemies. But he has passed from our vision and they who would find him must seek him in the grave. By his removal from our midst the poor have lost a friend. His ear was attentive to the cry of the suffering and his presence a consolation at their feverish couch. To afford relief to this class in community who have but few to sympathize with them in their affliction, was to him a privilege and remuneration for professional services rendered the unfortunate, a secondary consideration.

"Interest, his soul ne'er swayed. He neither truckled to the great, nor bent the knee to Mammons shrine; Gold he accounted dross, and spurned all laws save those by virtue made. He heeded not the scoffs and sneers of men. Science his mind illumed, hope cheered his path, and when Death called him hence, his placid eye was lighted up by an approving conscience that gave assurance of eternal bliss."

I admit he had his falings—On these let the tear that pitieth human weakness fall. On these let the veil that covers human frailty rest.

As a father, as a christian, as a man, he acted well his part, let posterity do him justice.

It remains for us to take a brief survey of the closing scenes of his life. Until about four weeks previous to his death, he had enjoyed his usual measure of health, although at times during the past year he had been subject to paroxysms of "palpitation of the heart" these symptoms however would soon pass off and during the intermission his usual strength remained.—He regarded these affections as merely nervous in their character, and did not mistrust an organic affection of the heart.—But he thought amiss, for on the evening of the 10th of Sept., he was suddenly aroused from slumber by a sense of suffocation and oppression in the region of the heart. These symptoms however yielded in a measure to treatment, but left him in rather a feeble condition. From this time forward he seemed to be aware of the true nature of his complaint, and somewhat alarmed as to its final result. He said (in speaking of the suddenness of his late attack) he regarded it as a midnight cry, a warning to set his house in order ere he made his exit. But he had not deferred this preparation until a dying hour; for years before, in the full strength and vigor of manhood he had enlisted under the banner of the crucified Savior, and proved himself "a soldier of the cross."

Although sensible from the first as to the probable termination of his disease, still he did not despair, and being his own Physician promptly made use of the heroic remedies indicated in his complain. From fear he might be mistaken as to the nature of the disease, he reviewed carefully Medical authorities that had written upon "diseases of the heart as a speciality" and found alas: that the symptoms of his case were too clearly pointed out to be mistaken. He watched with an Eagle eye the effects of the medicine he had taken, as an able navigator when finding that his vessel by the force of the tempest is driving towards the breakers of some dangerous coast, as a forlorn hope casts out his sheet anchor and standing at the helm calmly awaits the result, so did our friend await his fate.—There is much to admire in the character of the man in circumstances like these.—Men may encounter death amid the turmoil of conflict, they may dare him in the deadly breach, but when he noiselessly glides into the solitary chamber and unfolds his dark ensign, then is it that the lion hearted tremble and steicism loses her fortitude.

Although subject most of the time during his illness to intense suffering not a murmer escaped him. On the contrary he was cheerful and continued conversing with his friends, until a few days before his death (when from a partial paralysis of his tongue he was unable to distinctly articulate. But even then he was concious of all that was transpiring around him, and his eye was lighted up an unusual fire, which gave evidence that his intellect was not obscured although nature was fast giving way.—He intimated that he wished all topics of an earthly nature to be excluded from the room as he wished to spend the remainder of his time in reflecting upon matters of a religious nature. He had desired a few days previous that his absent sons should be sent for that he might behold them once more before he died. On its being announced that they had arrived the exhausted powers of life seemed to rally for a time so that he was able to hold some conversation with them. But the sight of his children had been too severe a shock to his nervous system and the feelings of paternal love had overpowered him. The lamp of life was fast flickering in its socket and the final hour drew nigh. On Tuesday at 5 A. M. Oct, 12th his spirit took its flight.

Thus died in the full possession of his faculties, Doctor Gardiner, in the 67th year of his age. He died a christian Philosopher and he sleeps in Evergreen Cemetery in the outskirts of his adopted village, in sight of the Adirondac mountains whose lofty peaks he had trod and whose name he had perpetuated in poetic numbers.

Tell your Wife!

Yes, the only way is, to tell your wife just how you stand, Show her your balance-sheet. Let her look at the items. You think it will hurt her feelings. No it won't do any such thing. She has been taught to believe that money was with you, just as little boys think it is with their fathers,—terrible hard to be reached, yet inexhaustible. She has had her suspicions already. She has guessed you were not so prosperous as you talked. But you have so befogged your money affairs that she, poor thing, knows nothing about them. Tell it right out to her, that you are living outside of your income. Take her into partnership, and I'll warrant you'll never regret it. There may be a slight shower at first, but that's natural. Let her see your estimate, and when you come home again, she will show you that you have put her bills to high. True, she had an eight-dollar bonnet last winter, but "it is just as good as ever, a few shillings will provide it with new strings, and refit it a little;—the shape," she says, "is almost exactly as they wear them now." And you will be surprised to see how much less expensive she can make your wardrobe. She will surprise you with a new vest—not exactly unfamiliar some how, looking as if in another shape you had seen it before.—yet new as a vest, and scarcely costing a dollar where you had allowed five. Old cravats will experience a resurrection in her hands, coming out so rejuvenated that nobody but those that are let into the secret, would suspect that they are old friends in new shapes. The gown you were going to buy—out of what forgotten chest she has gathered the materia's you cannot imagine— but there it is, comfortable and warm, and just the thing you wanted for the long winter evenings that are coming on as fast as the almanac will let them.

You will find a wonderful change in her tastes and appetites. Whereas, she always fancied what was a little out of season or just coming into market—now if beef is dear, she thinks "boiled mutton is delightful,—as tender as chicken." If land rises, and fish are plenty, she thinks, 'a striped bass is as good occasionally,' and always insists on having it Fridays. Whereas, before, she must hear all the musical celebritics,—now she is "out of all patience with these foreign signers. If JENNY LIND were to return and sing some of our own sweet airs, she'd like to hear her: but she has had enough of Italian. Extravagances, all written on the leger lines below or above, as if it were a sin to tarry long on the common staff.

Before you have thought much about it you will find yourself spending most of your evenings at home, and such evenings too—so full of domestic enjoyment, and fireside pleasures, that you will look with wonder on the record of last year's expenses and marvel that you found time or relish for costly entertainments that so seriously taxed your porte-monaie.

My dear friend, if like Spain, your outgoes threaten to exceed your incomes, be sure and tell your wife of it. Nor in a tone and manner that will lead her to think you don't want her to buy furs this winter, but just as if you wanted a counsellor in the day of your trouble. And if she does not come up, heart and soul and most successfully to your relief, put me down for no prophet, and her for no worthy specimen of a Yankee lass.

THE NEWSPAPER.—There is no book so cheap as a newspaper; none as interesting, because it consists of a variety, measured and in suitable proportions as to time and quality. Being new every day or week, it invites to habits of reading, and is necessary to the individual and the community.

☞ A gentleman out west had an Irish lad in his employ, and sent him out to grease the wagon. The lad, after being gone a considerable length of time, returned, when he was asked by his employer if he "greased the wagon?" "Yes, said he, "I have greased it all except those little sticks where the wheels run."

What class of people live the highest? Those who go out on a lark, of course.

From The Hartford Courant.

As we have voyaged the whole length of Salt River, up to the "head of sloop navigation," we are quite desirous, that our readers should know what a time we had, and how we are satisfied with our new 'location."

We started in the grand old steamer Connecticut, Capt. Steady-habits commander, with the rest of the large Whig fleet, on the evening of the second of November, on our cruise up the stream. As we entered the bay into which that famous river discharges its waters, there was an universal expression of grief throughout the whole fleet.—The first ebullition being over, we had then an opportunity," quiet, though sad," to mark the rapid progress of our voyage, and the interesting objects before us. As we passed up the bay, there loomed up before us the low sandy Cape Harbor Improvement; we gave its obstructions a wide berth and sighed as we silently bade it adieu for years. The wrecks of steamers were strewed all along its yellow sands. Cape Protection then showed its headland, The long breakwater, erected in 1842 against the dashing waves of the broad ocean, which rolled its billows from far England upon it had taken down and washed away; and foolishly, on the landward side of the point, another barrier had been built in '46, which only checked the current of the inland river. As we passed it, it enveloped in fog, which had settled in gloomy wreathes on the sides of Mount American-System that rose behind it. "Farewell," we said, "old landmark! Thou wilt guide our fleet to victory no more! Thy whole stupendous mass is to be carted off and deposited in the deep ocean of Free Trade! He who once stood proudly on thy top to cheer us on to the contest, sleeps the last long sleep of death, and his system has perished with him. It is marked on the tomb-stone, as the fruitless labor of one who would have established his country's prosperity, had faction permitted.

Soon after we approached the hidden rocks of Slavery Extension. Here a great debate sprung up in the different vessels of the fleet as to which side of the rocks we should pass. The contest grew exciting, when old Capt. Consideration settled the difficulty by remarking that it made no difference when we were going up the river

The old rocky shore of Point National Bank next presented itself. But the regular action of the current and tide had so fretted off the projecting rocks, that it was no longer dangerous. Here we passed the large Democratic fleet, coming down the bay, with streamers and pennons and flags flying, with bands of music playing, and the passengers shouting in the highest glee. What was rather strange, in all cases the British flag was flying above the American, and the shouts of "hurrah for England's interests" rent the air, while the bands played "God Save the King." The New-Hampshire, an old-fashioned, slow sailing craft, led the van, looking as if her model was a century old. She was the flag ship, and bore aloft on her mizzen a flag with the inscription "Virginia Resolutions of '98."—Franklin Pierce stood at her prow, smiling as the morning sun, his eye fixed steadily on the distant view of the White House. The rest of the fleet seemed vexed at the little progress which was made under the "98" flag. The squadroon of the West, under the command of Rear Admiral Douglas, were evidently determined to sail faster, as soon as the bay widened. Douglas had showed his cunning by so constructing his ensign that the side which turned towards the flag ship presented the motto of 'the Virginia Resolutions," while on the other was faintly written —"River and Harbor Improvement." He declared to his men that as soon as there was room enough to pass the Commodore, he should lead off himself, haul down the Virginia flag, and up with the black flag of piracy, with its skull and cross bones.

We passed very rapidly up the river, for the tide was setting strong in that direction. Gen, Scott examined with much curiosity both banks of the river as we sailed on.—It was the very first time that he had been on the stream and everything was new to him. "I am not disheartened," said the old veteran. "I have troops of friends around me, who have fallen with me. My life has been devoted to the Republic, and I bow to its decisions now. This vote cannot blot out the record of my services from my country's history. Posterity will do me justice."

As we neared the extremity of the stream, we passed many beautiful country residences. At one of the finest, in his large cabbage garden, stood Martin Van Buren.—He had not yet recovered from his grief at seeing the Democratic fleet sail by without taking him on board.

"The buckwheat cake was in his mouth,
The tear was in his eye,"

We inquired for the Prince, and found that he had followed the fleet in a small skiff, and there were many fears entertained for his safety.

A little further up was Buchanan. Poor man! he looked haggard. The Democratic garment with which he had covered up his principles so long, was growing thin, and the old Federallining showed through in many places.

On the next turn of the river we found Cass, wringing his hands in agony at the desecration of his friends. With coat and hat off, he was exclaming amid "the noise and confusion" of the surf around him, in the words of the Captive Knight:

"They are gone! they have all passed by!
Their in whose wars I had borne a part,
They that I loved with a brother's heart,
They have left me here to die!
Sound aside, clarion! Clarion, pour thy blast!
Sound! for the Presidential dream of hope is past."

Soon after we came to the place where the whole Free Soil party ware disembarking. John P. Hale, in a very good natured frame of mind, was making preparations for a permanent residence, as he had no idea that four years would carry him down the stream again. Many of them were seated on the rocks, with long black poles, stirring up the mud of the stream, while certain inky looking fellows were calling upon them to "agitate, agitate?" Most of the Massachusetts members were sitting in their boats, expecting that the Democrats would charter the old steamboat Coalition and come up after them, next week.

We found our new residence a convenient one, and we are, upon the whole, "as well as could be expected." The air is salubrious & invigorating, if we may judge by the hungry looks of the Democrats, as they passed us. The soil is fruitful, and produces a fine crop of regrets and unavailing resolutions, but we are determined not to cultivate despair.

Soon after our arrival, a large public meeting was called, which assembled near Cape turn-again. Hon. Stay-at-home Grumbler was appointed Chairman, and Job-Doo-Little, Esq., Secretary. Hon. Mr. Faoing-bothways made some lacrymose remarks, which were promptly hissed down; when Mr. Stick-to-the-right Great-heart offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously passed;

Resolved, (1) That after mature deliberation, we come to the conclusion that we are rowed up Salt River.

Resolved,(2) That we are alarmed!

Resolved,(3) That every rooster of the settlement that crows once shall be immediately decapitated.

Resolved,(4) That in the investigation of the causes of our defeat, we do not think it is owing to Winfield Scott's splendid services, or to Franklin Pierce's littleness, but to the fact that we had not votes enough.

Resolved,(5) That we stay here until we go down stream again.

Resolved, (6) That in the words of the poet, we say, "it will never do to give it up so, Mr. Brown."

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning Nov. 20.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands,
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

Democracy.

What is it? who can tell? A democrat of the Ausable Valley would say it is for protection. The party every where else would say No. In the West they say it is for the improvement of Rivers and Harbors, while in Va they say it is not. In some places it is Free Soil, in others disunion, and others still for the compromise. In the South West under the lead of Col. Benton they are for a National Road to California, in the face of the democratic platform, and though the Cumberland Road is a standing monument to democratic hostility to such an undertaking. Native Americans supported the democracy as the most reliable on that question, and the foreign vote went in for them pell mell for directly the opposite reason. What is democracy? The following from the N, Y. Tribune presents some of the phazes of the democracy of 1852 in a strong light.

The Piebald Party.

Never did a more hetcrogeneous compound of discordant materials enter into the composition of any one thing in this world than that which has just established the agency of Pierce & King as factors for the so-called Democratic party.

Not only have the rank and file of the sham Democracy gone en masse for these gentlemen, but they have received pretty nearly the unanimous suffrage of the "Foreign vote," the Native American vote, the drift of all sorts which always goes with the great current; the cotton, and trading and importing interests; the City and suburban aristocracy, the commercial agents, and the wealthy foreign and home bankers, the discreet Conservatives of South, and Wall and State-sts., and flibustiering tatterdemalions of the grog shop and the purlieu; the Northern Loco-Foco Free Soilers, Barnburners, and anti-Renters, the River and Harbor Improvement Democracy of the North West and the Tariff Democracy of Pennsylvania, and the Free Traders every where; the compromise men, and the States Rights men of Mississippi, and the Disunionists of South Carolina, and along with these diverse classes the whole of Silver Greyism, under whatever term or name it may be known in its various localities and which may prehaps be better defined as the anti-progressive wing of the late Whig party.—So that, in fact, the vote for General Scott is not the vote for the Whig party, but the vote merely of the great core of that party, pared close on all sides, and without any adventitous aid from any source whatever.

In such a manner has the popular vote for Pierce and King been swollen to its vast proportions. Of such a motley, piebald crowd, is the party composed which just now has succeeded in the name of Democracy, rags and velvet, pitch and perfumery, huge-paws and white kids, the nabob in his carriage, and the shoeless loafer on foot, have all crowded together at the polls, each depositing his vote for the lucky accidents of a National Democratic Convention.

"Tar and feathers!" was the disciptive appellation applied by Mr. Webster to the Whig ticket when the nomination of Scott and Graham was announced to him. But what ingenuity can supply a term which shall characterize this enormous sweltering heap of political mosaic work, which has thus been suddenly called into existance and now rears its leviathan proportions in our midst? How sublimely foroible to call such a heterogeneous pile, drawn together and built up from all quarters and all parties, the Democratic, or a Democratic party? The term may be useful to serve a purpose, but it is anything but truly descriptive. Without the aids of an external pressure, such an unorganised incongruous, gelatinous mass must soon go to peices of its own shaking. It is a sort of political blanc manger which, if left to its intrinsic cohesiveness, must speedily fall asunder.—Let it go. We do not propose to play the part of a mold to keep it in form.—N. Y. Tribune.

Convenient.—"A young man about town" has an overcoat with a drunk side, and a sober side. Ever since the election he has been trying to purchase a ferkin of butter to take to market on speculation. He says he is bound to have a "time of it" for once if it takes every cent of the profits!

Home Items.

Westport.—We are informed that Mr. Jackson will start his furnace in the spring.

Keeseville.—Goulding, Green and Conro are putting up a large and extensive addition to their Machine Shop.

New Advertisements.—See those from Burlington, also those of Boynton & Smith, Morris, Ausable House and others.

NEWCOMB.—A friend writing from this town says: "Newcomb is deserted on account of the stoppage of the iron works. 'Oh, for a tariff for this vast wilderness!"

PORT HENRY.—It is said that the Furnace at this place so long idle, and in litigation is soon to be started again, with an addition of a Rolling mill and Nail works.

THE CHILDREN'S MEETING.—This monthly meeting of the children of the Baptist Society will take place at the vestry of that Church on Sabbath evening next, at 6 o'clock. The exercises are very interesting, and we advise a full attendance of all who are interested in moral and religious improvement.

THANKSGIVING.—Thursday next is the day recommended by the Governor as a day of fasting & prayer. At this place a sermon is to be preached by Mr. Mattocks, and we presume places of business will be closed. It is highly proper and beneficial in a National and individual point of view, that all our public days be strictly observed.

Cardwell, has gone South, and he left word with us to say to our readers that he should return with the largest, best, and cheapest assortment of Ready Made clothing ever exhibited in Keeseville. We have no reason to doubt his word any more than we have that Eve Ate the apple. At least, either can be found out by calling at his shop.

NOTICE.

Essex County—Land Sale.

The Sale commences at the Court House in Elizabethtown on the first Tuesday (7th day) of December next at 10 o'clock, A. M.

A list of the lands to be sold and other particulars are contained in the "Supplement" to the Republican.

Safford E. Hale Esq. of Elizabethtown is County Treasurer.

CROWNPOINT.—The Rev. L. S. Herrick, for twenty five, or thirty years the resident Pastor of the Congregationalist church of that place is about to remove to Fair Haven, Vt., and to take charge of a congregation at that place. Mr. Herrick is one of those laborious, conscientious, and exemplary men, whose place it will be almost impossible to supply.

RAIL ROADS.—Three routes on the West side of Lake Champlain are now undergoing examination. No little interest is manifested by the friends of each, and we trust, the whistle of one or more of them will be heard amid our hills ere many months roll round. A convention of the friends of the Lake route was to have been held at whitehall on the evening of the 17th instant.

REVENGED.—A coon skin, dressed in black, was found dangling upon a rope over the Gazette Office a while ago and it is said that the Editor of that paper took it into his office and pounded it with the utmost vehemence, and in the highest pitch of anger as long as his strength held out. The damage and the dignity of the performance compares favorably with his pitch into the address of the Chairman of the Whig County Committee.

CHARMED.—We do not doubt that the Editor of the Gazette would be really glad to "lose sight" of us if he could. The columns of the Republican evidently have a fascination for him which he cannot resist. We should advise him to employ his leisure in writing another book to be entitled, "a laughable farce—or advancing and retreating as displayed by the Editor of the Northern Gazette during the Campaign of 1852." It would be a work peculiarly adapted to that Editor's, ability, and we venture to assert that the success of the Lake Outlaw would bear no comparison to it.

STEAMBOATS.—The only through boats now running are the States, and Burlington, whose captains are discharging their duties in the most agreeable manner.—Old prejudices are giving way, and it turns out that a captain of an "Old Line" boat may be a pretty clever fellow after all, and that illbreeding may be found on an opposition.

The Whitehall has gone into Harbor for repairs in consequence of a serious accident. The Sherman has not been seen in our waters for several weeks. The reason seems to be a mystery. Some say she would not "pay." This surely cannot be the reason, whatever the fact may be because she was built out of pure patriotism to accommodate the public. Others say she has at last got caught in the law. We doubt this from the success with which she previously eluded its grasp. Others yet say she has been purchased by the Saratoga and Washington Rail Road Company, and further, that some way O. S. Burton has been employed by that company to get up a line to take the Lake next season.—Rumor says that line will be composed of the Sherman and the new boat now being built at whitehall. We should not wonder!

Time will award to Mr. Burton, and his officers superior abilities in steamboat managing. We ought not to omit to mention that the original Stock-holder [illegible] man are likely to get t[illegible] our readers will be g[illegible] That is as it should be.

Surplus Venom.

The Editor of the Northern Gazette is determined not to allow this election to pass without leaving a sting behind. Two attempts of this kind have been made as uncalled for and unnecessary as they are ungentlemanly, and unworthy of a man who occupies an Editor's chair. One was upon Mr. Simmons, whose pure and unblemished reputation, should shield him from a personal attack. His letter to Mr. Whitley is public property, and the proper subject of criticism, but there were portions of that article which seemed to have been deliberately designed to offend. The other is an attempt to drag up something to the injury of Col. Williams. The maliciousness of the attempt and the failure are equally glaring. The attack is a cowardly effort to injure a man for doing his duty.

We make large allowances for the Editor in view of the very significant results about here, but when he stoops to base attacks he shall not go unrebuked.

When it is known that that Editor received his education about ale houses and theatres these diatribes will be appreciated.

County Printing.

The Republican and the Post were selected by the Supervisors for the publication of the laws &c. The Gazette is pleased to indulge in some strictures upon the whig portion of the board for not selecting that paper. In regard to that, we have only to say, that merit always receives its just reward! The Gazette long since forfeited its claims to this benefit, and besides that, the Editor went down to the Valley with the vain idea of having the Gazette and the Post selected. As well might he have asked the whigs to commit suicide as to abandon their own organ. At all events the Gazette should be selected or the patronage in Clinton Co. should be taken from the whig. After getting a flea in his ear he left for home, and the result was as might have been expected. The editor "licks the hand that smites him," and that is well. He not only had the pleasure of going to the Valley, and of coming back again, but of showing what weakness and folly can do for a man. To cut this matter short, however, and place the truth in a nutshell, we will state what is simply the fact in the case: The selection of the Gazette was not desired by either party.—This is the wrong latitude for adventurers.

The Right Kind of Talk.

The following from the Poughkeepsie Eagle is not wide of the mark. We say, too, don't be alarmed—keep cool—be patient—see the play out—it is a long road that never turns, (and the one we are no Judge:—)

DON'T BE ALARMED.—We are surprised to find a few Whi s considerably disheartened with the result of the election just closed and talking about giving it up, giving a reason, that the loco focos have made a general sweep have carried everything.—Now in our view of the case, since we are beaten, the best thing about it is the very sweep over which some of our friends are frightened. The sweep has been so great that it puts the locofoco party in the worst possible position for the future, with such a vast burden of expectants of party favor, three-fourths of them without a particle of principle, that among the first movements they will be in a chaos of strife, with quarrels and contentions of all kinds that will rend the party in pieces before Gen. Pierce has been three months in the White House, if not before he can get there. Besides having all their own party papers to take care of, in the large cities, all over the south and west, and many other parts of the country, the loco focos have got thousands of Whigs, Native Americans and all sorts of hungry political non descripts on their hands, all democrats for the day, but ready to bolt the moment they find they can get nothing. Many who have no claim for anything will get the best places, and thus thousands of the faithful will be disgusted and driven off.

Instead, therefore, of this being a time for despondency, it is the very time to take courage; the day for his reverseses to end and their triumph to begin. All we have to do is to have a little patience and we will soon begin to hear the music.

After the defeat of Henry Clay in 1844, and the election of James K. Polk, owing to general despondency among the Whigs, and no other cause, the Loco Focos made out tolerably fair in the elections of 1845, although even in them the Whigs generally had the best of it, but in 1846 and '47 we beat them everywhere, and the scene ended in their complete overthrow in 1848. The trouble then was, as it is now, they fought only for the spoils, and having no principle to stand upon, as soon as it was found that said spoils would not hold out, a general explosion took place. Let no Whig be frightened or discouraged then, for they will soon see there is no necessity for it.

Essex and Clinton Co. Fairs.

(From the Journal of the State Society.)

ESSEX FAIR.—For the first time we visited Essex county, and were greatly disappointed, and most agreeably, as to its agricultural character. We met the farmers at their annual show, and the exhibition was in the highest degree creditable in the stock and dairy departments; and in fruits and vegetables was remarkably fine, and in quality, unsurpassed. The domestic hall, most tastefully arranged, was filled with articles that did great credit to the ladies of the county. The Editor of the Essex County Post, in noticing our efforts to meet the wishes of the farmers in the address which was delivered, remarks:

"The address of B. P. JOHNSON, Esq., Secretary of the State Society, was an admirable production. It was eminently practical, and enriched throughout by incidents and anecdotes of the speaker's experience at the World's Fair, at which, our readers will recollect, Mr. JOHNSON was agent for New York. Appealing as it did to the common sense of his audience, it made a strong impression, and not a few of the speaker's terse sentences will be treasured up and remembered to the lasting benefit of his hearers. A copy was requested for publication, and we hope to be able to lay it before our readers.

"On the whole the Society has every reason to take new courage at the success of this, their second fair. The good efforts of last year's fair were clearly manifest at this, and we see no reason why there should be any pause in the advance which is now making. When Mr. WATSON shall have completed his survey of the county, our farmers will be enabled to work intelligently, and we shall begin to take the rank as an agricultural county, to which we are naturally entitled. All aiders of this consummation have our hearty good wishes, and will find in us willing assistants to the extent of our abilities."

We are greatly indebted to Judge Hand, Mr. Watson, President, and Mr. Hale, the Secretary, and others, for attentions while at Elizabethtown, by which we were enabled to make ourselves familiar with the agricultural condition and prospects of the county.

From Essex, we went to Clinton county, where we delivered the address before the society. The exhibition, in some of the departments, was a creditable one—especially in horses. The Black Hawks were shown in great strength here, as well as in Essex. From some local cause, the exhibition in this county was not equal to former years; we saw enough, however of the sterling farmers of this county, to be satisfied that another year will witness renewed efforts in every department to bring up their exhibition to a higher mark than it has yet attained.

WHAT A BOY CAN DO.—In passing along one of our streets the other day, a little fellow fell in with an old salt, who was shivering with three sheets in the wind.

"Ship ahoy!" hailed the tar, and the little chap hauled up alongside. "Where may be the Seaman's Mansion?"

The lad proffered to show him; and they held along together; the sailor steering very widely; sometimes hard up as though he had struck a heavy sea, and then yawning off to the right or left as the case might be.

"I am not exactly water-logged," said he "but have took too much of the deck load on, and my top-hamper is rather heavy for my ballast, eh! A little too much of the critter aboard—hic! you understand Shun the rum, the blue ruin my little man as you'd avoid Timbertoes. Shiver my top sail! but it has been the ruin of me. Here I have a wife and two little ones—one a youngster about the same age as yourself—in Boston, and some property besides; but the Devil has placed a barrier between us, in the shape of a can of grog. Shun the critter, my lad, as you'd shun a pestilence."

The lad promised to bear in mind his advice; and then asked why he did not sign the Temperance pledge.

"And where may that Temperance pledge be found?" inquired he

His young comrade informed him that there was to be a temperance meeting at the Exchange that evening, and offered to go with him if he would sign the pledge.

"I'll go; come in here my little one (by this time they have arrived opposite the Seaman's Mansion), and take supper with me. As soon as we have got ballast in, we'll haul up for this said Temperance meeting. Stave in my bulworks if we won't.

The little fellow stuck to him, and as soon as supper was over went to the Temperance meeting, where the old salt signed the pledge. As he did so, he remarked that whenever he was tempted to drink, he would think of that little boy's care for his welfare. We doubt not, that the warm-hearted old tar will keep the pledge so long as his "timbers hold together." The next day he went to sea; not forgetting to call upon his juvenile friend before his departure. And he assured him that he would seek his wife and family on his return. So much for the influence of a child.—Portland Bulletin.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.—This Magazine stands decidedly at the head of the fashionable Monthlies. The number for Dec. has already been on our table for some days. In polite literature, in plates, and in lessons of practical utility it stands unrivalled.

MR. EDITOR:—The following appeared in the Northern Gazette of this date.

For the purpose of giving it a wider circulation, please give it a place in your paper.

Yours Truly,

A. B. KINGSLAND.

TO THE PUBLIC.

I do not usually care to notice the attention of bar room and street revilers, but the Election and its results have this Fall stirred up some of the billious patriotism of our Free Sile Gentlemen.

One of the firm of E. & J. D. Kingsland and Co., of this village, has for the past few months devoted himself to what he calls the Fillmore whigs or "Silver-greys," with his choicest kind of abuse. And in relation to myself particulary he devotes himself in misrepresenting facts and stating falsehoods.

I know that in presence of strangers he charges that I have been treacherous to the whig party, and that I said before the Election that I wished I was comfortably seated in the democratic party, &c.

I charge A. B. Kingsland with falsehood and villany in maliciously slandering me. If the vile wretch had confined his remarks to acquaintances, I wo'd not stoop to notice him but for weeks past I am informed he has been busy in oyster cellars and saloons, traducing and vilifying me in the choicest "Bowery boy" language.

AND WARRANTED MADE

substantial, and the sewing to last as long as the cloth, (and not run together as much of the clothing brought from a foreign market generally is.) Thankful for the very liberal and increased patronage I have received from the citizens generally. I trust by a continued effort to please the most difficult, I shall merit a continuance of past favors. My arrangements with New York, are such that I am advised of any changes of style, that occur from month to month, and thus am able to gratify those who are disposed to adopt the change. Cutting as usual done in the most careful manner and with promptness.

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise. Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, i [illegible] tl.

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 6,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, disease of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, all ough vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend, will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3 000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for,

DR. VICHOL'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated, Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address, All communications destroyed or returned

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

AGRICULTURAL WARE-HOUSE AND SEED STORE.

DAVEY & ALLEN,

No. 8, COLLEGE STREET, BURLINGTON, Vt.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep breaking up, flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, ac., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Gedde's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batcheider's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits: We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction.

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mills, Saw ence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

MARRIAGE

HAPPINESS AND COMPETENCE.

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life, broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life in an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefitted by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the fall consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

MELANCHOLY AND STARTLING

To behold the sickness and suffering endured by many a wife for many years, from causes simple and controllable, easily remedied—or better still,—not incurred, if every

WIFE AND MOTHER

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (within the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By becoming in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S

Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, 50 cts

[ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.]

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE, WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is so conducive to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

All that piece and parcel of land lying and being in said town of Ticonderoga, being the westerly part of a lot of land formerly leased by Samuel Deal to Jonathan Drury, and known on a map of said land as lot No. 51, beginning at a maple stake standing in the east line of a lot of land lately conveyed to the said Almerin Smith, by the said Thomas Wheeler thence running south eighty two degrees east forty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty degrees thirty minutes east, eight rods to a stake and stones, thence north eight two degrees west, forty rods to the stake and stones, thence south eight degrees thirty minutes west, eighty rods to the place of beginning. Containing within said bounds twenty acres. Excepting from off the said lot two acres, conveyed by Samuel Deal to the Congregational Meeting House, and Society of Ticonderoga, and one half acre to the Corporation of St. Paul's Church, also in said town.

Also, all that piece parcel or tract of land situate, lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga aforesaid, and bounded as follows:

Beginning at a stake standing in the north east corner of a lot of land formerly owned by James Jones, and conveyed by him to the said Smith, and now in his possession; thence running south eighty degrees east, twenty eight chains and sixty-three links to a stake, thence south eight degrees and forty-five minutes west, nineteen chains 70 links to a stake standing in the north line of Edward McCaughin's land, thence north eighty degrees west, 28 chains and 63 links to a stake, thence in a straight line to the place of beginning. Containing 56 acres and one-third of an acre be the same or less or less.

Also all that certain other lot adjoining being a part of the Holcomb and Jones farm bounded on the south and west by the highway leading from Ticonderoga to Crown Point on the east by lands formerly owned by Wm. Stewart now McCaughin and on the north by the highway leading past John Ledwitch's farm and residence and on the south by said McCaughin's land.

Also, all that certain farm in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as the Lake farm containing about 350 acres, being lot No. one and three in the McIntosh Patent, in the possession of Charles F. Hammond and Allen Penfield, about 75 acres adjoining part of lot No. same patent now in possession of Geo. Clark

Also, all that certain other lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as part of lot No. James Jones farm, sold and conveyed by Almerin Smith, to Alva Bennett in the year 1847. and now in the possession of said Bennett bounded and described as follows: beginning at a stake and stones in the easterly line of lands belonging to Francis Arthur Esq. being also the south west corner of the William Canfield farm, thence along the southerly line of said Canfield's land, south 80 degrees east, 5 chains and 8 links to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to Ticonderoga village, thence along the same course 30 degrees east, 31 chains and 25 links to a stake, then north 86 degrees west, 25 chains to a stake standing in a ditch or drain and being also in the easterly line of said Arthur's land, thence along the same north 10 3-4 degrees east, 26 chains and 76 links to the place of beginning, containing 40 acres of land.

Also, all that certain lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, commonly called the comb lot now in possession of Almerin Smith, Charles H. Bennett, and sold and conveyed by the said Almerin Smith to them in the year 1847, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning in the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Upper Falls in Ticonderoga, being the north east corner of Sylvanus Bennett's farm. thence along the north line of said Bennett's farm north 80 degrees west. 32 chains and 14 links to a stake in the east line of Gustavus N. Wicker's land. thence along the same and along part of the east line of Francis Arthur's land, north 10 3-4 degrees east. 14 chains and 85 links to a stake standing in a ditch or drain, thence south 86 degrees east, 25 chains to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Lower Falls in Ticonderoga, thence along the same south 8 degrees east. 10 chains and 80 links to the centre of the first above mentioned highway, thence southerly along the same 9 chains to the place of beginning containing 48 acres and 71-100 of an acre of land.

Also, a certain other lot in Ticonderoga aforesaid, now in possession of Jeremiah O'Brien bounded on the south by the road leading past John Ledwitch's land and residence on the east by said Ledwitch's lands, on the north by lands of Alexander McCambridge and on the west by lands of Wm A. Gilthur containing fifty acres or thereabouts.

Also a certain other lot piece or parcel of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid lying and being on the south and west side of the highway leading from the Lower Falls to the street called or Crown Point between the former dwelling house of the said Almerin Smith burnt a few years since, and the present dwelling house of Edward McCaughin, being the same lot sold by the said Smith to the said McCaughin in 1847, and now owned by him containing by estimation about 14 acres, originally part of lands belonging to Stephen and Silas Sayre.

Also, all that certain piece or parcel of situate lying and being in the town of Schroon, Co. and State aforesaid on the west side of Lake George and comprehended in the bounds of a tract of land granted by Letters patent under the great seal of the state of N. Y., to James Caldwell, Robert Clellen, and Robert Cochran and is more particularly known and distinguished by the lot No. one hundred and forty seven being a division of said tract bounded as follows:

Beginning at the southwest corner of No. one hundred and forty four being the lot No. 144, 145, 146, 147, and runs thence along the south line of No. 146 south 25 chains to lot No. 148, thence along the same east 40 chains to lot No. 144, thence along the same north 25 chains to the place of beginning, containing Poetry.

(Written for the Republican.)

'Tis but a day since Spring was here.

'Tis but a day since spring was here,
Scattering blessings far and near;
Since wood-born flowers, with modest look,
First stooped to kiss the laughing brook—
Since earth, that drank the evening dew,
Smiled every morning fresh and new;
Since in the new-leaved grove were heard
Glad songs from many a bright winged bird—
Since all of nature seemed replete
With youth, and bloom, and blessings sweet—
Since hills were clad in rich array—
Since spring was here—'tis but a day.

And yet I listen—and I hear
Songs of the declining year;
I look about me, and behold
The year already growing old,
Sombre and still the day is now—
Old age is on the forest's brow;
The earth her smiles hath all withdrawn,
And flowers are faded, withered, gone;
The hill and vale are green no more—
The mountain peak is bare and hoar,
In forest paths, with moss o'er grown,
Pale, withered leaves are thickly strewn—
And all that bloomed in youthful spring
Is faded now, and withering.
In yonder field, now brown and nude,
The cricket chirps in solitude.
And far down in a pasture dell
Tinkles a solitary bell;
And every far off sound I hear
Strikes sadly on the watchful ear.
At night the wind with heavy breath,
Sighs fitfully, like groans ere death!
What means it! 'tis the struggling sighs,
The labored breath when summer dies.
And yet, though all around is gloom,
The night winds whisper of the tomb—
Though flowers are gone, and hills are scar,
'Tis but a day since spring was here!

'Tis but a day since youth was here,
With buoyant hope, and joy and cheer;
Since days passed on with pleasures rife,
And every pulse beat high with life—
Since time flew past on airy wing,
And life was one perennial spring—
Since years of pleasures ware away;
Since youth was here—'tis but a day!

And yet—I feel it in my veins—
The spring has gone, the summer wanes.
The blood once hot is waxing cold.
Youth, Youth is gone I'm growing old!
My cheeks are marked with years and cares—
My locks are thick with silver hairs,
Infirm upon my staff I bow.
For age is written on my brow.
Full well I know, and yield the strife—
It is the autumn of my life!

And yet, although my locks are hoar,
With many winters frosted o'er—
Though bowed my form, and dim my sight,
Till day seems mingled into night—
Though weak, infirm, I tremble now,
With age deep graven on my brow—
Though death, ago, even death, is near,
'Tis but a day since youth was here!

Thus, ere we know it, spring is fled—
The flowers of yesterday are dead;
Thus frosty age comes on in haste,
The bloom of early life to waste.
Yet when the tender flower fails,
And chill and fierce the autumn gales
Scatter its withered leaves abroad,
It drops its seed upon the sod;
And when old winter ends its strife,
That seed quickens into life,
And that sweet flower will quit its tomb
And blush again in vernal bloom.
So 'tis with men—first doomed to death—
Like the frail flowers that perisheth!
Yet, when he endeth life's brief term,
He leaves an undecaying form
To spring up into fairest bloom,
Immortal youth beyond the tomb!

The Little Outcast.

BY MRS. DENISON.

"Mayn't I stay, ma'am? I'll do anything you give me—cut wood, go after water, and do all your errands."

The troubled eyes of the speaker were filled with tears. It was a lad that stood at the outer door, pleading with a kind looking woman, who still seemed to doubt the reality of his good intentions.

The cottage sat by itself on a bleak moor, or what in Scotland would have been called such. The time was near the latter end of September, and a fierce wind rattled the boughs of the two only naked trees near the house, and fled with a shivering sound into the narrow door-way, as if seeking for warmth at the blazing fire within.

Now and then a snow-flake touched with its soft chill the cheek of the listener, or whitened the angry redness of the poor boy's benumbed hands.

The woman was loth to grant the boy's request, and the peculiar look stamped upon his features, would have suggested to any mind an idea of depravity far beyond his years.

But her woman's heart could not resist the sorrow in those large, but by no means handsome grey eyes.

"Come in at any rate till the good man comes home; there, sit down by the fire; you look perishing with cold;" and she drew a rude chair up to the warmest corner, then, suspiciously glancing at the child from the corners of her eyes, she continued setting the table for supper.

Presently came the tramp of heavy shoes; the door was swung open with a quick jerk, and the "good man" presented himself, wearied with labor.

A look of intelligence passed between his wife and himself; he too scanned the boy's face with an expression not evincing satisfaction but nevertheless, made him come to the table, and then enjoyed the zest with which he dispatched his supper.

Day after day passed, and yet the boy begged to be kept though still, to memory, and worked so heartily, they would retain him.

One day in the middle of winter, a pedlar, long accustomed to trade at the cottage, made his appearance, and disposed of his goods readily, as if he had been waited for.

"You have a boy out there splitting wood, I see," he said, pointing to the yard.

"Yes; do you know him?"

"I have seen him," replied the pedlar, evasively.

"And where—who is he? what is he?"

"A jail bird;" and the pedlar swung his pack over his shoulder; "that boy, young as he looks, I saw in court myself, and heard his sentence—'ten months; he's a hard one. You'd do well to look keerfully after him."

Oh! there was something so horrible in the word jail—the poor woman trembled as she laid away her purchases, nor could she be easy till she called the boy in, and assured him that she knew that dark part of his history.

Ashamed, distressed, the child hung down his head; his cheeks seemed bursting with the hot blood; his lips quivered, and anguish was painted as vividly upon his forehead as if the word were branded into the flesh.

"Well," he muttered, his whole frame relaxing as if a burden of guilt or joy had suddenly rolled off, "I may as well go to ruin at once—there's no use of my trying to do better—everybody hates and despises me—nobody cares about me—I may as well go to ruin at once."

"Tell me," said the woman, who stood off far enough for flight if that should be necessary—"how came you to go so young to that dreadful place? Where was your mother?—where?"

"Oh!" exclaimed the boy, with a burst of grief that was terrible to behold, "oh! I haint no mother—oh! I haint had no mother ever since I was a baby. If I'd only had a mother," he continued, his anguish growing vehement, and the tears gushing out from his strange looking grey eyes. "I wouldn't 'a been bound out, and kicked and cuffed, and laid onto with whips. I wouldn't 'a been saucy, and got knocked down and ran away, and then stole because I was hungry. Oh! I haint got no mother—I haint got no mother—I haven't had no mother since I was a baby."

The strength was all gone from the poor boy, and he sank on his knees sobbing great choking sobs, and rubbing the hot tears away with his poor knuckles. And did that woman stand there unmoved? Did she coldly bid him pack up and be off—the jail bird?

N—no; she had been a mother, and though all her children slept under the cold sod in the church-yard—she was a mother still.

She went up to that poor boy, not to hasten him away, but to lay her fingers kindly, softly on his head—to tell him to look up, and from hence forth find in her a mother. Yes, she even put her arm about the neck of that forsaken, deserted child—she poured from her mother's heart sweet, womanly words, words of counsel and tenderness.

Oh! how sweet was her sleep that night, how soft her pillow! She had linked a poor suffering heart to hers by the most silken, the strongest bands of love; she had plucked some thorns from the path of a little, sinning, but striving mortal. None but the angels could witness her holy joy, and not envy.

Did the boy leave her?

Never—he is with her still; a vigorous, manly, promising youth. The low character of his countenance has given place to an open pleasing expression, with depth enough to make it an interesting study. His foster father is dead, his good foster mother aged and sickly, but she knows no want. The once poor outcast is her only dependence, and nobly does he repay the trust.

"He that saveth a soul from death, hideth a multitude of sins."—[Olive Branch.

A Bostonian returning from a tour through Europe, relates to the Boston Journal the following incident, which took place at St. Petersburgh: "Several of our shipmates were on shore having 'a good time'; when in passing through the square containg the colossal statute of Peter the Great, one of them declared he would have a ride on that horse; and no sooner said, than he made a leap over the iron fence, and actually commenced climbing up over the tail of the horse, and before the astonished crowd could interfere to stop the movement, the captain was actually seated on the colossal horse, behind the Great Peter. The Yankee had accomplished his purpose, and taken his ride on Peter's horse, but the most difficult part of his enterprise was still before him; viz: to escape from the horse without falling into the hands of the guard, who are constantly stationed around the statue for its protection; and here our captain signally failed. He was arrested in his descent from his lofty seat, and found that there was, in very deed, but a step between the sublime and the ridiculous, as he was led away from Peter's statue to prison. He was tried, convicted, and fined $6,000 for his folly. By the interposition of the American minister, the fine was slightly reduced, and was then paid by the captain's consignees, and he was released from prison after only a few days' confinement. When the captain remonstrated with the judge at the largeness of the fine, saying it was rather an expensive ride, the judge good-naturedly replied that the captain never before rode so expensive a horse.—Household Work.

The Blending of the Seasons.

I looked over the face of nature. The trees were withered, the fields stubbled and brown. The mountains startled me with their naked majesty. Where were the flowers? where the gorgeons mantling of forests and hills? where the hues of heaven that had painted an Eden on every leaf? Soon to be obscured by tempests, and buried underneath snows! I wept over the threatened desolation; wept that for all things there must come a winter.

A form of surpassing beauty moved gently by my side.

"Why weepest thou, oh mortal?" she saie. 'Without rest nothing can live. So hath the bountiful Father ordained sleep, that, coming with sweet odors on her wing, closes thine eyes to the life pictures that Time and Care heaver wear in painting.—Spring, Summer, and Autumn too, take their rest."

Then holding one hand over the earth, a great fissure was rent therein, and while I looked down in wonder, she clasped me in her arms, and we descended together,

I felt no fear the darkness enwrapped us and the way seemed endless. But anon a soft light broke out—it deepened, flashing at intervals, and I saw yet far below what seemed a city of palaces.

'Do then mortals live in the depths of the earth?" I asked.

"Yon four palaces," she replied, pointing to the fairest and whitest, "belong to Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. All around are granaries where choice seeds are deposited and impliments of labor. Here are locked up the airs and the fruits, and the snows of the seasons."

We stopped at the palace of Spring.—Earthly splendor was more than eclipsed by the shining pillars, the fresh, noble statues that adorned the outer of these structures. Silver and gold lined the inner walls, everywhere surpassing richness and magnificence were visible. I was led up the grand entrance, through wide halls into a spacious chamber.

There softly sleeping upon a couch, whose regal hangings were of a delicate green, bordered with gold, laid a young maiden; in her hand the first flower of the year, now drooping.

Her cheek was somewhat pale, her tresses like amber clouds; soft breezes played around her pillow. I smelt the odor of early violets as her breath came gently between her parted lips. Gazing around, I was startled to observe that what I had taken for statuary, were living beings watching her rest. Some of them held seeds in their hands, others spades and picks upon which they leaned thoughtfully—others ploughs, ready to guide them at her first command.

"Spring taketh her rest," said my guide smiling.

"I was next ushered into another palace, similar in construction to the first. Upon a rosy couch reclined a glorious form.—Never saw I aught so beautiful as her face. Her hair, a golden brown, laid in thick masses against her cheeks, upon which deepened the rich crimson of the sea-shell. At every footstep I trod upon flowers, yet crushed them not. On every side sat maidens braiding wreaths and tinting fruit buds. A gentle rustling like the waving of boughs, and the sighing of zephyrs thro' long grasses, a soft twittering of birds, a murmer of laughing voices, and a scent of ripening fruit saluted me. Warm breezes stole about my temples giving a soft languor, and I longed for the shade of a great tree. The bleating of lambs, the rippling of streams, the musical dripping of water falls, mingled delightfully together. And summer still slept with smiles on her lips.

Methought I entered then the palace of Autumn. Everywhere I saw joy and gladness. Peals of music burst forth; shouts like those in harvest time came up from the terraces. Autumn had just left the upper earth.

Though wearied with her labors, she was more beautiful than her sisters. Night black were her heavy ringlets; night black her lustrious eyes—dark and deeply tinted her full round cheek. She walked between golden sheaves, and methought they bowed to her. Swart attendants followed, loaded with corn, grapes, apples, pears, and all the roots of the earth. About their persons were wound wreaths of gorgeons flowers; their garments glittered, woven with the silk of corn. Now and then a sharp wind whistled by me as the maidens hastened to lead away their queen. Mournful symphonies now commenced, fitful and gentle as the falling of the leaves. I heard a noise like ten thousand great wings beating the air, and but a solitary twitter, it might be that of a wounded bird.

At the door of Winter's palace I paused. What had before seemed glistening marble, I saw was sparkling ice. Frostwork in wild grotesque designs lined all the pannels.—Great figures with cold eyes stood in the portals. Of a sudden a flourish of trumpets broke the stillness. Loud shouts filled me with awe, and peals of music issued from all the entrances. Tall figures in white mantles passed and re-passed, and in an inner chamber stood a kingly form, about which a hundreds persons seemed busy. Sharp and keen, his eyes darted everywhere. Like masses of crystal, his locks hung upon his massive shoulders.—When arrayed he seized an icy spear that reached from the floor to the extreme of the mighty dome, and shook it with a firm hand. Fierce winds leaped fro[m] eaves, whirling flakes of snow thick[ened] air, frost formed over his brow an[d] heavy on his locks. I heard shrieks lamenting voices. I saw that the

"None love me," he murmered.

He had hardly spoken, when with sweet strains came Spring, Summer, and Autumn, wrapped in white furs, and trembling with chill.

"We pity the king of the seasons," said one, and have come to offer him consolation.

"I," said Spring, "will give him some of my balmy airs, and my brightest days."

"I," said Summer, "will bequeath to our brother, my sunny skies, my deep blue of evening, and a few genial breezes."

"I," said Autumn, "will lend him some of my glorious evenings, with my moon as yellow as the harvest and my glittering stars. Besides, I have saved for him the choicest fruits of my labor. Let not our brother mourn, many hearts will rejoice at his going forth."

Then winter smiled and his smile came full upon me—I could no longer hate him.

And ever since, through his reign I have marked Spring days, Summer warmth, and and Autumn splendor. [M. A. D.

OBITUARY NOTICE

OF THE LATE

Dr. AARON F. GARDINER.

The act of doing justic to the memory of the dead belongs to unprejudiced minds, and should devolve upon those, who from their social relations with the deceased have opportunities of learning private character. As one who has known the subject of this sketch for many years, I deem it a duty I owe to him as a friend and fellow citizen to speak of him as he was. Doctor Gardiner (the youngest son of John Gardiner, was born at East Hampton, Long Island, on the 15th of January, 1785.—He received what was considered at that time a good elementary education at the Clinton Academy in his native place, and soon after chose Medicine as a profession suited to his taste. The wisdom of this choice was manifest by the success he met with in after years in the practice of a profession, to which he was ardently attached. The facilities afforded the Medical Students of that day were few indeed in comparison with those now enjoyed. But he availed himself of all those within his reach, and by an intense application to the science for several years, acquired thoroughly its rudiments, and proved himself worthy of the diploma which he received in the year 1808. In a short time he left the Island and went to Easton, Washington county, N. Y. where he practiced several years with a Doctor Mosher who atthat time had au extensive business. In a neighboring county he became acquainted with Martha Lathrop Pope, whom he soon after married and removed to Chester, New Jersey, about the year 1811. It was in this state that he may be said to have commenced his career as a Practitioner of Medicine, the arduous duties of which are known only to the profession. A stranger, with no recommendation but his talents, he appeared in the Medical field. He entered the lists with men about him, not youthful adventurers or charlatans, but with hoary headed vetcrans, men who had grown grey in the profession and whom time and favor had elevated to an eminence in society.—Such were his competitors. But under these unfavorable circumstances he wavered not, and by an unremitting ardor soon built up an extensive practice, which continued to increase during his residence in Chester, a period of sixteen years.

In the midst of a successful professional career, in the bosom of friends who were clustered closely about him, he was induced through the influence of relatives to remove northward, and accordingly went to Keeseville, Essex County, N. Y. in 1827. There being but few Physicians then in this vicinity, he immediately secured a respectable practice and established himself in favor and reputation with the inhabitants of this growing village.

Having continued the active duties of his calling for about twelve years in this place, he found that the prime of life was past, and that his health demanded a relaxation from the more arduous duties devolving upon a country practitioner and accordingly confined himself mostly to town practice. But a few Physicians of his age have devoted themselves more faithfully to the healing art, or have encountered more hardships in the practice of a profession, which perhaps more than any other is attended with that mental anxiety which soonest depresses the powers of life. The scientific followers of Æsculapius in every age (since Medicine has merited the title of a distinct science) have been called upon to combat not only disease, but the whims and caprices of mankind, a task more formidable than the famed Herculean labors of ancient story.

But amid all those false lights in Medicine, which from time to time have arisen in the camp of Quackery, he stood firm, a faithful sentinel to warn men of their danger in trusting to theories based upon unsubstantial fabrics. He lived to see many of these delusions disapperr, before the torch of scientific investigation; theories which for the time served to amuse more than benefit society; and he died in harness an advocate of the axiom; "that nothing should be received as truth in Medicine, which has not been thoroughly tested by experience."—

In his death the Profession have lost an ornament, society a useful member, the [illegible]. Perhaps no man in North[illegible]ork had a more extensive [illegible] the theory of Medicine in Doctor Gardiner. During a forty years he had been a was usually correct in his Diagnosis, having a retentive memory he was enabled to draw at will from his storehouse of facts treasured up from the best authors. He possessed a sound judgment which rendered him not only a bold, but a safe practitioner. He was not however like too many in the profession chained down to the exploded dogmas of the schools, but belonged rather to the Eclectics open to conviction and as an independent thinker ready to embrace truth in whatever garb she might appear. These are the outlines of the Professional character of our friend. But should I stop here I should leave the subject unfinished.

Amid the cares incident to his profession he still found leisure to devote his attention to a general course of reading. The English classics were his favorites, although the standard works in almost every department of literature were familiar to him,—Books were his companions with whom he held daily converse, and the midnight hour oft found him communing with his favorite authors. He possessed a correct dramatic taste and had a natural talent for Poetry, as was manifest by his occasional contributions to the Press. His style was decidedly unique and original, his forte the descriptive and sarcastic. He looked upon nature with a poets eye and drew his figures from her book with a graphic pen.

His conversational powers were of the first order, and his turn of mind social which rendered him an agreeable companion with young or old. Having a considerable relaxation from professional duties for the last few years of his life he entered with spirit into the various benevolent enterprises of the day and was found among the foremost in that band of Pioneers, whose object is to ameliorate the condition of man, and elevate the standard of morals in society. Firmness was a prominent trait in his character, yet he was corteous and respectful to those who chanced to differ with him in sentiment. He was cautious in forming an opinion, yet bold to declare it when formed and as firm as Giberalter in its maintenance. Like all positive characters he had strong friends and bitter enemies. But he has passed from our vision and they who would find him must seek him in the grave. By his removal from our midst the poor have lost a friend. His ear was attentive to the cry of the suffering and his presence a consolation at their feverish couch. To afford relief to this class in community who have but few to sympathize with them in their affliction, was to him a privilege and remuneration for professional services rendered the unfortunate, a secondary consideration.

"Interest, his soul ne'er swayed. He neither truckled to the great, nor bent the knee to Mammons shrine; Gold he accounted dross, and spurned all laws save those by virtue made. He heeded not the scoffs and sneers of men. Science his mind illumed, hope cheered his path, and when Death called him hence, his placid eye was lighted up by an approving conscience that gave assurance of eternal bliss."

I admit he had his falings—On these let the tear that pitieth human weakness fall. On these let the veil that covers human frailty rest.

As a father, as a christian, as a man, he acted well his part, let posterity do him justice.

It remains for us to take a brief survey of the closing scenes of his life. Until about four weeks previous to his death, he had enjoyed his usual measure of health, although at times during the past year he had been subject to paroxysms of "palpitation of the heart" these symptoms however would soon pass off and during the intermission his usual strength remained.—He regarded these affections as merely nervous in their character, and did not mistrust an organic affection of the heart.—But he thought amiss, for on the evening of the 10th of Sept., he was suddenly aroused from slumber by a sense of suffocation and oppression in the region of the heart. These symptoms however yielded in a measure to treatment, but left him in rather a feeble condition. From this time forward he seemed to be aware of the true nature of his complaint, and somewhat alarmed as to its final result. He said (in speaking of the suddenness of his late attack) he regarded it as a midnight cry, a warning to set his house in order ere he made his exit. But he had not deferred this preparation until a dying hour; for years before, in the full strength and vigor of manhood he had enlisted under the banner of the crucified Savior, and proved himself "a soldier of the cross."

Although sensible from the first as to the probable termination of his disease, still he did not despair, and being his own Physician promptly made use of the heroic remedies indicated in his complain. From fear he might be mistaken as to the nature of the disease, he reviewed carefully Medical authorities that had written upon "diseases of the heart as a speciality" and found alas: that the symptoms of his case were too clearly pointed out to be mistaken. He watched with an Eagle eye the effects of the medicine he had taken, as an able navigator when finding that his vessel by the force of the tempest is driving towards the breakers of some dangerous coast, as a forlorn hope casts out his sheet anchor and standing at the helm calmly awaits the result, so did our friend await his fate.—There is much to admire in the character of the man in circumstances like these.—Men may encounter death amid the turmoil of conflict, they may dare him in the deadly breach, but when he noiselessly glides into the solitary chamber and unfolds his dark ensign, then is it that the lion hearted murmer escaped him. On the contrary he was cheerful and continued conversing with his friends, until a few days before his death (when from a partial paralysis of his tongue he was unable to distinctly articulate. But even then he was concious of all that was transpiring around him, and his eye was lighted up an unusual fire, which gave evidence that his intellect was not obscured although nature was fast giving way.—He intimated that he wished all topics of an earthly nature to be excluded from the room as he wished to spend the remainder of his time in reflecting upon matters of a religious nature. He had desired a few days previous that his absent sons should be sent for that he might behold them once more before he died. On its being announced that they had arrived the exhausted powers of life seemed to rally for a time so that he was able to hold some conversation with them. But the sight of his children had been too severe a shock to his nervous system and the feelings of paternal love had overpowered him. The lamp of life was fast flickering in its socket and the final hour drew nigh. On Tuesday at 5 A. M. Oct, 12th his spirit took its flight.

Thus died in the full possession of his faculties, Doctor Gardiner, in the 67th year of his age. He died a christian Philosopher and he sleeps in Evergreen Cemetery in the outskirts of his adopted village, in sight of the Adirondac mountains whose lofty peaks he had trod and whose name he had perpetuated in poetic numbers.

Tell your Wife!

Yes, the only way is, to tell your wife just how you stand, Show her your balance-sheet. Let her look at the items. You think it will hurt her feelings. No it won't do any such thing. She has been taught to believe that money was with you, just as little boys think it is with their fathers,—terrible hard to be reached, yet inexhaustible. She has had her suspicions already. She has guessed you were not so prosperous as you talked. But you have su befogged your money affairs that she, poor thing, knows nothing about them. Tell it right out to her, that you are living outside of your income. Take her into partnership, and I'll warrant you'll never regret it. There may be a slight shower at first, but that's natural. Let her see your estimate, and when you come home again, she will show you that you have put her bills to high. True, she had an eight-dollar bonnet last winter, but "it is just as good as ever, a few shilings will provide it with new strings, and refit it a little;—the shape," she says, "is almost exactly as they wear them now." And you will be surprised to see how much less expensive she can make your wardrobe. She will surprise you with a new vest—not exactly unfamiliar some how, looking as if in another shape you had seen it before,—yet new as a vest, and scarcely costing a dollar where you had allowed five. Old cravats will experience a resurrection in her hands, coming out so rejuvenated that nobody but those that are let into the secret, would suspect that they are old friends in new shapes. The gown you were going to buy—out of what forgotten chest she has gathered the materials you cannot imagine— but there it is, comfortable and warm, and just the thing you wanted for the long winter evenings that are coming on as fast as the almanac will let them.

You will find a wonderful change in her tastes and appetites. Whereas, she always fancied what was a little out of season or just coming into market—now if beef is dear, she thinks "boiled mutton is delightful,—as tender as chicken." If land rises, and fish are plenty, she thinks, 'a striped bass is as good occasionally,' and always insists on having it Fridays. Whereas, before, she must hear all the musical celebrities,—now she is "out of all patience with these foreign signers. If Jenny Lind were to return and sing some of our own sweet airs, she'd like to hear her: but she has had enough of Italian. Extravagances, all written on the leger lines below or above, as if it were a sin to tarry long on the common stuff.

Before you have thought much about it you will find yourself spending most of your evenings at home, and such evenings too—so full of domestic enjoyment, and fireside pleasures, that you will look with wonder on the record of last year's expenses and marvel that you found time or relish for costly entertainments that so seriously taxed your porte-monaie.

My dear friend, if like Spain, your outgoes threaten to exceed your incomes, be sure and tell your wife of it. Nor in a tone and manner that will lead her to think you don't want her to buy furs this winter, but just as if you wanted a counsellor in the day of your trouble. And if she does not come up, heart and soul and most successfully to your relief, put me down for no prophet, and her for no worthy specimen of a Yankee lass.

The Newspaper.—There is no book so cheap as a newspaper; none as interesting, because it consists of a variety, measured and in suitable proportions as to time and quality. Being new every day or week, it invites to habits of reading, and is necessary to the individual and the community.

A gentleman out west had an Irish lad in his employ, and sent him out to grease the wagon. The lad, after being gone a considerable length of time, returned, when he was asked by his employer if he "greased the wagon?" "Yes, said he, "I have greased it all except those little sticks where the wheels run."

Voyage up Salt River.

From The Hartford Courant.

As we have voyaged the whole length of Salt River, up to the "head of sloop navigation," we are quite desirous that our readers should know what a time we had, and how we are satisfied with our new "location."

We started in the grand old steamer Connecticut, Capt. Steady-habits commander, with the rest of the large Whig fleet, on the evening of the second of November, on our cruise up the stream. As we entered the bay into which that famous river discharges its waters, there was an universal expression of grief throughout the whole fleet.—The first ebullition being over, we had then an opportunity," quiet, though sad," to mark the rapid progress of our voyage, and the interesting objects before us. As we passed up the bay, there loomed up before us the low sandy Cape Harbor Improvement; we gave its obstructions a wide berth and sighed as we silently bade it adieu for years. The wrecks of steamers were strewed all along its yellow sands. Cape Protection then showed its headland, The long breakwater, erected in 1842 against the dashing waves of the broad ocean, which rolled its billows from far England upon it had taken down and washed away; and foolishly, on the landward side of the point, another barrier had been built in '46, which only checked the current of the inland river. As we passed it, it enveloped in fog, which had settled in gloomy wreathes on the sides of Mount American-System that rose behind it. "Farewell," we said, "old landmark! Thou wilt guide our fleet to victory no more! Thy whole stupendous mass is to be carted off and deposited in the deep ocean of Free Trade! He who once stood proudly on thy top to cheer us on to the contest, sleeps the last long sleep of death, and his system has perished with him. It is marked on the tomb-stone, as the fruitless labor of one who would have established his country's prosperity, had faction permitted.

Soon after we approached the hidden rocks of Slavery Extension. Here a great debate sprung up in the different vessels of the fleet as to which side of the rocks we should pass. The contest grew exciting, when old Capt. Consideration settled the difficulty by remarking that it made no difference when we were going up the river

The old rocky shore of Point National Bank next presented itself. But the regular action of the current and tide had so fretted off the projecting rocks, that it was no longer dangerous. Here we passed the large Democratic fleet, coming down the bay, with streamers and pennons and flags flying, with bands of music playing, and the passengers shouting in the highest glee. What was rather strange, in all cases the British flag was flying above the American, and the shouts of "hurrah for England's interests" rent the air, while the bands played "God Save the King." The New-Hampshire, an old-fashioned, slow sailing craft, led the van, looking as if her model was a century old. She was the flag ship, and bore aloft on her mizzen a flag with the inscription "Virginia Resolutions of '98."—Franklin Pierce stood at her prow, smiling as the morning sun, his eye fixed steadily on the distant view of the White House. The rest of the fleet seemed vexed at the little progress which was made under the "98" flag. The squadroon of the West, under the command of Rear Admiral Douglas, were evidently determined to sail faster, as soon as the bay widened. Douglas had showed his cunning by so constructing his ensign that the side which turned towards the flag ship presented the motto of 'the Virginia Resolutions," while on the other was faintly written —"River and Harbor Improvement." He declared to his men that as soon as there was room enough to pass the Commodore, he should lead off himself, haul down the Virginia flag, and up with the black flag of piracy, with its skull and cross bones.

We passed very rapidly up the river, for the tide was setting strong in that direction. Gen. Scott examined with much curiosity both banks of the river as we sailed on.—It was the very first time that he had been on the stream, and everything was new to him. "I am not disheartened," said the old veteran. "I have troops of friends around me, who have fallen with me. My life has been devoted to the Republic, and I bow to its decisions now. This vote cannot blot out the record of my services from my country's history. Posterity will do me justice."

As we neared the extremity of the stream, we passed many beautiful country residences. At one of the finest, in his large cabbage garden, stood Martin Van Buren.—He had not yet recovered from his grief at seeing the Democratic fleet sail by without taking him on board.

"The buckwheat cake was in his mouth,
The tear was in his eye,"

We inquired for the Prince, and found that he had followed the fleet in a small skiff, and there were many fears entertained for his safety.

A little further up was Buchanan. Poor man! he looked haggard. The Democratic garment with which he had covered up his principles so long, was growing thin, and the old Federalliming showed through in many places.

On the next turn of the river we found Cass, wringing his hands in agony at the desertion of his friends. With coat and hat off, he was exclaiming amid "the noise and confusion" of the surf around him, in the words of the Captive Knight:

"They are gone! they have all passed by!
They in whose wars I had borne a part,
They that I loved with a brother's heart,
They have left me here to die!
Sound again, clarion! Clarion, rend thy blast!
Sound! for the Presidential dream of hope is past!"

Soon after we came to the place where the whole Free Soil party were disembarking. John P. Hale, in a very good natured frame of mind, was making preparations for a permanent residence, as he had no idea that four years would carry him down the stream again. Many of them were seated on the rocks, with long black poles, stirring up the mud of the stream, while certain hazy looking fellows were calling upon them to "agitate, agitate!" Most of the Massachusetts members were sitting in ent one, and we are, upon the whole, "as well as could be expected." The air is salubrious & invigorating, if we may judge by the hungry looks of the Democrats, as they passed us. The soil is fruitful, and produces a fine crop of regrets and unavailing resolutions, but we are determined not to cultivate despair.

Soon after our arrival, a large public meeting was called, which assembled near Cape turn-again. Hon. Stay-at-home Grumbler was appointed Chairman, and Job-Doo-Little, Esq., Secretary. Hon. Mr. Facing-bothways made some lacrymose remarks, which were promptly hissed down; when Mr. Stick-to-the-right Great-heart offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously passed:

Resolved, (1) That after mature deliberation, we come to the conclusion that we are rowed up Salt River.

Resolved, (2) That we are alarmed!

Resolved, (3) That every rooster of the settlement that crows once shall be immediately decapitated.

Resolved, (4) That in the investigation of the causes of our defeat, we do not think it is owing to Winfield Scott's splendid services, or to Franklin Pierce's littleness, but to the fact that we had not votes enough.

Resolved, (5) That we stay here until we go down stream again.

Resolved, (6) That in the words of the poet, we say, "it will never do to give it up so, Mr. Brown."

Democracy.

What is it? who can tell? A democrat of the Ausable Valley would say it is for protection. The party every where else would say No. In the West they say it is for the improvement of Rivers and Harbors, while in Va they say it is not. In some places it is Free Soil, in others disunion, and others still for the compromise. In the South West under the lead of Col. Benton they are for a National Road to California, in the face of the democratic platform, and though the Cumberland Road is a standing monument to democratic hostility to such an undertaking. Native Americans supported the democracy as the most reliable on that question, and the foreign vote went in for them pell mell for directly the opposite reason. What is democracy? The following from the N. Y. Tribune presents some of the phazes of the democracy of 1852 in a strong light.

The Piebald Party.

Never did a more heterogeneous compound of discordant materials enter into the composition of any one thing in this world than that which has just established the agency of Pierce & King as factors for the so-called Democratic party.

Not only have the rank and file of the sham Democracy gone en masse for these gentlemen, but they have received pretty nearly the unanimous suffrage of the "Foreign vote," the Native American vote, the drift of all sorts which always goes with the great current; the cotton, and trading and importing interests; the City and suburban aristocracy, the commercial agents, and the wealthy foreign and home bankers, the discreet Conservatives of South, and Wall and State-sts., and flibustiering tatterdemalions of the grog shop and the purlieu; the Northern Loco-Foco Free Soilers, Barnburners, and anti-Renters, the River and Harbor Improvement Democracy of the North West and the Tariff Democracy of Pennsylvania, and the Free Traders every where; the compromise men, and the States Rights men of Mississippi, and the Disunionists of South Carolina, and along with these diverse classes the whole of Silver Greyism, under whatever term or name it may be known in its various localities and which may prehaps be better defined as the anti-progressive wing of the late Whig party.—So that, in fact, the vote for General Scott is not the vote for the Whig party, but the vote merely of the great core of that party, pared close on all sides, and without any adventitous aid from any source whatever.

In such a manner has the popular vote for Pierce and King been swollen to its vast proportions. Of such a motley, piebald crowd, is the party composed which just now has succeeded in the name of Democracy, rags and velvet, pitch and perfumery, huge-paws and white kids, the nabob in his carriage, and the shoeless loafer on foot, have all crowded together at the polls, each depositing his vote for the lucky accidents of a National Democratic Convention.

"Tar and feathers!" was the descriptive appellation applied by Mr. Webster to the Whig ticket when the nomination of Scott and Graham was announced to him. But what ingenuity can supply a term which shall characterize this enormous sweltering heap of political mosaic work, which has thus been suddenly called into existance and now rears its leviathan proportions in our midst? How sublimely forcible to call such a heterogeneous pile, drawn together and built up from all quarters and all parties, the Democratic, or a Democratic party? The term may be useful to serve a purpose, but it is anything but truly descriptive. Without the aids of an external pressure, such an unorganized incongruous, gelatinous mass must soon go to peices of its own shaking. It is a sort of political blanc mangee which, if left to its intrinsic cohesiveness, must speedily fall asunder.—Let it go. We do not propose to play the part of a mold to keep it in form.—N. Y. Tribune.

Home Items.

Westport.—We are informed that Mr. Jackson will start his furnace in the spring.

Keeseville.—Goulding, Green and Conro are putting up a large and extensive addition to their Machine Shop.

New Advertisements.—See those from Burlington, also those of Boynton & Smith, Morris, Ansable House and others.

NEWCOMB.—A friend writing from this town says: "Newcomb is deserted on account of the stoppage of the iron works. 'Oh, for a tariff for this vast wilderness!'"

PORT HENRY.—It is said that the Furnace at this place so long idle, and in litigation is soon to be started again, with an addition of a Rolling mill and Nail works.

THE CHILDREN'S MEETING.—This monthly meeting of the children of the Baptist Society will take place at the vestry of that Church on Sabbath evening next, at 6 o'clock. The exercises are very interesting, and we advise a full attendance of all who are interested in moral and religious improvement.

THANKSGIVING.—Thursday next is the day recommended by the Governor as a day of fasting & prayer. At this place a sermon is to be preached by Mr. Mattocks, and we presume places of business will be closed. It is highly proper and beneficial in a National and individual point of view, that all our public days be strictly observed.

Cardwell, has gone South, and he left word with us to say to our readers that he should return with the largest, best, and cheapest assortment of Ready Made clothing ever exhibited in Keeseville. We have no reason to doubt his word any more than we have that Eve Ate the apple. At least, either can be found out by calling at his shop.

NOTICE.

Essex County—Land Sale.

The Sale commences at the Court House in Elizabethtown on the first Tuesday (7th day) of December next at 10 o'clock, A. M.

A list of the lands to be sold and other particulars are contained in the "Supplement" to the Republican.

Safford E. Hale Esq. of Elizabethtown is County Treasurer.

CROWNPOINT.—The Rev. L. S. Herrick, for twenty five, or thirty years the resident Pastor of the Congregationalist church of that place is about to remove to Fair Haven, Vt., and to take charge of a congregation at that place. Mr. Herrick is one of those laborious, consceintious, and exemplary men, whose place it will be almost impossible to supply.

RAIL ROADS.—Three routes on the West side of Lake Champlain are now undergoing examination. No little interest is manifested by the friends of each, and we trust the whistle of one or more of them will be heard amid our hills ere many months roll round. A convention of the friends of the Lake route was to have been held at whitehall on the evening of the 17th instant.

REVENGED.—A coon skin, dressed in black, was found dangling upon a rope over the Gazette Office a while ago and it is said that the Editor of that paper took it into his office and pounded it with the utmost vehemence, and in the highest pitch of anger as long as his strength held out. The damage and the dignity of the performance compares favorably with his pitch into the address of the Chairman of the Whig County Committee.

CHARMED.—We do not doubt that the Editor of the Gazette would be really glad to "lose sight" of us if he could. The columns of the Republican evidently have a fascination for him which he cannot resist. We should advise him to employ his leisure in writing another book to be entitled, "a laughable farce—or advancing and retreating as displayed by the Editor of the Northern Gazette during the Campaign of 1852." It would be a work peculiarly adapted to that Editor's, ability, and we venture to assert that the success of the Lake Outlaw would bear no comparison to it.

STEAMBOATS.—The only through boats now running are the States, and Burlington, whose captains are discharging their duties in the most agreeable manner.—Old prejudices are giving way, and it turns out that a captain of an "Old Line" boat may be a pretty clever fellow after all, and that illbreeding may be found on an opposition.

The Whitehall has gone into Harbor for repairs in consequence of a serious accident. The Sherman has not been seen in our waters for several weeks. The reason seems to be a mystery. Some say she would not "pay." This surely cannot be the reason, whatever the fact may be because she was built out of pure patriotism to accommodate the public. Others say she has at last got caught in the law. We doubt this from the success with which she previously eluded its grasp. Others yet say she has been purchased by the Saratoga and Washington Rail Road Company, and further, that some way O. S. Burton has been employed by that company to get up a line to take the Lake next season.—Rumor says that line will be composed of the Sherman and the new boat now being built at whitehall. We should not wonder!

Time will award to Mr. Burton, and his officers superior abilities aging. We ought not that the original Stockb

Surplus Venom.

The Editor of the Northern Gazette is determined not to allow this election to pass without leaving a sting behind. Two attempts of this kind have been made as uncalled for and unnecessary as they are ungentlemanly, and unworthy of a man who occupies an Editor's chair. One was upon Mr. Simmons, whose pure and unblemished reputation, should shield him from a personal attack. His letter to Mr. Witbley is public property, and the proper subject of criticism, but there were portions of that article which seemed to have been deliberately designed to offend. The other is an attempt to drag up something to the injury of Col. Williams. The maliciousness of the attempt and the failure are equally glaring. The attack is a cowardly effort to injure a man for doing his duty.

We make large allowances for the Editor in view of the very significant results about here, but when he stoops to base attacks he shall not go unrebuked.

When it is known that that Editor received his education about ale houses and theatres these diatribes will be appreciated.

County Printing.

The Republican and the Post were selected by the Supervisors for the publication of the laws &c. The Gazette is pleased to indulge in some strictures upon the whig portion of the board for not selecting that paper. In regard to that, we have only to say, that merit always receives its just reward! The Gazette long since forfeited its claims to this benefit, and besides that, the Editor went down to the Valley with the vain idea of having the Gazette and the Post selected. As well might he have asked the whigs to commit suicide as to abandon their own organ. At all events the Gazette should be selected or the patronage in Clinton Co. should be taken from the whig. After getting a flea in his ear he left for home, and the result was as might have been expected. The editor "licks the hand that smites him," and that is well. He not only had the pleasure of going to the Valley, and of coming back again, but of showing what weakness and folly can do for a man. To cut this matter short, however, and place the truth in a nutshell, we will state what is simply the fact in the case: The selection of the Gazette was not desired by either party.—This is the wrong latitude for adventurers.

The Right Kind of Talk.

The following from the Poughkeepsie Eagle is not wide of the mark. We say, too, don't be alarmed—keep cool—be patient—see the play out—it is a long road that never turns, (and the one we are no Judge:—)

DON'T BE ALARMED.—We are surprised to find a few Whigs considerably disheartened with the result of the election just closed and talking about giving it up, giving a reason, that the loco focos have made a general sweep have carried everything.—Now in our view of the case, since we are beaten, the best thing about it is the very sweep over which some of our friends are frightened. The sweep has been so great that it puts the locofoco party in the worst possible position for the future, with such a vast burden of expectants of party favor, three-fourths of them without a particle of principle, that among the first movements they will be in a chaos of strife, with quarrels and contentions of all kinds that will rend the party in pieces before Gen. Pierce has been three months in the White House, if not before he can get there. Besides having all their own party papers to take care of, in the large cities, all over the south and west, and many other parts of the country, the loco focos have got thousands of Whigs, Native Americans and all sorts of hungry political non descripts on their hands, all democrats for the day, but ready to bolt the moment they find they can get nothing. Many who have no claim for anything will get the best places, and thus thousands of the faithful will be disgusted and driven off.

Instead, therefore, of this being a time for despondency, it is the very time to take courage; the day for his reverseses to end and their triumph to begin. All we have to do is to have a little patience and we will soon begin to hear the music.

After the defeat of Henry Clay in 1844, and the election of James K. Polk, owing to general despondency among the Whigs, and no other cause, the Loco Focos made out tolerably fair in the elections of 1845, although even in them the Whigs generally had the best of it, but in 1846 and '47 we beat them everywhere, and the scene ended in their complete overthrow in 1848. The trouble then was, as it is now, they fought only for the spoils, and having no principle to stand upon, as soon as it was found that said spoils would not hold out, a general explosion took place. Let no Whig be frightened or discouraged then, for they will soon see there is no necessity for it.

Essex and Clinton Co. Fairs,

[From the Journal of the State Society.]

ESSEX FAIR.—For the first time we visited Essex county, and were greatly disappointed, and most agreeably, as to its agricultural character. We met the farmers at their annual show, and the exhibition was in the highest degree creditable in the stock and dairy departments; and in fruits and vegetables was remarkably fine, and in quality, unsurpassed. The domestic hall, most tastefully arranged, was filled with articles that did great credit to the ladies of the county. The Editor of the Essex County Post, in noticing our efforts to meet the wishes of the farmers in the address which was delivered, remarks:

"The address of B. P. JOHNSON, Esq., Secretary of the State Society, was an admirable production. It was eminently nautical, and enriched throughout by incidents and anecdotes of the speaker's experience at the World's Fair, at which, our readers will recollect, Mr. JOHNSON was the speaker's terse sentences will be treasured up and remembered to the lasting benefit of his hearers. A copy was requested for publication, and we hope to be able to lay it before our readers.

"On the whole the Society has every reason to take new courage at the success of this, their second fair. The good efforts of last year's fair were clearly manifest at this, and we see no reason why there should be any pause in the advance which is now making. When Mr. WATSON shall have completed his survey of the county, our farmers will be enabled to work intelligently, and we shall begin to take the rank as an agricultural county, to which we are naturally entitled. All aiders of this consummation have our hearty good wishes, and will find in us willing assistants to the extent of our abilities."

We are greatly indebted to Judge Hand, Mr. Watson, President, and Mr. Hale, the Secretary, and others, for attentions while at Elizabethtown, by which we were enabled to make ourselves familiar with the agricultural condition and prospects of the county.

From Essex, we went to Clinton county, where we delivered the address before the society. The exhibition, in some of the departments, was a creditable one—especially in horses. The Black Hawks were shown in great strength here, as well as in Essex. From some local cause, the exhibition in this county was not equal to former years; we saw enough, however of the sterling farmers of this county, to be satisfied that another year will witness renewed efforts in every department to bring up their exhibition to a higher mark than it has yet attained.

WHAT A BOY CAN DO.—In passing along one of our streets the other day, a little fellow fell in with an old salt, who was shivering with three sheets in the wind.

"Ship ahoy!" hailed the tar, and the little chap hauled up alongside. "Where may be the Seaman's Mansion?"

The lad proffered to show him; and they held along together; the sailor steering very widely; sometimes hard up as though he had struck a heavy sea, and then yawning off to the right or left as the case might be.

"I am not exactly water-logged," said he "but have took too much of the deck load on, and my top-hamper is rather heavy for my ballast, eh! A little too much of the critter aboard—hic! you understand. Shun the rum, the blue ruin my little man as you'd avoid Timbertoes. Shiver my top sail! but it has been the ruin of me. Here I have a wife and two little ones—one a youngster about the same age as yourself—in Boston, and some property besides; but the Devil has placed a barrier between us, in the shape of a can of grog. Shun the critter, my lad, as you'd shun a pestilence."

The lad promised to bear in mind his advice; and then asked why he did not sign the Temperance pledge.

"And where may that Temperance pledge be found?" inquired he

His young comrade informed him that there was to be a temperance meeting at the Exchange that evening, and offered to go with him if he would sign the pledge.

"I'll go; come in here my little one (by this time they have arrived opposite the Seaman's Mansion), and take supper with me. As soon as we have got ballast in, we'll haul up for this said Temperance meeting. Stave in my bulworks if we won't.

The little fellow stuck to him, and as soon as supper was over went to the Temperance meeting, where the old salt signed the pledge. As he did so, he remarked that whenever he was tempted to drink, he would think of that little boy's care for his welfare. We doubt not that the warm-hearted old tar will keep the pledge so long as his "timbers hold together." The next day he went to sea; not forgetting to call upon his juvenile friend before his departure. And he assured him that he would seek his wife and family on his return. So much for the influence of a child.—Portland Bulletin.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.—This Magazine stands decidedly at the head of the fashionable Monthlies. The number for Dec. has already been on our table for some days. In polite literature, in plates, and in lessons of practical utility it stands unrivalled.

MR. EDITOR:—The following appeared in the Northern Gazette of this date.

For the purpose of giving it a wider circulation, please give it a place in your paper.

Yours Truly,

A. B. KINGSLAND.

TO THE PUBLIC.

I do not usually care to notice the attention of bar room and street revilers, but the Election and its results have this Fall stirred up some of the billious patriotism of our Free Sale Gentlemen.

One of the firm of E. & J. D. Kingsland and Co., of this village, has for the past few months devoted himself to what he calls the Fillmore whigs or "Silver-greys," with his choicest kind of abuse. And in relation to myself particulary he devotes himself in misrepresenting facts and stating falsehoods.

I know that in presence of strangers he charges that I have been treacherous to the whig party, and that I said before the Election that I wished I was comfortably seated in the democratic party, &c.

I charge A. B. Kingsland with falsehood and villany in maliciously slandering me. If the vile wretch had confined his remarks to acquaintances, I wo'd not stoop to notice him but for weeks past I am informed he has been busy in oyster cellars and saloons, traducing and vilifying me in the choicest "Bowery boy" language.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices.
Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks,

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood, Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend, will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for.

DR. VICHOP'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills and the good results which always follow their use, a conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice

Friends of Dr. L when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Gedde's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 6 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batcheldor's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,
or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mills, &c., used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

AGRICULTURAL & HORTICULTURAL TOOLS AND IMPLEMENTS.

a great variety and extensive assortment, such as Hoes, Shovels, Spades, Rakes, Manure and Hay Forks, Scythes Snaths, Cattle Ties, Draft, Halter and Trace Chains, Garden Syringes, Pruning Saws, Pruning and Budding Knives, Garden Shears and Twig Cutters, Grindstones, Patent Grindstone fixtures, rollers, barn door rolls, &c., &c.

Grain, Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.—We are prepared to furnish Herds Grass, Red Top, Lucerne, White Dutch, Southern, Western and Northern Clover Seed, Beet, Turnip, Onion and Carrot Seed, at Wholesale and Retail at the lowest market prices.

We have by far the largest and most complete assortment of Agricultural Implements, Machines, Field and Garden Seeds to be found in the State, which we offer at our new and spacious Ware-Rooms to Farmers and Dealers on terms the most liberal. We are also Commission Merchants and Wholesale and Retail Dealers in heavy and shelf

HARDWARE,

Saddlery, Axles, Springs, Mechanic's Tools, House Trimmings and Furnishing Goods, Cutlery, Cross Cut, Mill and Circular Saws, Paints, Oils, Bird Cages, etc., etc., etc.

MARRIAGE

HAPPINESS AND COMPETENCE.

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life at an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefitted by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the fall consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (within the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By becoming in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo. pp. 250. Price, 50 cts

[ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.]

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE, WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is so conducive to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND COPIES

Have been SENT BY MAIL within the last few months.

Poetry.

POETRY.

THE world is full of Poetry—the air
Is living with its spirit; and the waves
Dance to the music of its melodies,
And sparkle in its brightness. Earth is veiled
And mantled with its beauty; and the walls,
That close the universe with crystal in,
Are eloquent with voices, that proclaim
The unseen glories of immensity,
In harmonies, too perfect, and too high,
For aught but beings of celestial mould,
And speak to man in one eternal hymn
Unfading beauty, and unyielding power.

The year leads round the seasons, in a choir
For ever charming, and forever new;
Blending the grand, the beautiful, the gay,
The mournful, and the tender, in one strain,
Which steals into the heart, like sounds, that rise
Far off in moonlight evenings, on the shore
Of the wide ocean resting after storms;
Or tones, that wind round the vaulted roof,
And pointed arches and retiring aisles
Of some old, lonely minister, where the hand
Skilful, and moved, with passionate love of art,
Plays o'er the higher keys, and bears aloft
The peal of bursting thunder, and then calls,
By mellow touches, from the softer tubes,
Voices of melting tenderness, that blend
With pure and gentle musings, till the soul,
Commingling with the melody, is borne,
Rapt, and dissolved in estacy, to Heaven.

'Tis not the chime and flow of words, that move
In measured file and metrical array;
'Tis not the union of returning sounds,
Nor all the pleasing artifice of rhyme,
And quantity, and accent, that can give
This all-pervading spirit to the ear,
Or blend with it the movings of the soul.
'Tis a mysterious feeling, which combines
Man with the world around him, in a chain
Woven of flowers, and dipped in sweetness, till
He tastes the high communion of his tho'ts,
With all existences, in earth and heaven,
That meet him in the charm of grace and power.
'Tis not the noisy babbler who displays,
In studied phrase and ornate epithet,
And rounded period, poor and vapid tho'ts,
Which peep from out the cumbrous ornaments
That overload their littleness. Its words
Are few, but deep and solemn; and they break
Fresh from the fount of feeling, and are full
Of all that passion, which, on Carmel, fired
The holy prophet, when his lips were coals,
His language winged with terror, and when bolts
Leap from the brooding tempest, and armed with wrath,
Commissioned to affright us, and destroy.

Miscellany.

Description of Minnesota Territory.

BY THE LATE HENRY S. SIBLEY.

That part of Minnesota which lies East of the Mississippi river constituted a portion of Wisconsin Territory, before the admission of the State of that name, with curtailed boundaries. It is estimated to contain about 23,000 square miles. The St. Croix, and a line draw from the main branch of that stream to the Falls of the St. Louis river of Lake superior, now divide Wisconsin from Minnesota. On the west of the Mississippi, the parallel of 43° 30 is the line of division between the State of Iowa and Minnesota west to the Missouri river. All the country up the latter stream, above the point of intersection of that line to its junction with the White Earth, and along that River to the British Possessions, thence eastwardly, following the boundary of 49° North latitude, to the extreme northwest point of the State of Wisconsin in Lake Superior, appertains to Minnesota Territory. The area embraced within these limits contains between 140,000 and 160 000 square miles, equal in extent to New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania combined.

This immense region is bountifully watered by the Mississippi, Minnesota, and Missouri Rivers, and the Red River of the north, and their numerous tributary streams, which traverse it in every part. There are also innumerable bodies of fresh water, which abound in fish of various kinds—the white fish especially being found in great numbers in the more northern and larger lakes. The general character of Minnesota is that of high, rolling prairie; but the streams and lakes are bordered with heavy bodies of timber, which contain every species of wood known along the Mississippi below, except beech and sycamore. At a point about seventy or eighty miles above the falls of St. Anthony, west of the Mississippi, commences a large and remarkable forest, which extends to the southward nearly at a right angle across the Minnesota River, to the branches of the Mah-kahto, or Blue Earth River.—This vast body of woodland is more than one hundred and twenty miles in length, and from twenty to forty in breadth.—Many beautiful lakes of limpid water are found within its limits, which are the resort of myriads of wild fowl, including swans, geese, and ducks. The dense thicket along its border afford places of concealment for the deer, which are killed in great numbers by the Indians, The numerous groves of hard maple afford to the latter, at the proper season, the means of making sugar, while the large cotton woods and butternuts are converted by them into canoes for the transportation of themselves and their families along the water courses and lakes. At the approach of Winter, the bands of Dacotas or Sioux, save those who rely exclusively upon the buffalo for subsistence, seek the deepest recesses of the forest to merated the racoon, the fisher and the marten. In this beautiful country are to be found all the requisites to sustain a dense population. The soil is of great fertility and unknown depth, covered as it is with the mould of a thousand years. The Indian is here in his forest home, hitherto, secure from the intrusion of the pale faces; but the advancing tide of civilization warns him that the time has arrived when he must yield up the title to this fair domain, and seek another and a strange dwelling place.

This charming region is embraced within the cession made to the Government by the Sioux Indians, in the two treaties made with them by Commissioners LEA and RAMSEY in July and August last, and which are now before the Senate for its consideration. The amount of acres in the purchase, including the half breed tract at Lake Pepin, but not embracing the reservation made for the Indians, is 28,576,840 acres, or 44,650 square miles. Of this quantity, about 3,000,000 acres are within the State of Iowa. The limits of the country ceded by these treaties have been so widely noticed in the public journals, that it is hardly necessary to repeat them here. Let it, therefore, suffice to state that the region north of Iowa and east of the Big Sioux River, traversing the entire valley of the Minnesota up to the Winnebago line, and connecting with the purchase made by Governor Ramsey of the Red River Chippewas, at Buffalo River, is comprised therein; so that a glance at the map will show the Mississippi to be the eastern boundary of the tract to which the Indian title has been extinguished for a distance of nearly three hundred miles. It is not surprising that the most intense anxiety is manifested by the people of the Territory, as well as by thousands who intend to remove there, in the fate of these measures, the success of which is vitally important to the interests of Minnesota. Already are hundreds pressing across the line to make their homes in these fine lands, in anticipation of the immediate ratification of the treatise; and these hundreds will be swelled to thousands so soon as the navigation of the river is fairly open. The treaties are universally regarded as wise and judicous in their provisions, both as they affect the interests of the Indians and the Government. The Dakota or Sioux Bands cannot remain where they now are without imminent danger of collision with the white population; and a magnanimous and just policy, therefore, would dictate their concentration as stipulated in the treatics, with a view to their instruction in the arts of civilized life, in a spot remote from the white settlements any where they are not liable to be disturbed for many years to come

The Pembina treaty referred to, as negotiated by Gov Ramsey in September last, is also important to the interests of the Territory, as it completes the line of purchase between the Mississippi and the boundary of the British Possessions.—The trade between Lord Selkirk's colony on the Red River of the North, which has a population of about eight thousands souls, and on our own settlements, is rapidly increasing. The Indians interested in the treaty are very poor and needy, and the amount stipulated to be paid them, altho' insignificant so far as the Government is concerned, will yet go far to minister to the comfort of these miserable beings.—Pembina is the name of a settlement on our side, of the line within the purchase, and contains upwards of a thousands souls, principally persons of mixed Indians and white blood. These people are active and enterprising, hardy and intrepid, excellent horsemen, and well skilled in the use of fire arms. They subsist by agriculture, and by the chase of the buffalo. They are not recognised by law as citizens of our Territory, and should the treaty be ratified so as to enable them to acquire individual titles to the land upon which they now live, their numbers will soon be augmented by accessions from the British side of the line, of those who are anxious to emancipate themselves from the iron rule of the huge monopoly called the Hudson's Bay Company. These settlers would from an invaluable defence to that exposed frontier in case of difficulties hereafter, either with the British Government, (to which they are much disaffected,) or with the Indian tribes. The number of acres in the cession, as stipulated in the Pembina treaty, is about 4,700,000.

The soil of Minnesota is admirably adapted to the cultivation of all the cereal grains. Wheat, oats, and barley are already raised in considerable quantities, and corn of all kinds grows to great perfection. Wheat and barley afford a sure crop, even at the British colony in latitude 50°, more than 5° north of St. Paul. Garden vegetables of every kind are raised in all parts of the Territory, of a size and quality unsurpassed. What will be the result in the culture of fruit trees has not yet been fully tested, but there is no reason to doubt that the experiment will be successful with all those species which are found in the same parallel elsewhere. Wild strawberries, raspberries, plums, and other fruits are found in abundance.

Minnesota is destined to be a great agricultural region, and its prairies are especially well calculated for the raising of stock. There is also such an extent of water power throughout its broad surface that there is every reason to believe that manufactures will flourish also. The reports of those scientific men who have explored the country justify us in the supposition that our Territory is rich in iron and copper ores, and more particular in galena or lead. There is good ground for the belief that coal also will be found, but that ble quantities, the fact will be of more real advantage to Minnesota than mines of silver or of gold.

On the upper portions of the Mississippi and St. Croix Rivers lies the great region of pine, which will continue to prove a source of wealth to the Territory and future State for a century to come. The manufacture of pine lumber already constitutes a very large part of the industrial labor of the people. The quantity produced during the past year must have exceeded 25,000,000, of feet, the greater part of which was required for home purposes. This branch of commerce is in the hands of hardy, enterprising, and respectable men, who, after enduring every species of privation incident to their vocation, are too often fated to encounter heavy losses from the uncontrollable floods, which set at defiance equally the strength and skill of man.

The climate of Minnesota is not subject to sudden variations, especially in winter. Although in some years the snow falls to a considerable depth, yet, as a general rule, we have far less than is the case in New England, or in the northern part of the State of New York. The comparative absence of moisture in the atmosphere is doubtless attributable to the fact that no very large bodies of water are to be found, although, as I have before stated, small lakes abound. During the coldest weather in winter the air is perfectly still; consequently, the temperature is much more tolerable, and even pleasant, than could be supposed by those who reside in the same parallel of latitude on the stormy atlantic coast.

The navigation of the Mississippi is not to be relied on after the first week in November; and steamboats arrive in the Spring about the 10th or 12th of April, so that the river may be considered as closed for nearly five months in the year. I have known steamers, however, to reach St. Paul as late as the 20th of November and get back safely to Galena, and to make the trip to St. Paul in the Spring as early as the 1st of April; but such is not usually the case.

St. Paul is the capital of the Territory. It is situated on the east bank of the Mississippi, about six miles below Fort Snelling, and eight miles by land below the Falls of St. Anthony. In 1848 it contained less than four hundred inhabitants; now it numbers fully twenty five hundred, and is rapidly augmenting in population. Stillwater is a thriving village on Lake St. Croix, about eighteen miles from St. Paul by land, and twenty five from the Mississippi. There is also a prosperous town at the Falls of St. Anthony, which is one of the loveliest spots in the upper country, and where the University is to be located. The population is between twelve and fifteen hundred. There are also villages at the Marine Mill and Taylor's Falls, on the St. Croix; at Itasca, Sauk Rapids, Watab, and other points, in Benton County; and at Mendota, near the mouth of Minnesota. Point Douglas is at the junction of the Mississppi and St. Croix rivers. It is well situated, and is destined to be a place of commercial importance. Wabashaw, a settlement below Lake Pepin, within the half breed tract, so called, is also favorably located.

In anticipation of the immense emigration to the Territory consequent upon the ratification of the Sioux treaties by the Senate, several splendid steamers of three or four hundred tons burden are now in process of construction, to be added to the line between Galena and St. Paul during the coming season. So soon as the railroad between Chicago and Galena is completed, the traveler will be enabled to visit New York City in less than five days time from St. Paul, the distance being nearly two thousand miles. Minnesota can be reached either by that rout or by the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, as steamers ply regularly between St. Louis and St. Paul.

Minnesota is destined to assume a high rank among the States of the Union. The high toned character of the population, so different from that usually found upon the frontier, their obedience to law, the zeal manifested in the cause of education, the disposition universally shown to make every sacrifice to place the prosperity of the Territory upon a sure basis, the aversion felt to all schemes which may in any wise entail embarassment or debt upon the future State, and the general anxiety to maintain the character of the Territory unblemished, afford a sure guarantee of the moral principles by which the people will always be guided, and upon which their government will be conducted. The munificent grants of land made by Congress for the University and for the maintenance of common schools will be husbanded with great care so that the benefits of education may be extended to every one who is desirous to avail himself of such privileges.—The population of the Territory has more than doubled since the census of 1850, and it is morally certain if the treaties are ratified—of which no reasonable doubt can be entertained—that there will be an addition to it of 30,000 to 40,000 souls within twelve months. The emigration to Minnesota is composed of men who go there with the well founded assurance that in a land where nature has lavished her choicest gifts, where sickness has no dwelling place where the dreaded cholera has claimed no victims, their toil will be amply rewarded, while their persons and property are fully protected by the broad shield of law. The sun shines not upon a fairer region—one more desirable as a home for the mechanic the farmer, and the laborer, or wh industry will be more surely requi in Minnesota Territory.

The Little Bound Boy's Dream.

BY MRS. M. A. DENNISON.

A little fair haired child laid its pale cheek against a pillow of straw.

It had toiled up three pair of narrow, dark stairs, to gain its miserable garret, for it was a little 'bound child,' that had neither father nor mother; so no soft bed awaited his tired limbs, but a miserable pallet with one thin coverlid.

It had neither lamp nor candle to lighten the room, if such it might be called; still that was not so bad, for the beautiful round moon smiled in upon the poor, bound boy, and almost kissed his forehead, as his eyes closed dreamily.

But after awhile, as he laid there, what wondrous change came over the place. A great light shone down, the huge black rafters turned to solid gold, and these all studded with tiny precious, sparkling stones. The broken floor, too, was all encrusted with shining crystals, and the child raised himself upon his elbow, and gazed with a half fearing, half delighted look upon the glorious sight.

One spot on the wall seemed too bright for his vision to endure, but presently, as if emerging from it, come a soft white figure, that stood by the poor bound boy's bedside.

The child shut his eyes, he was a little only a little frightened, and his heart beat quickly, but he found breath to murmur, 'tell me who you are?"

'Look up, be not afraid,' said a sweet voice, that sounded like the harps of heaven, 'look up, darling, I am your brother Willy, sent down from the angels to speak to you, and tell you to bear all your sorrows patiently, for you will soon be with us.'

'What, you my brother Will? oh no, that cannot be. My brother Willy was very pale, and his clothes were patched and torn and there was a hump on his back, and he used to go into the muddy lanes and pick up bits of wood and chips, but your face is quite too handsome, and your clothes prettier than I ever saw before, and there is no hump on your back—besides, my brother Willy is dead, long ago.'

'I am your brother Willy, your immortal brother. My body, with the ugly lump is dead and turned to ashes; but just as soon as I died I went up to the great heavens, and saw sights that I cannot tell you about now, they were very, very beautiful. But God, who is your Father and the holy name of Eternity, gave me these bright garments, that never get soiled, and I was so happy that I expect my face was changed very much, and I grew tall and very straight, so no wonder you do not know me,'

And now the little bound child's tears began to fall.

'Oh!' he exclaimed earnestly, 'if I too could go to heaven.'

'You can go,' replied the angel, with a smile of ineffable sweetness. 'You have learned how to read well, to-morrow, get your bible and find very reverently—for it is God's most holy book—these words of the Lord Jesus; "But I say unto you love your enemies, bless them that curse, do good to those that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you.'

'Do all these, and you shall be the child of your Father which is above.'

'Even if they beat me?' murmured the little bound boy with a quivering lip.

A flash of light passed over the angel's face as he replied, 'the more you forgive, the nearer you will be to heaven.'

In another moment the vision had gone but still the room was all blazing with unearthly radiance.

As the little boy fell back upon his pillow, his wan face reflected the angel's smile, and he thought, 'I will forgive them even if they beat me'

Suddenly a more musical voice than the former fell upon his ear. This time he was not afraid, but sitting upright in his miserable couch, he saw a figure that seemed to lift itself to the wall, a ray of intense brightness outlined all its forms; its eyes blazed, yet there was a mild beauty in them every time they looked into his own.

'Little one, I am your father,' said the form, in melting accents.

'I don't think you can be my father,' whispered the boy, timidly, "My father used to look very old indeed; and he got hurt and wore a crutch; there were wrinkles on his face, and all over his forehead, his hair was short and white; not long like yours. And my father used to stoop over, and wear a little black apron, and put patches on shoes in a little dark room."

"And what else?"

'He used to pray and sing very sweetly, but I never hear any praying and singing now, sobbed the child, bursting into tears.

'Don't cry, dear little boy, but listen to me. I am your father, your immortal father; that poor, lame body is all gone now, mingled with the dust of the grave yard.—As soon as the breath left that deformed body, I was with the shining angels, hosts and hosts of them bore me up to heaven; and the king of that glorious place clothed me in these robes, white and stainless, and gave me this tall beautiful body which shall never feel corruption. And this was the reason, dear little orphan; because I loved Him, and my chief delight was in praying to Him, and talking about him, and altho' I was very poor I tried to be honest, and many times went hungry rather than do wrong.

if you never forget to say your ly, the old floor studded with brilliants, and the same soft, mysterious light over all.

A strain of holy music fell faintly upon his enraptured senses; it grew louder, and came nearer to the head of his little bed.—And then a voice—oh! far sweeter than either of the others, sang, 'my child, my little earth child, look upon me, I am thy mother.'

In a moment what emotions swelled the bosom of the lonely boy. He thought of her cherished tenderness to him long years ago, of her soft arms around his neck, the gentle lips pressing his forehead; then came up the cruelty of strangers, who after she had been put away in the cold ground had treated him with such harshness.

He turned towards her; oh, what a glorious being; her eyes were like stars, her hair like the most precious gold; but there was that in her face that none others might so truly know. He had doubted if the first risen was his brother, if the second was his father, but not one doubt that this beautiful being was his own mother.

A little while he kept down his strong feeling, but the thought of the present and the past overpowered him.

"Oh! mother, mother, mother," he cried, stretched forth his little hands, 'let me come to you—let me come. There is nobody on this earth like you; no one kisses me now, no one loves me, oh! mother let me come! and the hot tears rained down his cheeks.'

'My orphan child,' she said, in low tones, that thrilled him to the heart, 'you cannot come to me now, but listen to me. I am very often near you when you know it not. Every day I am by your side, and when you come to this lonely room to weep my wings encircle you. I behold you suffer, but I know that God will not give you more sorrow than you can bear. When you resist evil, I whisper calm and tender thoughts into your soul; but when you gave way to anger, when you cherish a spirit of revenge, you drive your mother from you; remember that, my little one, your sins drive your mother from you, and displease the great and holy God.

Be good, be happy, even amidst all your trials, and if it is a consolation, know that thy immortal mother ottens communes with thy soul. And farther, thou shalt soon be with me.'

'Oh! mother, mother, mother,' murmured the boy, springing from his bed, and striving to leap towards her. The keen air chilled him, he looked eagerly all around—there was no light, a solemn stillness reigned, the radiance, the rafters of gold, the silvery beams, the music, the angels—all were gone. And then he knew that he had been dreaming; but oh! what a dream; how strengthening, how cheering; never, never would he forget it.

The next morning when he went down to his scant breakfast, there was such a beautiful serenity upon his face, sweet gladness in his eyes, that all who looked upon him forbore to taunt and chide him.

He told his dream, and the hearts that listened were softened, and the mother, who held her own babe, was so checked with tears that she could not eat; and the father said that henceforth he would be kinder to the poor boy, and so he was.—The child found his way into their affections, he was so meek, so prayerful so good and at the end of a twelvemonth, when the angels did in very deed take him far above to heaven, the whole family wept around the little coffin, as if he were one of their own. But they all felt that he was in the bright heaven, with his brother, and his father, and his dear angel mother.

The Character of a True Gentleman.

Some have supposed the "stylish man" and gentleman to be synonymous characters, when in truth nothing can be more opposite. The stylish man lives and moves within his own little sphere, of which self—his own pleasures and his own profits—is the centre of his whole designs. He feels no misfortunes but those which touch self—he offers no relief but for self sake. Therefore, although the stylish man may not be considered a decided evil, he certainly is of no decided benefit to society.

The true gentleman, however, lives for others as well as for self—his usefulness knows no bounds. Noble and instinctively kind, he makes the misfortunes of others his own, at first sight. Thus by his example, (which always corresponds with his precepts,) does he benefit all who happen within the range of his influence.

A true gentleman is neither a slave nor an enemy to pleasure, but approves or rejects as his reason shall direct. He stoops not to flatter a knave, though possessed of a title; nor does he ever overlook merit, though he should find it in a garret or cellar kitchen. His behavior is always affable and respectful, yet not cringing nor formal, and his manners are easy and unaffected.—He omits no opportunity wherein he can oblige the needy; yet he does it in so delicate a manner, that he seems rather to have received than conferred a favor. He does not profess a passion he never felt, to impose on the credulity of an artless woman; nor will he injure the reputation of another, to please the vanity of any female He cannot love where he does not esteem; nor does he ever suffer his passions to predominate over his reason. He is ever studious to please, without being guilty of meanness or vice. In his friendships, he is steadfast and sincere. He is enamored with virtue, but detests vice. He never raises a blush on the cheek of virtue, nor gives unnecessary pain to any; but having a heart of sympathy and compassion, he—when in his power—with pleasure wipes the tear from the eye of sorrow. J. S. S.—[N. Y. Times.]

Death in Infancy.

The gladness of Spring has ever a cast of sadness with it to me. The air is perfumed, indeed, with bud and blossom, as if an angel had shaken his wings around us; but look you, there are more gems delighted and dead beneath the tree, than are clinging to the branches. Life is ever in the minority, and that sweet emblem admonishes me how largely young life enters the harvest of death. It seems but natural, when the duties of lif have been met, its pleasures exhausted, its relationships performed and perfected, and when the soul is shut in from the world without, by its decaying senses, and limited to the circle of its own reflections, that the spent energies of age should rest in the grave. But here in infancy, you have no faculty developed, and the life which might have been an oak to shelter nations, dying a seedling. Life itself is but a fragment, interposed between eternities, but here the very fragment is broken, and the living clay, which but an hour ago was stamped with his own image by the hand of God, under the self same hand crumbles into dust. That life seems an intention interrupted; a purpose formed, and in the very moment of its taking shape, strangely changed. It seems a life with no end but death, and death, too, where last we should look for it in the varied condition of man. When hallowed love has blended its own nature in the life of the new born, and "For the mother's sake, the child is dear,

And dearer yet the mother, for the child;"

and wherever else the curse on the earth might fall and blight, here last and lightest should we look for it, but even here Death claims his own.

But let us regard this matter as they to whom God has spoken in words articulate by man, and interpret his providence by a higher than earthly wisdom. The life of a day shall endure with the longest. It was but the title page we read; the volume of its being is above. Its absolute existence is the same, whether straitened to an hour, or protracted to three score years and ten on earth, for it claims immortality for its birth right. We robe the little one in the vestments of death, and bear it out with many tears to the death that lived before it; we chisel the record of its life of hours, and of our love, upon the chill marble; and thus we cheat the heart from truth and fact, while we think and speak of it as dead. It cannot die. It lives and shall with the lifetime of God. It breathed an hour in clay that we might know that God had created another immortal, and that they, the childbereft, were honored with its patronage, and then it passed from earth to claim its own. Follow it, if you will, where it mingles with those with whom the Savior said, 'Their angles do always behold my Father which is in Heaven.' The formation of character here is under a probation of many sorrows, but there you have the earth-born trained in heaven. It is among the ministries of angles, and gladness such as the blessed know, and truth from the lips of prophets sanctified, among the records of an eternity past, and the developments of an eternity to come, that it wakens to conscious life. There it mingles with the elder spirits of eternity, and beholds the face of Deity, bright in his brightness, yet itself seen as but a shadow intercepting the intenser glory of the Thorne. Would you disrobe it of its immortality? Would you have its faculties, sprung in an hour to giant stature, dwindled to the feebleness of infancy, to enter again the narrow chambers of mortality? Would you hush the song perfecting praise from infant lips, and give it back to earth, to die again, and win its weary and doubtful way above? There was a reason for the mastery of faith in the Shunamite, when her boy was dead, and she answered the inquiry of the prophet, 'Is it well with the child?' 'It is well.'—No, let it rest—remembering, when you look upon an infant dead, that heaven is enlarged.

Brief as the term of a child's life on earth may be, it has answered the end of its existence. It did not live only to die. It lived to be loved, to stir up, within the human breast, the strong, quick pulsations of a mother's and a father's heart, to which the solitary must ever be strangers. Had it never lived, the place that it filled would have been a blank, and the hearts it warmed, unmoved; but now, instead of nothingness, there is a memory, which one soul melts with emotions that God has treasured up in parentage. And sad though that memory be, it softens with time, until it seems as if they had but dreamed of an angel.

But its life and death had yet a higher use. In this pilgrimage of ours, we forget that we are banished from Paradise, and we attempt to frame another from the grosser elements about us. It seems the end of Divine providence to expel us from the Eden we have planted, and with whose power we excepted unbroken peace. Banished, we repeat the folly, till the poor weary heart hardly dares to love, and says it will not; yet it does, though death and the grave are quick to sunder the loved and loving, and then, perchance guided by mercy, it finds in God and truth, an object which it may dare to love, for death only brings us nearer to God, and there is no grave in heaven.

God has many voices in this world, in his varied providence, and though they speak in no dialect of man, they are clear and well understood. It is the anticipation of spirit communion hereafter. But among them all, whether loud or low, whether wrathful or tender, there is none, which does so move the heart to think of God, as the still lips of INFANCY IN DEATH.

Foreign Relations and External Expansion.

In 1841 the proposition to annex Texas was resisted by whigs and a portion of the Democracy with a determination, and a heroism worthy of everlasting remembrance.

In 1852 this question has gone by default. No resistance has been made to the success of Pierce on the ground of the almost absolute certainty of a war with Spain for Cuba, and the extension of Slave territory." In fact the Barnburners who resisted Texas, and defeated Cass have been the Champions of the incoming administration tho' these Fillbustering demonstrations have stared and still stare them in the face at every turn.

At a recent democratic jollification meeting at the old wigwam in New York City the "annexation of Cuba" was the one idea of the meeting, and John Van Buren is reported to have said, among other things;

"When Pierce's Administration enters into power, he thought there would be a great sensation in London and Paris, and the European Governments would receive a severe check, as the Administration of Pierce bids fair to be a firm and fearless one. It behooves us to set a lesson to the world."

Why, and about what will there be a "sensation in London and Paris" pray?—Will it not be because an unknown, and insignificant man has defeated the hero of several wars? Will there not be a "sensation" among the manufacturers of those countries when they learn that the people of the U. S. prefer foreign to domestic labor? In the language of the N. Y. Express,

There will be a sensation also in Vienna, as soon as Francis Joseph and his Haynaus get the news that the Administration of Mr. Fillmore (under whose auspices the never-to-be-forgiven Hulsemann letter was written,) has been superceded. No doubt there will be "a sensation."

And there will be a sensation in London, when they get the news there of Pierces election, for no press out of the United States worked harder, editorially or by correspondence, than the Times to contribute to the defeat of Gen. Scott.

But wherein, and how will "European Government receive a severe Check" in the Administration of General Pierce?—Will he wage war for the oppressed every where? Will he send our armies to fight for Ireland, and Hungary, and Poland, and Italy? Ridiculous! Quixotic! Will it be a severe check to "European Governments" to know that we have turned Pirates, and determined to grab all contiguous territory? Hardly.

We have supposed that an administration composed of such men as Webster, to negotiate Ashburton Treaties, and write Hulsemann letters, and Scott to direct our Armies with a whig Congress to protect American labor would be far a greater "check" to "European Governments," than an Administration of Land Pirates. Free Traders, and Pettifogging Politicians like Pierce, Douglass, Van Buren, Soule & Co. Referring only to the humiliating course of Van Buren's administration towards Great Britian during the canadian Rebellion, we quote from the N. Y. Express to show what "lessons" have been set "to the world" and by whom, and what are likely to be:

The very men and presses who boast of their democracy and of their courage in the same breath, and who mean by Democracy, the laying of violent hands upon the principles of Public Law and of Established Right, and by courage, a spirit of innovation practiced upon Governments weaker than their own, had better turn their attention to Democratic precedents. When Thomas Jefferson, the boasted "Apostle of Democracy," was President of the United States, this country was the butt of foreign ridicule and the object of common abuse. Our commerce was swept from the waters of Europe. The Orders in Council with the Berlin and Milan decrees, operated as a constant wound upon our ships and commerce. Resistance to tyranny or acquiescence in oppression were the alternatives of the Government. Mr. Jefferson advocated the so called Restrictive System to get rid of the evil, and this restrictive system was an embargo upon our own commerce and the inhibition of American vessels from all intercourse with France and England. Mr. Jefferson was against committing the country to the risks of a foreign war, but who thought of impeaching Mr. Jefferson's patriotism. He was not, even with a good cause for war, prepared to advise one against a stronger power, and yet, without a good cause of war, we have a large party ready to make a war upon a weak country.

Again, when Mr. Monroe was President, nearly all the leading spirits of what is now called the Democratic party, then the followers of Calhoun and Crawford, were the most hostile to the doctrines of President Monroe, as to what was due from the United States to sister Republics on this Continent. John Quincy Adams, Samuel Southard and Wm. Wirt, the Whig members associated with Calhoun and Crawford in the Monroe Cabinet, were the leading men among the conservatives, and in favor of Mr. Monroe's doctrine.

The governments of Europe, then con-tion upon the independence of territory formerly Spanish, but who had made themselves free, and were, or against Spain, enabled to maintain their own independence.

Again, when John Quincy Adams, Whig, was President, who was it that abused him and his administration for accepting an invitation to the Congress called to meet at Panama? Who was it who sought to break down the effort of a Whig President to secure the independence of the Spanish American colonies, and at the same time denied the right of the President, never before or since disputed, to send ministers abroad to act upon the subject of this independence? Democrats in the Senate resisted the confirmations of ministers, and Democrats in the House refused outfits and salaries.

Again, when Webster and Clay pulled together under the Monroe Administration, for the adoption of a Resolution for defraying the expense incident to the appointment of a minister or commissioner to Greece, who was it that stood foremost in opposition, and where then was the thunder and lightning of the American Democracy against the manifestoes of the Despots of the Old World?

Finally, when James K. Polk was a candidate for President, and the Oregon question was an open one between the United States and Great Britain, the cry of "FIFTY FOUR FORTY and nothing short of it," and "fifty-four-forty or fight," was engraved upon every Democratic banner, posted at the corners of the streets, chalked upon the side-walks, and blazed away in all the Democratic presses, and by all the Democratic orators from Main to Louisiana.—Mr. Polk beat Henry Clay, in part, by these inflamatory appeals to the passions of the people, and particularly of the Western people, who had become greatly excited upon the subject. "Our title to the territory," said Mr. Polk, is "clear and unquestionable." Committed to extreme measures he entered the White House, but once there, he begun to recede from all his own, and all the pledges of his chief supporters. From "54-40 or fight" he backed down to 49, although one of his party declared in the Senate, (the same Senator whom Mr. Polk afterwards nominated as minister to Austria) that the very reception of such a proposition "would consign him (President Polk) to a depth so low that the hand of resurection would not reach him!"

These are some of the Democratic precedents which we cite for the benefit of those who are calumniating the present Administration for a want of courage and manliness in its intercourse with foreign powers.

We are receiving glowing accounts of the flourishing condition and fair prospects of the literary Institution of our place. Tho' the last term was one of unexampled success in the history of the Institution, yet it seems to be but a foretaste of the "good time coming." The whole energies of the Principals are centered in the interest of the school, and we should judge from the reports of the students, that the earnest and oft repeated exhortation of their Instructors is "Do something do it;" Be something worthy of your immortal natures, ensure greatness by attempting great things." But the most satisfactory proof of the favor which the Institution now enjoys is the procession of happy youths, who as sure as the great town clock, sounds the hour of eight are seen wending their way up "Science Hill."

The second term of Messrs. Dann and Thayer's administration opened on Monday last, with a hundred and forty students in attendance, since which time we understand there have been several additions.—The great number of students has made it necessary to increase the Board of Instruction. Miss. Mary Ferris of Burlington Seminary has been employed to give assistance in the English and French Departments and arrangements have been made for other assistance if deemed necessary. Our people should feel themselves called upon to second the efforts of the Teachers and students to make this Institution, the pride of our village, and a favorite resort for those who love the walls of learning, and deem knowledge but another name for happiness. *

NICHOLS & WARREN, Burlington, Vt.—We would call attention to their Advertisement in to day's paper. Their stock of school books, paper and stationary in all its variety is very large. As will be seen they have a very extensive assortment of Blank Books, of the very best possible quality and make. Their Bindery is enriched by all the valuable improvements that have been made in this branch of their business, and their operatives the most experienced in their profession.—Their blank work especially has elicited deserved commendation, and is held in high estimation in both the N. Y. and Boston market, for durability, and finished execution. Their bindery, without any mistake is the best appointed, in all its departments, in this section of country. As business men they are active, progressive, energetic, and thorough, and we heartily recommend them to our readers and the public, as worthy of their support. Their prices will be found reasonable in every department. We hope our readers will not view this as a puff, but rather as a just tribute to honest merit. †

MUSICAL.—We would direct attention to the Advertisement of the Barker Family, in another column. We believe this Family sung here about a year ago, and gave very good satisfaction. Our exchanges speak of them in glowing terms. As an example of the estimation in which they are held by the Fraternity, we give the following:

THE BARKER FAMILY.—This family, one of the very best in our city for the singing of popular songs, ballads, &c., are now making a tour in the neighboring cities and principal towns. We bespeak for them what they so much deserve, a liberal and warm reception. They possess quite as much musical ability as the Hutchinson Family ever boasted in their palmiest days, and always present to their audiences the most acceptable of programmes. Let them be patronized according to their deserts, and thronged and delighted houses will follow them wherever they go. (Boston Daily Bee.

The Barker Family met with a flattering reception on Saturday evening. Long before the commencement of the concert the spacious City Hall was filled to overflowing with people who gave unmistakable evidence of the pleasure which the music of those charming vocalists afforded.

And it is to be hoped that our citizens may be gratified by listening again to this excellent and popular band of singers.—[Newburyport Herald.

We hope our citizens will give them that generous reception unostentatious merit always receives at their hands. †

Presentaiion of Plate.

On the 26th Sept., the citizens residing upon the line of the Rutland and Washington Railroad presented to Hon. Meritt Clark of West Poulteny, President of that road, a service of plate valued at $500 as a testimonial of their appreciation of his services in the building of that road. It was also resolved to devote $500, to building a monument to the memory of Horace Clark, deceased, brother of the President for similar services Honorable testimonials! The presentation took place at Rutland.—A large number of people were present and speeches were made by Thurlow Weed Mr. Clark, Mr. McFarland, Wm. A. Russell, and others.

University of Vermont.

We have been forwarded a copy of the Catalogue of the Officers and Students of this Institution for the Academical year 1852-3. The Students number, 30 Seniors, 33 Juniors, 25 Sophomores, 35 Freshmen. Weole number 123. The Corporation and faculty present an array of intellect, and character rarely excelled. The University of Vermont needs no praise at our hands.

The pamphlet forwarded to us is executed in the most beautiful style, by Stacy & Jameson, of Burlington.

GRAHAM'S MAGAZINE.—We have received the December No. of this deservedly popular Mag. and it shows no flagging of interest in its literary papers or embellishments. Within the past year it has attained a literary meirt that never could be justly ascribed to it before, and to our taste, is the best of the fashionable monthlies.—With the Jan. No. commences a new vol. and now is a good time to subscribe.—Each number will contain, besides the engravings, 112 pages of literary matter of accorded merit. Graham and Godey will be sent to one address one year for $4. †

This soil is very peculiar on account of its containing a large per centage of Iron and manganese and a small quantity of arsenic. The presence of arsenic would indicate that the soil is not very well calculated to support a vigorous, healthy vegetation. A PRETTY IDEA.—We find the following gem in a New York paper: "Lost—Yesterday, somewhere between sun-rise and sun-set, two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered, for they are gone forever."

Why are men of enterprise like emetics? Because you can't keep 'em down.".

The young man who got this out was last seen on Wednesday evening. As he had a carrot in his hand, his friends fear he stabbed himself, and afterwards threw his body overboard.

OGDENSBURGH RAILROAD.—The table of earnings on this road shows a regular increase of 60 per cent in six months of the present year, and the relative gain would have been, it is stated, from 76 to 80 per cent, at least, could the connecting roads have been able to dispose of all the freight that could have been obtained at Ogdensburgh, and that could have been carried by the present equipment of the Ogdensburgh road.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT.—The total sum collected during the late election for the Washington Monument, amounts to $6,630,70. The collection was only made in twenty-two places, but if the suggestion of the Monument Committee had been acted upon throughout the country, a sum would have been realized more than sufficient to erect two such structures. Of the total sum $1,210 was contributed by Cincinnati, $1,747 by Baltimore, and $1,100 by New Orleans.

☞The Cincinnati Commercial says, that a lady in the East, having seen the daugerreotype of a very handsome young man of that city, became so enamored of his personal appearance that she felt the strongest curiosity to know him. Impelled by this curiosity she visited Cincinnati a fortnight since, was introduced to the original of the picture, and so much pleased with him that the twain are engaged to be married, Considering that the lady is fair, intellectual, and, most of all, rich, our young friend has cause to think his stars for his good fortune. There is something romantic in falling in love with a daguerreotype.

HORRIBLE SCENE.—We find the following details of a revolting scene, the efforts of intemperance, in the Cincinnati Times:—

Esquire Rowckamp, who is the overseer of the poor for the Ninth ward, was called upon to visit an Irish family, residing in an alley between Abigail and Woodward, and Main and Sycamore streets. On entering the house, he found the father and husband—James Jackson—on the floor apparently dead. When first discovered, he was reclining upon a trunk, with his throat resting on the back of a chair. Near him upon the floor, lay his wife, insensibly drunk, and between them, the cause of this horrible scene, a whiskey jug, entirely emptied of its contents!

SOCIETY IN NEW ORLEANS.—"The quadroon balls at New Orleans," says an English writer, "take place in a large saloon; at the entrance, where you pay half a dollar, you are requested to leave your implements, by which it means your bowe-knives and revolvers, and you leave them as you would your overcoat on going into the opera, and get a ticket with their number, and on your way out they are returned to you. You hear the pistol and bowe-knife keeper in the arms-room call out—"No. 45, a six barrelled revolver." "No," 100, one eight barrelled revolver, and, bowe knife with a death's head and cross bones out on the handle," "No. 95, a brace of double barrels." All this is done a naturally as possible."

FRANCE.—The Moniteur publishes the report of the Senate for the re-establishment of the Empire; also the Lesatue Consultum which is as follows: "The Imperial dignity is re-established; Louis Napoleon to be Emperor, under the name of Napoleon the 3d. The Imperial dignity to be hereditary in the descendants of the Emperor, but legitimate issue wanting the legitimate children of Napoleon the First to be adopted, his heirs wanting a senatus consultum to appoint the Emperor. The Constitution of 1852 is maintained in all that is not contrary to the present senatus consultum. The President has accepted the proposition for the re-establishment of the Empire."

A decree convokes the French people on the 21st and 22nd Nov. to accept or reject

☞The exercises at the Presbyterian Church, on Thursday were of the most interesting character. The sermon, by the Rev. John Matlocks, was an able and masterly production. The Rev. Speaker in the course of his remarks, contrasted the present with past ages, and his logical deductions were of an excedingly interesting and instructive nature. Its potent truths and convincing eloquence cannot but leave a genial and beneficial influence upon all who listened. Like all the emenations from his pen, there was a scholarly finish, & vigor of thought that was truly refreshing. We sincerely hope that measures will be taken at an early day to give this a wide circulation by publication, as it cannot fail to be highly appreciated, no less for its intrinsic beauty and merit as a literary production, than for its high toned meral teachings.—The exercises were closed by singing an original hymn composed for the occasion by the pastor.

We notice with pleasure that many of our places of business were closed during the day. Quite a number though paid little or no regard to it. This is wrong. All should suspend their business, and devote the day to the devout worship of Him who is the author of every "good and perfect gift." In order to have a proper regard paid to this annual festival, so becoming a great and mighty people, we must observe it in the strictest manner, and what is now a tacit observance, will, in a short time, become a fixed principle and duty of the community. †

A writer in The Springfield Republican, from the Worcester Insane Retreat, mentions the following: There is a small pond in the garden. Just opposite the pond, I saw a woman, humbly dressed, looking in the water.

'That poor woman,' said the Doctor, 'has been here for several years. She assists in the kitchen, and is perfectly harmless, although incurable. She is the wife of an industrious man, living in an adjoining town. They had a family of three boys, two of which died suddenly, with the scarlet fever. Within a week of their burial, the mother proceeded to the pond near by for some water. As she was dipping her pail, she saw something just beneath the surface which attracted her attention, and, taking a wooden rake, she pulled it to the bank; it proved to be the body of her remaining child. A walnut-shell, with a piece of paper stuck in the centre, was floating upon the water, which, no doubt, sailing from the reach of the child, caused him to stretch for it, lose his balance, and be drowned. Before sunset she was mad—raving mad—and was brought here. It is her daily custom to watch that water for a few moments, just at the hour she discovered the body of her child, and then to return quietly to her work. But if she was not allowed to do so, which, by way of experiment, has been tried, violent fits and convultions would follow,'

'You say she is incurable,' said I.

'Quite so, we think. Under superintendence,' continued the doctor, 'she is quiet and useful here; but without it she would be even dangerous.'

While he was speaking, the mother, whose bereavement of her children had driven her mad forever, turned upon her heel, and with her face turned to the earth, walked slowly toward the house. As she approached, the doctor called to her, and dropping a low courtesy, she stood looking at us.

I have seen faces whose melancholy expression might chill the like the keen east wind, and the power of sympathising with them be very limited. But, of all that I have seen, not any have approached the one I now look upon, in utter absence of all life's sunshine, Pale, ashy pale were her features; her lips were hueless, and her eyes sunken; her lower jaw dropped almost upon her breast, and looked like grief personified.

'Poor creature,' exclaimed the doctor, 'what wretchedness of mind is there depicted!'

'I never saw it equalled,' said I.

'No wonder,' replied he. 'For five years a smile has not played upon her features, and, in my opinion, never will."

AN ECCENTRIC CHARACTER.—The Boston Chronicle gives the following in addition to the particulars already published, relative to JOHN CROFTS COFFIELD, who died in that city on the 28th ult., supposed to be worth $200,000:

"For the last thirty years this eccentric man has not laid in bed, except when travelling, he being too miserly to indulge in such "extravagance" as he termed it.—He has made his lodgings on trunks and boards, and finally died lying upon a large trunk. Three days preceding his death he purchased a burial lot in Mount Auburn. He lived, if living it could be called, in a small shop off from the street. He lived a bachelor, not being willing to marry, on account of the expenses incident upon a married life, and dragged out his existence as solitary as an oyster. His meals cost him on an average six and a quarter cents, and in payment he generally tendered a crossed fourpence. He had not probably taken off his cloths for a year. Avarice shone from his cold, glassy eye; he loved no one, and no one probably loved him. The late Dr. PARKMAN was his friend, and was selected as his executer. He was one of the most eccentric and avaricious of mortals, and his life, an account of which we may hereafter give, was exceedingly interesting."

Saturday Evening Post.

THE LEADING LITERARY WEEKLY.

Over Thirty-one Years have now elapsed since the POST began its weekly round of blending instruction and amusement; and in all that beriod, was its success so marked as at the present moment. Possessing undeniably the largest circulation, by many thousands, of any paper of its class in in the Union, its subscribers have the best of reasons for believing that it stands upon a permanent basis, and that they will receive the full value of every dollar intrusted to its publishers. In announcing some of our preparations for the coming year, we may begin by stating our continued connection with MRS. SOUTHWORTH, a writer who, in vigor and fertility of genius, is not surpassed by any, male or female, in the Union. MRS. CAROLINE LEE HENTZ a lady whom it would be almost superfluous to praise, in view of the general popularity of such tales as "The Mob Cap," "Eoline," "Linda." "Rena," etc., also is enrolled among our contributors. We are now engaged in the publication of a story entitled Clara Moreland, By EMMERSON BENNETT, Author of "Viola," "Prairie Flower," "Bandits of the Osage," etc.—And at the opening of the ensuing year we designate commencing the publication of the following Novelet: Miss Thusa's Spinning-Wheel, By Mrs. Lee Hentz, of Florida, Author of "Eoline," "Linda," "Rena," etc. This novelet we design following by a story entitled, A STRAY PATCH FROM AUNT HANNAH'S QUILT, By Mrs. FRANCES D. GAGE, of Ohio, widely known as the author of some admirably written and very effective household poems, sketches, etc. After this we expect to be able to commence THE LOST HEIRESS; A Story of Howlet Hall. By Mrs. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH, Author of "The Curse of Clifton," "Virginia and Magdalene," "Shannondale," "The Deserted Wife," etc.

In addition to these and other Original Tales, involving a large expenditure of money, we shall lay before our readers, as heretofore, choice Tales, Sketches, Essays, Narratives, etc., from the English Magazines—such as have given the Post a name for the excellence of its selections.

Engravings.—In the way of engravings we present at least two weekly—one of an instructive, and the other of a humorous character.

Agricultural Articles, Miscellaneous matter, General News, Witty and Humorous Sketches and Anecdotes, Letters from Europe, Editorials, View of the Produce and Stock Markets, Bank note List, etc., etc., shall also be duly given.

☞Of course, we shall maintain for the Post the character it has acquired, of being a strictly moral paper—not ridiculously squeamish and straight-laced, but really and truly moral—such as may be taken into the family circle without fear. Advertisements of an improper character shall be as heretofore, rigorously excluded.

☞Cheap, Postage.—The postage on the Post to any part of the United States, when paid quarterly in advance, is now only 26 cents a year And we trust that the public generally will show their appreciation of this commendable reduction of postage, by largely increasing the number of papers taken at the various offices—that thus there may be no falling off in the revenue of the Post office Department. This will ensure a continuance of the present reduced rates.

TERMS.—The terms of the POST are Two Dollars if paid in advance, Three Dollars if not paid in advance. For Five Dollars in advance, one copy is sent three years. We continue the following low terms for Clubs, to be sent, in the city to one address, and, in the country, to one post-office.

4 Copies, $5 per annum. 8 Copies (and one to agent, or the getter up of the club) $10. 13 Copies, (and one to Agent or the getter up of the club.) $15. 20 Copies, (and one to Agent, or the getter up of the club,) $20.

The money for Clubs always must be sent in advance. Subscriptions may be sent at our risk. When the sum is large, a draft should be procured if possible—the cost of which may be deducted from the amount Address, always post-paid.

DEACON & PETERSON.
No 66 South Third Stree, Philadelphia

☞N. B.—Any person desirous of receiving a copy of the POST, as a sample can be accommodated by notifying the publishers by letter, (post-paid.)

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the payment of the debt secured by a certain mortgage dated the 20th day of January 1849 executed by Allen Everitt and Julia Ann, his wife, of chesterfield, in Essex County N. Y as mortgagors to Reuben Jones, then of Ausable, in Clinton County, N. Y., as mortgagee and recorded in the office of the Clerk of the County of Essex, in volume O of mortgages pages 228 and 229. on the 9th day of February, 1849, at 7 oclock, P. M. There is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, the sum of $561,02,

Now therefore notice is hereby given that the said mortgaged premises, will by virtue of a power of sale contained in the said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in said case made and provided, be sold at public auction at the Adirondac Hotel, in the village of Keeseville, in Essex County, on the 8th day of March, 1853, at 10 oclock in the forenoon of that day.

The said mortgaged premises are described in said mortgage as follows, viz: all that certain piece or parcel of land situated in the Town of Chesterfield, County of Essex and state of New York, in a patent of three thousand and six hundred acres of land granted by the state of New York to Matthew Adgate, and bounded as follows: Begining at the shore of Lake Champlain, at the South east corner of said patent, running thence west on the south line of said patent to the south east corner of lands heretofore deeded by the said Adgate, one Noah Gridley. Thence north on the east line of said Gridley's land about fifty four rods to a beach tree; Thence due east to the Lake shore; Thence south along the Lake shore as it winds and turns to the place of beginning, containing by estimation one hundred acres of Land be the same more or less. Dated Keeseville November 26th 1852.

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, in the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time. Without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonnrchœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres, Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender skin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating the first diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be deceived, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceive will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend, will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3,000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for.

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. DAVEY & ALLEN,

No. 8, COLLEGE STREET, BURLINGTON, Vt.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up, flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening, side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Gedde's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Feed Mills and Grain Crushes—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batcheider's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—Lawrence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

AGRICULTURAL & HORTICULTURAL TOOLS AND IMPLEMENTS,

a great variety and extensive assortment, such as Hoes, Shovels, Spades, Rakes, Manure and Hay Forks, Scythes, Snaths, Cattle Ties, Draft, Halter and Trace Chains, Garden Syringes, Pruning Saws, Pruning and Budding Knives, Garden Shears and Twig Cutters, Grindstones, Patent Grindstone fixtures, rollers, barn door rolls, &c., &c.

Grain, Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.—We are prepared to furnish Herds Grass, Red Top, Lucerne, White Dutch, Southern, Western and Northern Clover Seed, Beet, Turnip, Onion and Carrot Seed, at Wholesale and Retail at the lowest market prices.

We have by far the largest and most complete assortment of Agricultural Implements Machines, Field and Garden Seeds to be found in the State, which we offer at our new and spacious Ware-Rooms to Farmers and Dealers on terms the most liberal. We are also Commission Merchants and Wholesale and Retail Dealers in heavy and shelf

HARDWARE,

Saddlery, Axles, Springs, Mechanic's Tools, House Trimmings and Furnishing Goods, Cutlery, Cross Cut, Mill and Circular Saws, Paints, Oils, Bird Cages, etc., etc., etc.

As agents of Messrs. D. Prouty & Co., Boston, Wheeler, Millick & Co., Albany, J. T. Grant & Co., Troy, and others we can fill orders for Plows, Horse Powers, Threshers Fan Mills, Straw Cutters, &c., at manufacturers prices. A liberal discount made to Dealers.

Miscellaneous,

MARRIAGE

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life at an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefitted by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the fall consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

MELANCHOLY AND STARTLING

To behold the sickness and suffering endured by many a wife for many years, from causes simple and controllable, easily remedied—or better still,—not incurred, if every

WIFE AND MOTHER

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (within the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By becoming in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S
Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, 50 cts

[ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.]

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE, WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriages, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is so conducive to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

Poetry.

To the Editor of the Lantern:

I have noticed, with unbounded pleasure, the excessive elegance of diction now adopted by some of our poetical writers—such as calling Flowers Flowrets, and so on. I have, therefore, in the following verses, written on this plan.

Some of my friends are so much charmed with its delicacy, that they propose to publish a Paradise Lost under my editorial care, in which that now heavy poem will be made endurable. Should this succeed, I shall alter Shakspeare on the same plan.

The idea was suggested by a dear friend of mine saying, when she saw an infant weep that it shed "such dear little tearlets."

Your admirer, Rosa.

VERSELETS TO A SHIPLET.

The azur sky is all serene, without an Ambient cloudlet,
The active sailorlet is seen ascending
The slim shroudlet;
The Bo'sins whistle has announced
The anchor is "a triplet,"
The sailets catch the breezelets
Breath, and forward flies the shiplet.

The wavelets dash against her sides,
And quivering is each riblet,
The hands on the foreto'sail rush,
To furl the flying giblet;
And thus careering in her pride,
She courses many a milelet,
When all at once the cloudlets rise,
And over cast the sky-let.

The rain-lets dash from out their homes,
As if discharged from pail-let,
The shrieking wind-let rips to shreds
Each vestige of a sail-let;
From every eyelet terror gleams,
While watching the turmoil-let,
And tearlets course adown the cheeks
Of the straight-hair'd cabin boy-let.

On the far distant disc-let now,
The craft-let looms a speck let,
A sigh-let speaks the slooplets doom—
The shiplet is a wrecklet!

Or these—

RHYMELETS TO A LADLET.

WHO HAS TORN HIS COATLET.

Art thou not, lad-let wild aware
That money cost thy coatlet?
That good broadcloth, alas, is dear?
Of this pray make a note-let!

Nor scamper heedlessly about,
Like rude and shaggy bearlet,
And rushing thus each post upon,
Makes such unseemly tare-let!

Nay, never arch thy moody brow,
Nor splutter forth that pooh-let,
Unless thou would'st be look'd upon
As a wicked, wayward fool-let!

Bethink thee that thy parent kind
Works hard for every cent-let,
And gentle lad-let, ne'er again
In thy coat-let make a rent-let!

(Correspondence of the Republican)

San Francisco Aug. 3th 1852.

Friend Tarbell,

Dear Sir:—In my first I wrote yon of the expressions of joy, then being made by the Whigs of San Francisco on receipt of the news of the Whig nominations; but another arrival and how changed the scene; our public and private buildings are clothed in mourning, flags trimmed in black have ever since been floating at half masts, and the general appearance of the City, betokens the loss we feel, in the death of the lamented Statesman and Patriot Henry Clay. Although we had been constantly receiving news of his protracted illness, yet we were unprepared for the sad, sad news of the death of one so good, so great as he, and even now it is almost impossible to believe that he who has so long commanded the applause of the world, and that he who has so often nobly stood forth and demanded the rights of America, and her freemen should be numbered among those that were. Henry Clay is dead but unlike many others will not be forgotten, for as long as America has a name, as long as she is free, so long, will the name of Henry Clay be loved, and revered by his countrymen On Tuesday Aug. 10th the last formal, public demonstration of regard for him and respect for his memory was made, in which all classes of our citizens, all professions trades and associations both civil, political, and military united, forming one of the most imposing pagents ever witnessed on the shores of the Pacific. Upwards of ten thousand persons were estimated as having taken part in the procession and some idea of its grandeur may be formed from the costs which was estimated at one hundred thousand dollars! This the citizens of San Francisco with their well known liberality quickly supplied. The procession occupied some two hours in passing through some of the principal streets, and finaly arrived at the Plazza, where an oration was delivered by the Hon. Ogden Hoffman.—His theme was a grand one, and well was it handled and thus ended the Funeral Obsequies of Henry Clay.

Quartz mining is yet in its infancy, and must continue so as long as the present high price of labor and consequent price of machinery exists; when labor is bro't to a par with other countries, so that the quartz mines of Cal. can be worked similar to the Iron mines at home, then capitalists will invest their money, mechanics, able, and competent will invent and construct machin s proper for their working, and the proceeds of the Quartz mines of Cal will far outstrip any other branch of explains why, they loose fifty per cent in working the auriferous quartz ores. The second fault but of less consideration, is the enormous size of the machines which is compatible neither with the locality of the quartz nor with the position of the mines; most of the richest quartz mines lay near the top of the hills, or near the heads of the rivers therefore it is almost impossible to work them with such machines as require good roads for their transportation. Another inconvenience resulting from the size of the present machines is their cost, rendering a capital of at least fifty thousand dollars necessary. Before any one will invest such a sum of money it must be proved, that the mines are really rich and even if they are so, the gold is often found in connection with Silver or Iron thus rendering the machines now in opperation entirely useless, but as I said above, when labor is brought to a par with other countries, machines can, and will be invented for the proper working of the quartz mines, whether pure or in connection with silver, sulphuret pyrite or any other foreign substance. When this time comes the wealth of Cal. will be unbounded for there is hardly a hill in the state but what more or less quartz is found in it. Since my last a serious affray came off at Sacramento in which the pioneer of the Editorial corps, Hon. E. Gilbert was killed instantly, from his opponents second fire. The difficulty arose from some remarks in the Alta California, of which he was editor about Gov. Biglers celebrated relief bill The weapons used were rifles at a distance of 40 paces. In him the State loose an able advocate. Occurrences of this character are not unfrequent here. My next from the interior. As ever yours truly, B.

San Francisco, Aug. 25th '52.

Col. Tarbell,

Dear Sir;—Eleven days and twenty one hours running time was a quick trip made by myself and several hundred others in the Steam ship "Golden Gate," from Panama to San Francisco, and it was a pleasant voyage too, for we had little sickness after going to sea and the Pacific ocean kept faith with its time honored name. Passing the golden gates of California and rounding Telegraph hill a magnificent spectacle bursts upon the view. Three years since I came into this same bay and eagerly cast about me to see the city of San Francisco which had in a day filled the world with fabulous report. A feeling of disappointment was visible in every one for looming up over a wide mud flat could be seen a curious amalgam of adoba houses, tents, booths and canvass sheds, buried with clouds of dust in the vallies or flapping in the gale on hill tops. Now the hills themselves are swept away, long avenues stretch out into the country, level streets cross them at right angles and great warehouses wall into solid blocks.—Long wharves have gone a long way out in to the harbor among the shipping and the town not to be outdone has got on stilts and waded over the mud flats into the deep water of the bay. At highwater this part of the town seems as though it was on a floating bridge, at low tide it requires no effort of the fancy to suppose the houses built in tree tops. Large sections of these flats are being filled in with earth on which magnificent brick and stone warehouses are going up as by magic, and there are amid this recklessness of expense and adaptation to circumstances of expediency unmistakable evidences of the permanent future greatness of this city. Several fine Steamers leave daily for up river cities and they all go crowded with passengers and loaded down with freight. San Francisco is the most hurrying, buisness, bustling place I ever saw. The Banking places of Montgomery street vie in exterior and interior magnitude with those of Wall St. in New York. The gambling Saloons of Sacramento street have all those cunning devices which their votaries know how so well to display. Sparkles there the wine cup with its rudiest hue. Wanton beauties smile lends its charm and is the presiding genius at many of the tables where the games of chance ring their fickle changes. Music's enchanting melody mingles its avatar. Around the gilded walls hang rich painting of rare merit, starting out of the canvass almost life like displaying voluptuous woman "unadorned." Vice here seems to have overtowered all other countries in its splendor and destructiveness.

The markets at this time are flooded with California produce such as wheat, Barley, Potatoes Onions, Melons, and all varieties of garden sauce. A few day since I went up the bay some thirty miles to San Jose Mission. Farming there is being carried on extensively. I rode past a potatoe patch containing five hundred acres in one field, one gentleman has thirteen hundred and forty acres under cultivation with wheat, barley, potatoes, and a variety of other vegetables. His fences alone have cost him over seventy five thousand dollars. Crops are planted during the rainy season. When ploughing, potatoes are dropped in every third furrow, the succeeding one covering them. The ground is afterwards rolled. Hoeing is only done where the ground is weedy and then they do not hill up as we do in the East. The soil here stands the drought better to be level and rolled down hard. Wheat and barley produce spontaneously after the land has once been seeded. Wheat grain is beat out and left on the ground during harvesting & remains without injury until the first rains fall, when it is harrowed in. This is called a volunteer crop and is generally heavier quality except roots which do not have that crisp and juiciness nor that distinct flavor which characterize those grown in more humid climates, California potatoes alone excepted which indeed owe their mealy delicious flavor to the arid nature of the soil. Farming is as yet expensive as labor commands seventy-five to one hundred dollars a month. Immense herds of cattle are wending their way from Mexico and from over the plains to this country.—Sheep, swine, and poultry are increasing on all sides with marvellous rapidity. Indeed farming at present presents a more flattering feature than trading or mining.

Yours truly

Albany and Montreal Railroad Meeting.

This meeting was largely attended.—There were some 200 delegates from the several Northern counties, among them gentlemen who have been identified with the interests of that part of the country for the last thirty years. The meeting assembled at 3 o'clock, and the following officers were appointed:—

President—Hon. ERASTUS CORNING, of Albany.

Vice Presidents—John J. Harris, of Warren county, Le Roy Morey, of Washington county.

Secretaries—Hon. Orville Clarke, of Washington county, E. H. Rosekrans, of Warren county.

Mr. Gray read an elaborate report of the business of Warren county, showing that it would afford a handsome revenue to a road properly located, on the West side of the Hudson River.

Mr. Morey, of Washington, favored a line on the East side of the Hudson, and gave statistics to show that a road so located would secure a large business from a section of country now remote from any artificial thoroughfare.

Mr. Masters, also of Washington, referred particularly to the lime manufacture in Greenwich. Two establishments alone would furnish the road with 700 barrels of freight per day.

Judge Cheever, of Saratoga, went into an elaborate detail of the business which would be secured by a northern road properly located through the countries of Washington, Saratoga, Warren, Essex and Clinton, to Plattsburgh. He named eight small villages in Saratoga and Washington counties alone, through which this road would pass, which now send to the nearest railroad points passengers whose aggregate fare amount to $49,775 annually. This travel would be doubled if a road passed through them, making $100,000

Local freight business at same points 22,500

Business which would concentrate at Glenn's Falls 100,000

Freight on six million pieces of boards at $3 per 100 pieces 180,000

Freight on 50,000 tons of iron and 75,000 tons of iron ore, at $3 375,000

These three items of freight, viz: 60,000 tons of lumber, 50,000 of iron, and 75,000 of ore make alone 185,000 tons, which is just the amount of freight carried on the Albany and Boston Railroad, as by their last years return, and their freight pays more than half their earnings, a road costing $8,000,000, and paying 7 per cent on their capital.

Mr. C. spoke at considerable length in regard to the vast mineral and forest wealth of the north, and to prove that his estimates were greatly within the true mark. He insisted, too, that, as now twice as much ore as iron is brought south from the iron region, that when this road should be built, this proportion would be greatly increased. The ore would be brought to Albany, to meet the hard coal which would be brought down the Susquehanna road, and here smelted—giving employment to large numbers of persons, and securing to Albany an increase of a thousand in population every year for twenty years.

During the course of his remarks, Judge Cheever said that now it costs from four to five dollars a ton to convey the ore from the mines to the forges; while the ore is sold at the mines for fifty cents a ton. If there was a railroad to these mines, the ore could be brought to Albany for half what it now costs to convey it by wagons to the forges; and as coal could be obtained here at cheap rates, iron could be made here at a profit, and sold at from $3 to $4 a ton less than it can now be sold for in Essex or Clinton counties.

Gen. Clark, of Washington, followed, expressing his pleasure at seeing here the fulfillment of a thirty years' hope—a meeting of northern men to consult upon and to promote northern interests. That region, he said, was seldom thought of at the Capital oftener than once a year; and then it was looked to, with a vast deal of interest by gentlemen who have charge of the political destinies of the State. He admitted that once there was a show of remembrance of the north, when a gentleman, was sent to survey a route for a canal through the northern wilderness, when every one knew that it would be easier to transport one of the pyramids of Egypt to that region than to build a canal there. It was a rough region to be sure, but it contained infinitely more wealth than many pleasant regions, studded with gentlemen's stately mansions. Once a railroad charter was granted [illegible] otel, in the city of Albany, on [illegible] of Nov., 1852, Hon. J. Bunshrewd Yankees, and made subje[illegible] Ticonderoga, was called to the ton and not either to Northern N[illegible] W. Coor, of Whitehall, and the west, or it would be lost to her forever. The Erie canal enlarged was not enough. Railroads must extend their iron arms to every point where it is feasible to tap trade on its way to the Atlantic through channels located out of New York. This road would do so; and this road would be built. He felt sure of it; and when he saw the men around him, who had gathered here upon this occasion, he was ready to thank God that the work was already done.

R. Pruyn, Esq., of Albany, moved a committee to prepare a draft of articles of association for a company to construct a railroad from a point in the projected Albany and Saratoga Railroad, in the town of Half Moon, Saratoga county, to the village of Plattsburgh. And in making this motion, he remarked that it had often been said that Albany lacked enterprise. This he repelled by alluding to the fact that the capital of Albany had helped to build almost every railroad in the State;—among others the Saratoga and Whitehall road, whose managers evinced their gratitude for this aid by even refusing to check baggage through to Albany; and Albany would help to build this road, notwithstanding the various enterprises in which she was now engaged—the Northern (Vermont) road—the Susquehannah road—the Albany and Saratoga road; and last though not least, a Ship Canal to New Baltimore, with a Basin in Albany which would contain three miles of docks for ships drawing 18 feet of water; to be built at an expense of two millions of dollars. Albany fully sympathises with this present movement, and would be found co operating in it heartily and cheerfully.

Mr. Thurman, of Warren, moved to fix the southern terminus of the road at Saratoga, and sustained the motion at considerable length.

Mr. Gibson, of Whitehall, objected to any committee, until the friends of the several routes should have had an opportunity to present the statistics upon which their claims were based.

This question gave rise to considerable debate, in which Messrs. Pruyn, Gibson, Thurman, Simmons, (of Essex) Rosekrans, of Warren, and Cheever, of Saratoga, took part. The latter gentleman wished it to be distinctly understood that Albany could not be expected to interest herself in a road which would result in diverting trade from her—which would be the case if the southern terminus of the road was at Saratoga. By connecting at Half Moon, Albany's interests would be taken care of, and her co-operation secured.

Mr. Thurman's motion was finally lost—only some three or four voices in favor—and the original motion adopted.

The meeting directed that the committee should consist of thirteen to be appointed by the President; when the meeting adjourned to the Mayor's Court Room, at 7½ o'clock.

Evening Session.—The Chair announced the following Committee ordered this afternoon:—

Albany, R. H. Pruyn, J. D. Wasson; Saratoga, Samuel Cheever, Geo. Stover; Washington, Le Roy Morey, Geo. Harvey, O. Clarke; Warren, John J Harris, J. F. Sherrill, T. S. Gray; Essx, Geo. A. Simmons, O. Kellogg; Clinton, Jas, Rogers, J. D. Kingsland.

The Committee retired, when the meeting adjourned until 9 o'clock to morrow morning, at the Hall of the Young Men's Association.

Wednesday Morning.—Mr. Pruyn, from the committee appointed last evening, reported articles of association for the "Albany and Montreal Railroad Company," in the form prescribed by the General Railroad law. The Southern connection is fixed "at some convenient point on the Albany Northern Railroad, in the town of Half Moon, Saratoga county, and the Northern at Plattsburgh—to pass through Saratoga, Washington, Warren, and Essex counties. The capital stock to be two millions.

The following were named as the first Directors:—

Albany—Erastus Corning, John Townsend, G. Y. Lansing and James D. Wasson.

Saratoga—Samuel Cheever.

Warren—John J. Harris and Thomas S. Gray.

Essex—James D. Judd and Sylvanus Wells.

Clinton—Henry Green and James Rogers.

Washington—Orville Clarke and George Harvey.

The location and general interests of the road were discussed by Messrs. Hinnman, of Warren; Kellogg, of Essex; Pruyn, of Albany; Cheever, of Saratoga; Watson, of Essex; and Northrop, of Washington.

On motion of Mr. Geer, of Warren, the report was adopted and the directors confirmed.

On motion of Mr. Cheever, a committee of one from each county, consisting of Messrs. R. H. Pruyn, of Albany; James S. Whalen, of Essex; Samuel Cheever, of Saratoga; Thomas S. Cray, of Warren; John T. Masters, of Washington; James Rogers, of Clinton; Joel F. Potter, of Schroon, to collect statistics, &c.

Subscriptions were then made and the Convention adjourned.

Lake Shore Railroad Meeting.

At a large meeting of the friends of a railroad from Whitehall to Plattsburgh, on the [illegible] de of Lake Champlain, held at this meeting all friendly to the route of the proposed railroad, whereupon Messrs. O. F. Blount, R. A. Loveland and M. T. Clough were appointed such committee.

On motion of O. F. Blount, of Whitehall, it was resolved to appoint a committee of one from each town, from Fort Edward to Plattsburgh inclusive, to procure subscriptions to construct a railway from some point in the village of Whitehall to Plattsburgh, on or near the west shore of Lake Champlain, from persons residing upon the route of the proposed road.

The following gentlemen were appointed such committee: M. K. Platt, Plattsburgh; N. Lapham, Peru; J. Kingsland, Keeseville; W. S. Merriam, Lewis; Belden Noble, Essex; Aaron B. Mack, Westport; George Sherman, Moriah; Charles F. Hammond, Crown Point; Moses T. Clough, Ticonderoga; Robert Patterson, Putnam; D. Barrett, Dresden; Alfred H. Griswold, Whitehall; Isaac V. Baker, Fort Ann; Ezekiel Smith, Kingsbury; James R. Gandall, Fort Edward.

And the following gentlemen were added to such committee: Robt. L. Schuyler, of N. Y.; John M. Davison, of Saratoga Springs; Le Grand B. Cannon, of Troy; Cornelious Vosburgh and Harrison Stephens, of Montreal.

On motion of O. F. Blount, it was resolved that Messrs. H. Gibson, M. T. Clough and Jas. Potter, be appointed a committee to prepare the form of a subscription.

On motion of M. T. Clough, it was resolved that it be recommended to each committeeman, to call a meeting of the citizens of each of the foregoing towns, and present this subject to them.

On motion it was resolved that when this meeting adjourn, to meet at Westport.

On motion of H. Gibson, a corresponding committee was directed to be appointed by the Chair; whereupon the following were named: H. Gibson, of Whitehall; M, T Clough, of Ticonderoga; Edw. M. Dewey, of Crown Point; Geo. W. Goff, of Moriah, and R. A. Loveland, of Westport.

Resolved, That when the meeting adjourn, it adjourn to meet 15th December next, at 12 o'clock M.

Resolved, That the proceedings of the meeting be published.

And then the meeting adjourned.

The Discovery of Ether.

From the Hartford Times.

Much has been said and written relative to the discovery that the inhalation of a certain gas would render the human system insensible to pain. Dr. Morton has a petition before Congress claiming $100,000 as rightfully belonging to him on account of his discoveries and his patent. We believe that he procured a patent for the use of Ether, and he claims that Ether is used in the Army and Navy, and by the public generally, without regard to his patent. It has been claimed, too, that he was the original discoverer of this principal, which robs the surgeon's knife of all that is dreadful about it. But this claim is unfounded.

The discovery was made rather by accident than any scientific discovery, based upon careful study and investigation. In the winter of 1844, Mr. G. Q. Colton gave some exhibitions at Union Hall, in the City of Hartford, consisting of experiments in the use of what is called "Laughing Gas." He used Nitrous Oxide Gas, and those who inhale it were thrown into an abnormal condition, and in most cases they cut queer antics before the audience

Dr. S. A. Cooley, of this city, assisted Mr. Colton. Dr. C. inhaled some of the gas, and its effects caused him to jump, run, and dance about in the highest glow of good feeling. He dashed around the room, over the settees, and across the platform, bruising his limbs very badly. When the effects left him, he was asked if he was not seriously hurt. He replied that he was not hurt at all, and was surprised to find the skin torn from his limbs, and large bruises upon them. He exclaimed at once, "Well if I can stand all this, without feeling it, the severest surgical operation can be performed without producing pain.

Dr. Horace Wells, a Dentist, was present. He caught the idea, and exclaimed, "I believe a tooth can be pulled under the influence of this gas without pain, and I'll try it!" Without delay, himself Dr. Cooley and one or two others, repaired to Dr. Well's office. Dr. Riggs (still a dentist in this city) was called in. Dr. Wells inhaled the gas, and Dr. Riggs extracted a tooth from his jaw. In a few moments, Dr. Wells recovered from the effects of the gas found that the tooth had been extracted, declared that he had felt no sensation of pain whatever, and exclaimed with much feeling, "A new era in tooth-pulling."

Here was the discovery! Here was the practical and successful test of it! If one tooth could be extracted through the influence of this gas, without pain, a thousand or a million similar operations could be performed, with the same gratifying success. Dr. Wells subsequently extracted teeth from the jaws of those who called at his office, using the gas, and succeeding completely in deadoing all sensation to pain.

Months after this, Dr. Morton, who was a student in Dr. Wells' office, made experiments. Dr. Jackson, of Boston, also made experiments, and though ether, a liquid, has been fixed upon as more convenient than the nitrous oxid, which, being a gas, is more difficult to manage—still the same great principle which Dr. Wells first practically [illegible] manner of application and the use of the discovery, the same as there has been in the use and application of steam; but the real discoverer was made as we have here narrated the fact.

New Parties.

It is estimated that certain Whigs—Webster Whigs they style themselves—of Boston, are about organizing a new party. The name is not yet pitched upon. The principals are still in a nebulous state, one only appearing concrete. The preservation of the Union, as in bitter mockery of the departed statesman, whose labors are thus pronounced incomplete, is to be the nucleus and watchword It is to be hoped the estimate which these gentlemen fix upon their ability to replace the great of his time shall not be disappointed by the event.

Nothing is easier than to propose a party upon this or any other basis,—nothing is harder than to make one. The question is not in issue. Nobody maintains the opposite. The Democratic party, which has just swept the country like a hurricane, held the same creed. Sane men who wish to excite discussion, and on the strength of it acquire influence, do not state axioms. They do not rely upon abstract sentiments. When occasion arise, bringing issues with them, there is a call for action as an exponent of belief varies, political action varies, party being the result. Hence this Boston movement is a forced production, uninbued with vitality. It cannot acquire sympathy, because the principle is common to all, and those who strive to appropriate it can only meet with contempt and ridicule. It cannot acquire a party; it only singles out the men who engage in it, as political outlaws, hostile to all parties.

The truth is, no man, and especially no Whig, should talk of a new organization at present. A truce is wanted. The country has been overwhelmed by democracy. It will be time enough to devise new-fangled preventives against another such deluge when the clouds gather. The victorious party is too bulky to live long. It weight will destroy it; or if that be sustained, emergencies will arise inviting a judicious and successful attack from the Opposition. And the Opposition to the new Administration will be usually active, talented, and ultimately powerful. It will recroit from every quarter. Its distinctive features will appear as it advances; and the party in power will not long withstand the assaults. No fact is more indelibly written in history than that no party can have a permanent hold of the reins. They must, sooner or later, change hands.—[N. Y. Times.

Rail Road Conventions.

The friends of a road on the west side of Lake Champlain over 200 strong met at Albany on the 23d ult. pursuant to a call for that purpose. Those in favor of a Western route thro' the Schroon valley assembled at the Mansion House and those in favor of the Lake Shore route at the city Hotel. Subsequently, all assembled in the Young Men's Association Room, and the meeting was organized as reported for the Albany Journal and published in another place. In the course of the preliminary debates the friends of the Lake shore route were given to understand that they were in the wrong place as a proposition to adop their route would not be entertained by the meeting. Thereupon, they retired and organized by themselves to the number of seventy five, and over.

As advocates of a western route we observed from Essex Co. Messrs. Wells of Jay, Rogers of Ausable Forks, Kellogg, Judd, Noble, and Williams of Elizabethtown, Potter, and Smith of Schroon, Gen. Gray, and others of Warren Co. and many others.

It should be noted that after leaving Schroon, two routes are proposed, one through Elizabethtown and Keeseville, and the other by way of Keene, Jay, and Ausable Forks.

As friends of the Lake shore route, Messrs. Loveland, and Persons of Westport, Goff, and Sherman of Moriah, Dewy, and Russell of Crownpoint, Burnett and Clough of Ticonderoga, Blount of Whitehall, and numerous others.

The proceedings of this convention also are published in another place as reported by the Secretaries.

Hon. George A. Simmons, C. F. Tabor, J. D. Kingsland, Henry Green, and Jona: Tarbell appeared as delegates from Keeseville backed by a subscription of 20,000, but under all the circumstances presented at Albany they did not deem it advisable to unite with either organization. The people of Keeseville looking as they should to their own interests will probably give their influence, and their means to that organization, which shall give the best assurance of the most immediate, and successful prosecution of a road and through this place.

Of the probabilities of these roads we noticed that the Lake shore folks were enthusiastic, and full of confidence. As to funds they had abundant assurances from Mr. Schuyler, the great railroad Stockholder and from Mr. Van Ransellaer President of the Saratoga road. As to the back route we are less advised, but if the Albany people are in earnest in the matter the necessary funds will doubtless be raised. It is not probable however, that two roads will be built. Which will it be? The developments of the next few weeks are looked for with anxiety. The result depends upon the activity energy, and determination of the friends of those respective routes. The Meeting at Keeseville it would be well to remember, and be well attended by the citizens of the Lake towns. Now is the time to strike. "Now is the day, and now the hour." Laborers, farmers, jobbers, merchants, and business men all are interested in it. A vast amount of money will be expended in its construction aside from its subsequent advantages. It is the last link, and a small one too between the great cities of Montreal, and New York. This will complete the line through the Empire State North and South, as it now is East and West. The enterprise is a small one compared with its results. The great resources of Canada and Northen New York are excelled only by the mighty West. Friends, take hold and have this little link inserted in a great, and mighty chain. Every man can do something. Let him try.

HANDSOME.—Messrs. PEIRCE & SOUTHWICK gave a "Thanksgiving Dinner" to the operators in their Gas Fitting establishment, at the St. Charles, on Thursday afternoon. A world of good cheer prevail-

Plattsburgh and Montreal Rail Road.

We had the honor of an invitation, and the pleasure to attend the opening of this road. The pressure of politics delayed a notice at the time, but we doubt not it will be of more service now, given as it is in connexion with other interesting Rail Road enterprises.

The excursion took place on the 7th of October. There were a large number of guests, numbering over 400 from various sections of N. Y. and Vt. We left Plattsburgh at 5 minutes before 8 o'clock A. M. and running leisurely, reached Montreal at 11 o'clock, making the distance in 3 hours and 5 minutes including stops.

The stations on the way are Beekmantown, West Chazy, Sciota, Mooers village, Mooers junction (crossing of this and the Ogdensburgh road) Hemmingford, Sherington, Pigeoniere, St. Porrie, Isidore, and Caughnawaga.

The country along the rout is mostly capable of a high state of cultivation, but at present is apparently poorly cultivated, nor are the villages at present, of any great importance. Caughnwaga was a point of considerablo interest as an Indian village, where whites are not allowed to dwell, the Priest and Teachers excepted. At this place also passengers are transferred from the cars to the Steam Ferry, and coveyed thence over the St. Lawrence to Lachine. This passage was the most delightful portion of the trip, and must ever be to those who are moved by the beautiful, and lovely in nature. The view in every direction is truly enchanting. We made the crossing going in 24 m. and in returning in 13 m. From Lachine to Montreal the pasage is by cars, and such cars! Tho' elegantly finished, and cushioned in the most luxurious manner, their ancient English style was an object of curiosity to a yankee.—During this part of the ride passengers were delighted with the sight of a first class steamer working her way up the Lachine canal, a work of stupendous magnitude, and expense.

Our stay at Montreal was of course short leaving at 12 o'clock, and 3 m. We arrived at Plattsburgh at 2 o'clock, and 40 m. making the distance in 2 h. 37 m. Our return was greeted by the cheers of the citizens, the waving of handkerchiefs, and firing of cannon. Refreshments were here provided on the most ample scale. Over 400 guests from among the first men of Montreal, N. Y. and Vt. partook of a bountiful repast. —— Speeches were made by Mr. Sweetland, President of the Southern portion, and Mr. Coffin President of the Northern portion of the road, by Hon. G. A. Simmons, Chancellor Wallworth, Col. A. C. Moore, Sheriff Boston of Montreal, and Col. G. M. Beckwith, Hon. W. C. Watson of Port Kent was called on, but declined. We took copious notes of the remarks made on the occasion, but a full report would swell our article to such an extent as to render it uninteresting. The leading ideas advanced, however, were, the diminished cost of rail roads through experience; the increase of travel and business with the development of the country, sufficient to supply every road that is or may be built; railroads as a means of strengthening the Union of the States, and preserving the peace of nations; the scenes of the present compared with those of forty years ago; the incomprehensibility of present improvements to those who lived half a century ago; the extension of this road so as to unite the two great cities of Montreal and N. Y.; the Ship canal; and Annexation. Mr Sweetland stated that this road cost only $13,000, a mile, equipped and ready for running.there had been no great contracts & no salaries to officers, and that it was built in one year from the day ground was broken. He also stated that at one time one vote only defeated the project of a Canal from Plattsburgh to Ogdensburgh as a state work.

Mr. Coffin stated that the St. Lawrence never freezes over at Caughnawaga, but that, there would soon be a bridge at that place. Applause was frequent, and three cheers were given for the President of the United States, and Queen Victoria. Thus have we given a meagre sketch of the day's excursion. Nothing was omitted to make it agreeable. Among other sources of amusement the Amphyons, and the Burlington Cornet Brass Band were in attendance, and discoursed some of their best music.—The opening was eminently gratifying, and we understand the road is meeting the expectations of its most sanguine friends. We commend it to all travelling north, or west.

THE BARKER FAMILY.—This family favored our citizens with a musical entertainment, on Saturday eve. Their pieces were selected with good taste, and were exceedingly well sung, especially the National Song "Flag of our Union" and "The ocean burial or the deep sea." In our opinion this was the best Entertainment we have had in a year, with the exception of the Hutchinsons. We were sorry the attendance was so slim, but the fact of it is, there is so many new fangled "isms" and catch penny imposters, that it is a matter of difficulty to discern merit and reward it

RAIL ROAD.

MR. EDITOR:

The prospect which we now have of the construction of a Rail Road within a short time from Plattsburgh south, giving a continuous line of Rail Road from Montreal to New York, is indeed cheering to us of the "Siberian Region." We have nothing to say as to the several proposed routs, so that the road touches this place (Keeseville,) and this we believe to be a fair index of the feeling at all points. But it is said "that all natures differences keeps all natures peace," and so we make no doubt will be the result in this case, and that we shall all or nearly all in the end harmonize on one route and all pull together; in the mean time it is to be remembered that Rail Roads can't go a cousining, and with reference to this road especially what is wanted is the straightest, shortest and most level route between the two points to be connected, so that the New England roads may be beat out of sight as they will be by ours, and to these things local differences must yield to a great extent. The local business of the road will be great, both in passengers and freight, whichever route may prevail, and as to through business, which will be second to but few roads in the country, that cannot be much affected by the location of the road at intermediate points. So the first thing with all should be to secure the road, for whichever route prevails we all have a deep interest in having a road, and none can be constructed upon either route which will not benefit us all. In saying this it must be understood that we regard the village of Keeseville as a point that either route will touce as a matter of course. The day has gone by when rail roads avoid country villages when they can be reached without essential increase of distance or expense. In other words it is ascertained that there is a natural connecnection between people and business and the earnings of a rail road. If any one doubts this let them ask the Ogdensburgh road. The great effect of a rail road is to equalize advantages, and to make a farm worth as much or nearly so three hundred miles from market as one fifty, and so with other property. In this view our farmers and business men can well afford to take stock, even had they no expectation of ever realizing a cent directly in return. It is said that the increase in value of the farming lands of St. Lawrence Co. alone, occasioned by the construction of the Ogdensburgh road, is more than the cost of that road, which has been a very expensive one; these same influences are to be regarded in our action with reference to our proposed road and should swell the local stock subscriptions. Men should not feel as if they were giving their money away by an act which in fact is to enrich them. And it is to be remembered that we cannot depend upon the facilities of water communication afforded by our lake, even to the extent we have heretofore. The steamboats on the lake the last year have hardly landed at the most important points on the Western shore, and when they have it was only as feeders to the Vermont rail roads. They even forgot Plattsburgh almost entirely, but since it has become the terminus of a rail road their recollection has revived wonderfully.

Without taking ground then at this time, (for we certainly have not sufficient facts yet to do so,) as to the precise route of the road, or as to whether it shall be on the lake or middle route, the first thing is to realize the importance of the project, of connecting the great basin of the St. Lawrence from the North with the Ocean, and the immense local advantages to be derived We can afford to help largely in building the road from direct and indirect considerations, for who doubts that the stock will be a paying investment; but we choose rather to hold forth as inducements the indirect advantages which cannot fail.

Albany is organizing a road North to Plattsburgh, which as yet is not located North of the Schroon valley. Troy and the Troy and Saratoga, and the Saratoga and Whitehall roads, and the people on the line are moving with reference to the lake shore road. The leading rail road men of Albany say they think more of this projected Northern Road, than any similar project that ever emenated from that city. They are acting in earnest, and its friends say that the road will be built. This much we predict, there will be but one road built and there will be one,, which it remains to be soon. KEESEVILLE.

HOME JOURNAL.—This we consider a valuable acquisition to the reading of every family. It is an invaluable fireside companion. Its selections are always timely and judicious; its criticisms fair and just. GEORGE P. MORRIS, the popular song writer, a man ——"of infinite jest,

Of most excellent fancy,"

and N. P. WILLIS are its Editors and Proprietors. Mr. Willis is one of the readiest as well as one of the most original and accomplished writers of the day; and has had great experience as an Editor. He depicts life as it passes with a vigorous pen. †

We conclude this notice with the remarks of the "Gem of the Prairie," published at Chicago, every word of which we endorse: "The Home Journal is one of the few newspapers of the country that is never taken up without real profit, and never missed without so much dead loss. It furnishes a style of reading and a class of information that can be gotten nowhere else. if a person takes the New York Times, he can jog on very comfortably thro' life without the New York Tribune—or if he reads the Chicago Tribune, he will be 'in town' without reading the Democrat—but he who tries to get on without the Home Journal, plods along with one shoe off—a loss not supplied by the fact of his having the other shoe on. Morris & Willis furnish just those criticisms on art and music, those choice se[lections] best writers, and those [sketches] the heart of society, wh[ich] can; or at any rate, whi[le]

Spirit Rappings.

We have had in our midst for the past few days, a young lady that pretends to hold communion with the spirit world. Many of our citizens have visited her, and some, we are sorry to say, have allowed themselves to be deluded by this most consumate piece of chicanery that ever cursed an intelligent people with its presence. We consider its teachings immoral in the widest sense of the term for the very reason that it strikes a giant blow, at the fundamental principles of Christianity. The evils that follow in its wake are of the greatest magnitude, surpassing even the woe and misery caused by second adventism. The following is pertinent and timely. †

RAPPINGS AND SPIRIT MANIFESTATIONS,—There would be occasion for a speedy enlargement of the Insane Asylums of the country on account of the spirit-rappings and manifestations, if the thing goes on as it has begun. A lady in Cincinnatti had to be taken to the Asylum at Columbus a few days ago, on account of the complete overthrow of the reason by modern spiritualism; and Mr. Cist, the Editor of the Advertise says: "On a visit, last week to the Ohio Luuatic Asylum at Columbus, I found twenty persons there whose insanity was clearly traced to the same cause, (spirit rappings) and yet we have this wretched delusion in profitable exercises in Cincinatti."

It is stated that there are nine victims of spirit-rapping in the Utica Asylum. Davis the Seer, declares sixty per cent of the manifestations bogus: and the frightful increase of insanity among mediums and believers is pretty good evidence that the other forty per cent, is much more injurious than profitable to the human intellect. In many minds it seems to finish the work commenced by second Adventism—the fruits being neglect of business, neglect of families, running after visionaries and pretended seers, scouting of christianity and institutions, spiritual wafism, insanity, and in some cases suicide—rather a dark catalogue for good guardian spirits to bring upon those who think they hold converse with them and are guided by their influence.—Cleveland Herald.

MR WATSON,

Dear Sir.—I have analysed two samples of the Glass, from the smelting furnace.—One a deep reddish purple, the other a light blue, variegated here and there with narrow bands of white, The following are the results.

100 parts of dry Glass gave of	Reddish Purple Glass	Light Blue Glass
Silica	68,85	68.55
Manganese	8,05	9,14
Iron	4,15	3,19
Cobalt	trace	0,05
Arsenic	trace	0,12
Lime	17,50	17,11
Magnesia	0.15	0,12
Potassa	0.85	0,43
Soda	0,35	0,22
	99,90	99,65

In the reddish purple glass, the coloring matter is principally Manganese and Iron. In the light blue variety, Manganese, Iron, Cobalt, and Arsenic. Cobalt communicates the blue tint to it and Arsenic the milky White color.

Analysis of Copper Ores from Essex County.

	Copper Ore No 160	Copper Ore No 68
Copper	0,81	44,50
Iron	40,45	21,30
Sulphur	46,05	30,20
Carbonic acid	—	—
Silica	11,90	3,70
	99,71	99,70

No. 106 is Iron pyrites containing a small per centage of coppor. The per centage of copper is too small to make the ore of any particular value.

No. 68 is copper pyrites containing Iron as it all most invariably does. This is sufficiently rich in copper to make it valuable if found in any considerable quantity.—The greater part of the copper of commerce comes from this kind of ore.

We would call the attention of our readers to the annual meeting of the Essex Co. Ag. So. and also that of the Clinton Co. So., of which see notice in another column.

SUICIDE.—A young man about 22 years of age, in the employ of Goulding, Green, and Conro. by the name of Stephen Popplestone committed suicide by hanging himself on Monday morning last. He was married on Thanksgiving day. On leaving his wife in the morning he kissed her and appeared to be in his usual spirits. Jealousy is the reason assigned for the melancholy act. †

Eighteenth Anniversary of the Essex and Champlain Baptist Association held Sept. 22 and 23, 1852: Issued from this office.

This Association is now very prosperous. There are under its jurisditotion 18 churches, with 1242 members. The "Circular Letter" by Rev. J. W. EATON, is a very able and interesting paper. Rev. M. N. STEARNS was designated to write the next Circular Letter and Rev. J. W. EATON to preach the next Annual sermon.

Notable Visitors.—Our village has been visited within the past two weeks by two [pe]rsons, who in their way and time have [cr]eated no little sensation among the credu[lous].

1. "Sleeping Lucy," the same who spent in which she has acquired a handsome property. Her permanent home is Reading, Vt. Lucy, now Mrs. Cook is a woman of unimpeachable moral character, and a kind hearted woman.

2. A "Spirit rapper," whose name and whereabouts we have not taken the pains to enquire. She produced a tremendous commotion, and her "Uncle Lyman" especially gave some "raps" that knocked the table endways. For a time, not a few were influenced in a most powerful manner.—The result has been, however, a thoro' investigation by our most knowing citizens, and as far as we can learn, the following opinions are now entertained by most, if not every one who have examined the "case:"

1. That the "rapper" is a "strange woman" of whom nothing is known. 2. That the "raps" are caused by electricity, but how, or why is a mystery. 3. That the pretence of a communion with Sprits is a humbug. 4. That the tendency of the humbug is to loosenes in morals, infidelity and insanity. 5. That the money paid to this woman has been rather foolishly squandered, and 6. That until some master mind like Franklin's discovers the mystery the less these things are patronized the better. So says the Editor.

COL. BENTON ON THE PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.—Addressing his constituents a few days ago, Colonel Benton adverted to the expenditure of the General Government as a fit subject for reform; but at the same time he rebuked the bitter partisans who complain of its increase as an abuse resulting from Whig rule. The Col. said:

"Let me do justice. Party warfare throws the blame of these sixty millions on the present Whig Administration. Inexorable history will have to qualify that reproach, and to tell that Democratic majorities were in both Houses of Congress when that appalling sum was voted! And further, that it would have been seventy, instead of sixty millions, if the 'lower' House (as it is called) had sanctioned all the appropriations voted in the 'upper.'"

THE NORTHERN
New York Mutual
INSURANCE COMPANY,

Plattsburgh, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Capital, 100,000.

THIS Company is organized under the General Insurance Law of the State of New York, with a sound, reliable capital, and offers the following superior inducements:

1. The safer kinds of property are separated entirely from the more hazardous; affording the advantages of two distinct companies, with the expense of but one.

2. The first class, or Farmer's Department, consists of Farm-houses, Farm buildings and their contents and detatched dwellings and their contents in villages. when unexposed by more hazardous buildings,

3. The second class or Merchant's Department, consists of exposing dwellings, stores, merchandize,and property not deemed specially hazardous.

4. Each class pays its own losses and thus securing equal justice and proportional rates to both.

5. Not more than $3,000 of the first class, or more than $2,000 of the second class, will be taken in one risk, nor any number of risks so contiguous as probably to subject the Company to a loss of over $3,000 at any one fire; thereby saving it from heavy and ruinous losses.

6. In taking surveys of property, the agent will be the agent of the company, and the company be responsible for the correctness of all surveys made by its agents.

7. Any one insured, may at any time surrender his policy and withdraw from the company by paying his proportion of the losses and expense up to the date of such surrender.

8. Applications will take effect at noon of the day on which they are made (unless a different day is directed by the applicant,) thus relieving the party from anxiety and suspense.

9. The company no have two-thirds clause, but will pay all loss and damage not exceeding the amount insured.

10. In case of difference of opinion in settlement of losses, the company will submit the same to arbitration in the county where the should accrue, not required for the payment of losses.

12. This company will be responsible for losses by fire caused by lightning.

13. This company will take no risks in cities.

☞ The Directors return their acknowledgments to the public for ther readiness in aiding the organization of this company, and will endeavor to make it a safe and reliable institution, affording protection from the ravages of fire, at reasonable rates, and with certainty of payment in case of loss.

THE LEADING LITERARY WEEKLY

Over Thirty one Years have now elapsed since the POST began its weekly round of blending instruction and amusement; and in all that period, was its success so marked as at the present moment. Possessing undeniably the largest circulation, by many thousands, of any paper of its class in the Union, its subscribers have the best of reasons for believing that it stands upon a permanent basis, and that they will receive the full value of every dollar intrusted to its publishers. In announcing some of our preparations for the coming year, we may begin by stating our continued connection with MRS. SOUTHWORTH, a writer who, in vigor and fertility of genius, is not surpasssed by any, male or female, in the Union. MRS. CAROLINE LEE HENTZ a lady whom it would be almost superfluous to praise, in view of the general popularity of such tales as "The Mob Cap," "Eoline," "Linda." "Rena," etc, also is enrolled among our contributors. We are now engaged in the publication of a story entitled Clara Moreland, By EMMERSON BENNETT, Author of "Viola," "Prairie Flower," "Bandits of the Osage," etc.—And at the opening of the ensuing year we designate commencing the publication of the following Novelet: Miss Thusa's Spinning-Wheel, By Mrs. Lee Hentz, of Florida, Author of "Eoline," "Linda." "Rena," etc. This novelet we design following by a story entitled, A STRAY PATCH FROM AUNT HANNAH'S QUILT. By Mrs. FRANCES D. GAGE, of Ohio, widely known as the author of some admirably written and very effective household poems, sketches, etc. After this we expect to be able to commence THE LOST HEIRESS; A Story of Howlet Hall. By Mrs. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH, Author of "The Curse of Clifton," "Virginia and Magdalene," "Shannondale," "The Deserted Wife," etc.

In addition to these and other Original Tales, involving a large expenditure of money, we shall lay before our readers, as heretofore, choice Tales, Sketches, Essays, Narratives, etc., from the English Magazines—such as have given the Post a name for the excellence of its selections.

Engravings.—In the way of engravings we present at least two weekly—one of an instructive, and the other of a humorous

Agricultural Articles, Miscellaneous matter, General News, Witty and Humorous Sketches and Anecdotes, Letters from Europe, Editorials, View of the Produce and Stock Markets, Bank note List, etc., etc, shall also be duly given.

☞ Of course, we shall maintain for the Post the character it has acquired, of being a strictly moral paper—not ridiculously squeamish and straight-laced, but really and truly moral—such as may be taken into the family circle without fear. Advertisements of an improper character shall be as heretofore, rigorously excluded.

☞ Cheap Postage.—The postage on the Post to any part of the United States, when paid quarterly in advance, is now only 26 cents a year And we trust that the public generally will show their appreciation of this commendable reduction of postage, by largely increasing the number of papers taken at the various offices—that thus there may be no falling off in the revenue of the Post office Department. This will ensure a continuance of the present reduced rates.

TERMS.—The terms of the POST are Two Dollars if paid in advance, Three Dollars if not paid in advance. For Five Dollars in advance, one copy is sent three years. We continue the following low terms for Clubs, to be sent, in the city to one address, and, in the country, to one post-office.

4 Copies, $5 per annum. 8 Copies (and one to agent, or the getter up of the club) $10. 13 Copies, (and one to Agent or the getter up of the club,) $15. 20 Copies, (and one to Agent, or the getter up of the club,) $20.

The money for Clubs always must be sent in advance. Subscriptions may be sent at our risk. When the sum is large, a draft should be procured if possible—the cost of which may be deducted from the amount. Address, always post paid.

DEACON & PETERSON.
No 66 South Third Stree, Philadelphia

☞ N. B.—Any person desirous of receiving a copy of the POST, as a sample can be accommodated by notifying the publishers by letter, (post paid.)

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise. Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters No 5 Beaver street ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L's remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks.

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5 000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK. Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, with but one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend, will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for,

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHKY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills and the good results which always follow their use, a conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see direction with each box. Price $1. sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address, All communications destroyed or returned

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

Notice this—Address all letters to C. W. LISPENARD, M. D., No. 5 Beaver st. Albany, N. Y.

AGRICULTURAL WARE-HOUSE AND SEED STORE.

DAVEY & ALLEN,

No. 8, COLLEGE STREET, BURLINGTON, Vt.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep breaking up flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self-sharpening, side-hill, double-mould board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Gedde's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batchelder's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction.

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—Lawrence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

MARRIAGE

HAPPINESS AND COMPETENCE.

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life at an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefitted by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the full consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

MELANCHOLY AND STARTLING

To behold the sickness and suffering endured by many a wife for many years, from causes simple and controllable, easily remedied—or better still,—not incurred, if every

WIFE AND MOTHER

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (within the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By beginning in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, 50 cts (ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.)

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE, WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is an ornament to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND COPIES

The Cayuga Chief says, that a man who will take a paper for a length of time and then send it back 'refused,' and 'unpaid for,' would swallow a blind dog's dinner and then stone the dog for being blind.— That is just exactly what we think, only more so.

VALUABLE RELIC.—We copy the following letter from the original, now at the Museum in this city. It was intercepted by the British at Fishkill and never reached its destination. It subsequently fell into the possession of a family in this country, where it has ever since remained, until a week or two since, when the argus eyes of Mr. Tomlinson found its resting place, wrested it from its obscurity and placed it among the large number of documents of former times, arranged at the Museum for the inspection of the public.—Po'keepsie Eagle.

HEAD QUARTERS, Dob's Ferry,
August 10th, 1781.

DEAR SIR:—An anxiety for your Excellency's safety induces me to transmit a report I lately received from New York, though it may not in reality have a sufficient foundation, still caution on the subject may not be improper.

I am informed that George Harden, James Kilty, one Bice, of Duchess county, and a fourth person whose name is not noted, are promised a very considerable reward if they will seize your person and conduct you to New York.

The place to which these fellows resort, [together with Richard Smith, son of Claudius Smith] and Isaac Sissio, a molatto, [who are both also traversing the country,] are at Patrick McDonald's, above the Highlands, at Galloway's, son in law to Austin Smith; at Fletcher Matthews' and his father's; at Coleman's, uncle to Richard Smith, and at the Rummy's, one or both, whom are brothers by law to Claudius Smith.

Your excellency will judge of the prosperity of having those places watched, as also John Hedering, at Murders Creek, who it is said serves as a pilot to convey people from McDonald's through the mountains, below Soverign's Tarven, on their way to New York.

With wishes for your personal safety, I am, with great esteem.

Your Excellency's most ob't humble ser't,
G. WASHINGTON.

HIS EXCELLENCY, GOVERNOR CLINTON.

The endorsement and superscription were as follows;

August 10th, 1781.—General Washington's Letter ob't Emissaries employed to seize the Governor. On Public Service.

HIS EXCELLENCY GOVERNOR CLINTON, Poughkeepsie.

G. WASHINGTON.

LOUIS NAPOLEON IN NEW YORK CITY.—The Brooklyn Daily Advertiser, moralizing upon the rapid ascent of Louis Napoleon up the ladder of ambition, from positive poverty, to superlative grandeur and power, recals some reminiscence of his sojourn in that city many years ago. The editor says:

"Strange events have occurred within a few years in reference to that man! We knew him whilst he was residing in New York, at a lodging house in Reade street, then kept by a gentleman who now occupies a high official position under the French government. At that time he was very poor, and very dissipated. Notoriously profligate in his habits, and without the pecuniary ability to indulge to the full bent of his inclination the culpable propensities which characterized him, he was frequently expelled from certain places in which he obtruded himself, and more than a dozen times was the occupant of a cell at the old Jail in the Park, long since torn down.

Not long prior to his leaving the United States he was arrested for a misdemeanor committed by him at the disreputable house of a woman whose establishment he had often visited, and the writer of this article was employed professionally by him to save him from the threatened consequences of his recklessness and indiscretion. We little supposed at that time that the thoughtless gay young man who was then our client (and who is still indebted to us for counsel fees and disbursements) would become Emperor of France. Such, however, is now his "manifest destiny," although we believe that his realization of his ambitious hopes and aspirations will but hasten the fearful doom which unquestionably impends over him."

The Model Minister.

He never exchanges. Is not particular whether he occupies a four-story house or a ten footer for a passonage. Considers "Donation parties" an invention of the adversary, preaches sound the commandments in such a circular way as not to hit the peculiarities of any of his parishoners. Selects the hymn to suit the singing choir instead of himself: never forgets when excited in debate that pulpit cushions are expensive articles. Visits all his people once a month, and receives their visits whenever they choose to inflict 'em, brings forth things "new and old" every Saturday more particularly new. Knows by intuition, at a funeral, the state of every distant relative of the deceased, and always hits the right nail on the head in his prayer. When he baptizes a girl baby, never afflicts the anxious mother by pronouncing Louisa, Louisy! frowns upon all attempts to get him a new cloak, looks upon 'bronchitis, throat complaints,' and 'journeys to Europe,' as modern humbugs; never wears a better coat than any of his parishoners. Submits his private personal expenses to a committee of the dunderheads in his congregation; has the eloquence of Paul—the wisdom of Solomon—the patience of Job—the meekness of Moses—the constitution of an Elephant and lives on $200 a year!—Olive Branch.

A punster says—"My name is Somerset. I am a miserable bachelor. I cannot marry, for how could I hope to prevail on any young lady, possessed of the slightest notion of delicacy, to turn a Somerset."

CUBA.

Another intense excitement has been raised, and allayed in the last few days about our relations with this Island. It is as follows:

One Purser Smith on board of Mr. George Law's steam Ship Cresent City, was charged by the Cuban Authorities with acting the spy, and refused him, and the ship leave to land. A great hue, and cry was raised, that our flag had been insulted, our rights trampled under foot, and to use a vulgar phrase "the D—l was to pay, and no pitch hot." The Government was called on to vindicate our injured honor, but President Fillmore like a sensible man as he is, allowed to Cuba, the same right we claim for ourselves, the common sense right to dictate who may, or may not enter their ports. Mr. Law in substance threatened to make war on his own account, and trust to the people of the U. S. to sustain him. Mr. Fillmore directed the Mails to be withheld from his vessel, and threatened Mr. Law with the vengeance of this Government if he undertook to meddle with its affairs, and at the same time was equally prompt to enquire into the conduct, of the Cuban authorities. Mr. Law backed out, Purser Smith "acknowledged the corn," Cuba is satisfied with Purser Smith's explanations, and "all's well" again. Thanks to a prompt, sensible Whig President.

FORGOTTEN FRIENDS.—Among those who attended the Rail Road meeting at Albany and did good service for their friends, and respective routes, were W. C. Watson of Port Kent, and A. Wilder, and Jas. W. Steele of Lewis. We forgot to name them last week in our notice of the meeting.

THE CITIZEN SOLDIER.

SHOULDER—ARMS!

Our readers are aware of a new Militia law in this state. Organization under it is going forward rapidly. In Essex county there is a very fine regiment commanded by Col. H. J. Persons, of Westport. Our friend, John L. Merriam of Wadhams Mills is Lt. Col. W. D. Ross, of Essex is Adjutant, James B. Ross commands a company, M. F. Nicholson, Dep. Co. Clerk, another, &c. &c. Hail! Col. Persons, Col. Merriam, Capt. Ross, Capt. Nicholson, and others. We raise our hat!

The annual parade, and drill of this regiment took place at Ticonderoga, the field of our early exploits in this line, in the second week of October, and we learn from the officers that they had a most glorious time. We have been trying to get hold of some facts for publication, and they have only just come to hand through the Plattsburgh Republican in the following from the Glen's Falls Rep. Will not Col. Persons furnish us with a list of the Officers, Field Staff, and company, for publication? We are earnestly in favor of a well organized, well equipped, and well trained Citizen Soldiery, and wish our friends every honor, and success.

31st Regiment—Annual Parade.—Now that the engrossing and exciting political turmoil has subsided, we are beginning to find leisure to speak of local matters and doings, some of which deserved an earlier notice. We wish particularly to call the attention of our martial spirited readers to a brief notice of the Annual Parade and Review of the 31st Regiment of Militia of this State, which took place during the second week of October, at Ticonderoga. The district covering this Regiment is composed of the counties of Essex and Warren which, in connection with the county of Clinton, form the 14th Brigade district, under the command of Gen. Thomas. S. Gray. The 31st Regiment is commanded by Col. H. J. Person of Essex, and when fully organized will be composed of four companies of the line in Essex county, and four in Warren. The Essex county companies are fully organized, uniformed and equipped;—two companies in this county are also fully organized and two others partially so. The Annual Parade of the Regiment, so far as organized—comprising six companies fully or partially equipped—was held on the beautiful grounds in the vicinity of the old Fort Ti, and on the immediate margin of Lake Champlain. The head quarters and general rendezvous was at the Pavillion, which was given up to the exclusive possession of the Regiment. The weather during the parade, which was continued through four days, was delightful, and with the exception of a severe accident to Adjutant Person, by a fall from his horse, the occasion passed most pleasantly and satisfactorily. We have never met a more gallant and gentlemanly set of officers, nor a body of men more admirable in all the characteristics which mark excellent soldiers. Their discipline, for the little time nearly all of them had passed on drill or duty of any kind, was extremely praiseworthy, and received the commendation of every observer. The perfection of that portion of the Regiment located in Essex County, reflects the highest credit upon the energy and efficiency of the labors of Col. Person, who to all the requisites for a superior commanding officer, adds the accomplishments of a genuine gentleman. The Col.'s staff was full and elegantly equipped in the new costume.—Brigadier General Gray was also present during the parade with a part of his staff, for the purpose of reviewing and giving his personal encouragement to the officers and men of the Regiment. On the third day after review, Gen. Gray addressed the Regiment in some well considered remarks on the propriety, importance and advantages of a thoroughly organized and well disciplined citizen soldiery. One of the most interesting as well as pleasant and satisfactory matters of the parade, was the presence of the Pay master of the Regiment with ample funds, by whom every man was promptly paid in full, before leaving the rendezvous. And such we are assured will invariably be the payment of this Regiment and of the Brigade while under their present officers. It is proposed to go into encampment with this Brigade next fall, in company with the 13th Brigade, at some convenient point which will best accommodate both. We trust that each of the companies in this county will, in the mean time, not only complete their organization and equipment, but also become thoroughly disciplined for the occasion.—[Glen's Falls Rep.

"GIRLS, COME OUT WEST!"—So writes Mr. Allen Harper from Andover, Henry county, Illinois. He says that for young women who are not afraid to work there is a first rate chance in that region. If they desire to become farmers', mechanics', or tradesmen's wives, he says their wishes can be accomplished, and if they prefer to remain single, they can earn at housework or sewing $1,50 to $2 per week, and receive the best of treatment. Any who desire more detailed information, may write

RAIL ROAD.

FRIEND TARBELL:—

As the subject of a railroad has been the topic of conversation for the last few weeks, and it being a project that is needed as much as anything at the present time, I embrace the opportunity, by your permission, to endeavor to set the matter before your readers in such a manner that those who are ignorant of the locality of the proposed routes, can judge for themselves which of them should be chosen.

Probably most of your readers, Mr. Editor, have been advised of the fact that the number of proposed routes is three.—The Lake route passes south from Keeseville, as far as the town of Lewis, then taking a Southeasterly direction, passes thro' the town of Westport, and so on up the Lake shore to Whitehall. The Valley route takes the same course as far as Lewis, and keeps up the Boquet valley, as far as the town of Half Moon, in Saratoga county, and there intersects the Albany Northern Railroad. The third from Keeseville, through Ausable Forks, and Keene, and come in on the proposed Valley route near Schroon.

But as there is but little fears entertained about the Keene route, it is left for the people to decide which of the other two routes will be chosen.

I wish now to lay open a few things to be thought of.

First.—What do the lake people want of a railroad? It will not only be a great damage to their docks, but a great nuisance to them. The transportation on the lake will always underbid the railroad, as all water-craft can afford to carry freight cheaper than railroads, and consequently they will have all the freight. Most of the valuable ore beds, and forges, also Saw-mills, lay back in the middle and western part of the county, and the railroad will be of no benefit to them whatever; for if they have to carry their freight far as ever, they will take the cheapest conveyance for transporting it. But if the road lay more in the centre of the county, and nigher to them, they would patronize it in preference to carrying their freight further.

But it is a very important item that the road should pass through where there is the most of such kind of business carried on. On the lake shore are a few beds of ore, and but very little lumbering going on, but they will transport it on the lake for the same reason that the western people will,—because it is cheaper, and consequently be of no benefit to the road. On the other route lays the riches of Essex County, and nigher by nine miles for the people of the western part of the county.

The following statement of the business of this section of the country, and on the proposed Valley route, I got from a reliable source;—

In Lewis, the gang, and other Saw-mills of Messrs. Noble, and 8 more mills, make a quantity of lumber estimated at about 680,000 pieces, annually. Also forges of Messrs. Wilder, and Merriam, make about 1000 tons of iron, annually. In this town are 16 sawmills, making about 230,000 pieces annually, and 5 forges, making 2700 tons of iron, annually. In North Hudson are sawmills that make about 230,000 pieces of lumber, annually, also 2 forges, making about 1000 tons of iron, annually.—Schroon is equally as promising as the last named town, and here comes in the Iron and steel of the Adirondac Iron works.—At Pottersville, Horicon, Minerva, and Schroon are extensive Tanneries, which send out a vast quantity of leather. In fact, the whole length of that proposed route is lined with Iron works, Sawmills, and Manufactories, and where there are not sawmills there are splendid mill seats and plenty of timber standing and as soon as the railroad goes through, the unsettled portion of that country would soon be peopled, and Business would present quite a different aspect than it does now, and Essex county, and counties south would experience quite a reformation.

Ore beds are very plenty and extensive on this route. In this town are several beds, most within a stones throw of the proposed railroad, and none more than a mile and a half distant from the road, and all known to be excellent ore. One of those beds, called the Haasz bed, lies immediately on the proposed road, and covers acres of land, and its depth is unknown. This is said to be too rich to work alone, while the other beds near by, when mixed with this bed, makes it equal to any in the county.—This is but a small estimation of the wealth of the County.

Secondly.—The road is shorter by the valley route. The proposed route from Albany, via Saratoga, Whitehall, and the lake shore to Keeseville is about 175 miles, while the Valley route through this place and Schroon is only 160 miles, making a difference of about 15 miles,—a very important item to be taken into consideration with the other matters to be thought of.

Thirdly.—Any one who has ever seen the mountains from the lake, along between Westport and Whitehall can have some idea of the feasibility of the Lake route.—Nothing but a bold range of mountains, whose tops tower towards the skies, and who are as it were insurmountable, lay snug to the shore of the Lake. Who could have any idea of having a railroad in such a place as that? A man would be considered insane who has even seen those mountains and could say that it is an easy and feasible route. It is true that a machine has been invented for tunnelling mountains, but what is the object of so doing as long as as feasible a route as ever was surveyed lays only 10 miles west of it.

The most prominent thing in the way on the Valley is Split Rock hill. But that is mostly composed of sand which can easily be removed, which is small compared to the cutting through ledges, filling up hollows, and tunnelling of mountains that are often done on other lines of railroad in the country. No other difficulty is in the way. The grades are small. It seems as though the Boquet, Schroon, and Hudson river valleys were made for a railroad, and if justice was done to Essex county it would pass through there.

Friends of a railroad, I... Don't be led away by thes... railroad companies, who c... all for the interest of the c... the railroad in the place where it should be, and then you will never see the time when you will be sorry that you exerted your influence, for what was for your own advantage and the advantage of the country at large.

You may think me selfish, Mr. Editor, in desiring the railroad through the Valley route, but I will say that I do not look so much to self as to the interest of the county. It cannot make much difference with this place, whether it goes the lake route or not, as it will go as nigh this village as it will Westport. But the interest of the county is at stake!

The time has at length come when a railroad will soon be put through this county. It is much needed. Winter fastens us in here, and it is almost impossible to get out. The mails run very irregular, and everything is out of order. The citizens anxiously await warm weather, for it is the only stirring time with them. A railroad is much needed. It will of course be of benefit to the county, where ever it goes, to choose the most direct, cheapest, nearest, and feasible route. It seems as though that the business men of Essex Co. would put it in the right place,—where it would be the most advantageous to the county. A more direct way to go from Montreal to New York than the Vermont railroads is very desirable, and it soon will be. Soon the iron steed will be rushing through our villages, and its shrill whistle will startle the deer from the forest, and this now almost desolate region of Eastern New York will change its business aspect much to its credit. May it long wave!

ELIZABETHTOWN.

☞ In this paper, on the Saturday proceeding the late election, were certain strictures upon an infamous sheet of lies and deception, headed "To the Electors of this Congressional District," and circulated at the village of Moores at a public whig meeting held on the Thursday evening previous; which meeting was addressed by Hon. Mr. Simmons. Our information and the circumstances, led us to conclude that Mr. Simmons had some part in getting up and circulating that sheet of misrepresentations and falsehoods. But on inquiry since that time, and by information derived from Mr. S. himself, we are satisfied that he had no agency in getting up and circulating, or even knowledge of the existence of the "infernal machine," in question. We then said that "we tho't better things of Mr. Simmons," and we now say that we are entirely satisfied that he was in no way connected with the foul transaction.

But while we cheerfully exculpate Mr. Simmons from any participation in that affair, and endeavor to place his conduct properly before our readers, we hold the lash in reserve for the real authors of the rascally production, when discovered.—[Plattsburgh Republican.

That is well, but it would have been better had Col. Stone scouted the idea that Mr. Simmons was or could be guilty of circulating anything dishonorable. However, Col. Stone is not often guilty of wrong, or of an indiscretion, but the conduct of the late campaign fell into bad hands while the Col. "holds the lash" we trust he will not spare those sham and newly imported, and new made democrats with newborn zeal who did so much to debase the elective system. Democracy based upon the lower feelings we dispise, but that which leads to Republicanism we admire. So does the Col. we know. So spare not the lash."

THE ALPS PERPETUATING THE MEMORY OF WASHINGTON.—The Federal Council of Switzerland have presented to the Washington Monument Association, a block of granite cut from the Alps, and bearing the following inscription;

To the Memory
OF
WASHINGTON.
The Free Swiss Confederation.
MDCCCII.

The present is made through the Swiss Counsul in Philadelphia, John Syz.

Mr. Everett, in a note addressed to the President of the Swiss Confederation, officially acknowledges the receipt of the communication from the Swiss council, and remarks;

"The monument to the memory of the illustrious Washington, whose pure example is scarcely less valuable to the whole world than his personal services were to his own country, is not undertaken by the government of the United States, but it is the voluntary tribute of the people. But the undersigned has the satisfaction of being the medium of communication between the Federal Council of Switzerland and the society entrusted with the erection of the monument, to whom a copy of the communication of his excellency M. de Furrer, President of the Swiss Confederation, together with a copy of the letter of the Consul at Philadelphia, will be immediately transmitted."

☞ The Loco Fooos are braggarts! We beg pardon for speaking so harshly, but it is true, nevertheless. Here they are crowing over the election of Pierce, making merry at the defeat of Gen. Scott, and spoiling their sweet voices in singing requiems over the "defunct Whig party," just as if they had had no recent evidences of its persistant vitality and prevailing power. Why, every election held since the 2d of November has resulted in a Whig triumph! Did we not sweep the City of Hartford a few days ago? Have we not just elected a Whig Member of Congress at a special canvass in the Louisville District? And don't Old Massachusetts stand erect? Then, go to, thou braggarts? If these civil contests continue as they have begun, where will your party be in a twelve month? However, if it is your pleasure to brag—brag! But don't speak of us as a "defunct" party when you are receiving such evidences of our vitality.—Albany Journal.

Essex County—The Official Canvass.

This we give to our readers this week, and also so much of the vote of Clinton and Franklin as will give our readers some idea of the character of the district.—These facts will be convenient for future reference, and should be filed. The vote in Essex county will be examined with a great deal of satisfaction. Some towns and individuals out did themselves, and they will be remembered by the whigs of the county. We shall be indulged in naming one whose labors were devoted to the whole county, and who more than any other one perhaps contributed most to this glorious result, and the mention of whose name is but the expression of the sense of the party. We allude to Col. E. F. Williams of Elizabethtown. To mention others would be to name nearly every town, and whig in the county. The records speak for them.

Cuban Correspondence.

The correspondence of this Government with that of Spain in regard to the condition of this Island have been published by direction of Congress. It embraces a period of about twenty five years, and is highly interesting. It has also added to the excitement in relation to the movements of the Fillibusters. That portion of the correspondence carried on by whigs reflects great credit upon whig character, and presents them as statesmen of integrity and Republicanism. The demagogue appears with Buchanan, and hence the complaints of the democracy at the publication. The disclosure of the $100,000,000, offered by the Polk administration for the purchase of Cuba is a startling fact, which they were not prepared to meet. Protection is out of the question, but labor can be taxed to pay for territory we do not want, and we suppose with the approbation of labor so long as it is done in the name of democracy.

News Items.

LINES TO MY BOOT.

Suggested by "Stanzas to my Lute," in one of the Annuals.

Boot! thou art silent now!
Thy nails which on the pavement rang
In thy young days with echoing clang,
No longer make a row;
Thy beauties sunk unto decay,
Thy nails and heels bove worn away.
Boot, thou art silent now!

Boot, thou hast lost thy sole!
Thy trusty welts no longer meet;
I feel the wet against my feet—
Sad witness of a hole:
No more thou'l press the rushes plat,
Or sweep the cords which form the mat.
Boot! thou hast lost thy sole!

DIED.—At Saratoga Springs, on Saturday, the 13th inst., Mrs. Sarah Willard Fowler, Daughter of Judge John Willard, of Saratoga, and wife of Mr. Henry Fowler, one of the Editors of this paper.

Thus has the greatest of earthly sorrows fallen upon our absent associate and friend. In his deep grief we would fain offer our condolence and sympathy—but we know how much better is the precious memory of the "loved and lost," and of those great lessons of faith and patience which, as we learn, the closing scenes of her life so well illustrated and enforced. The most sacred of earthly ties was formed but to be sundered by the Angel of Death, and the brightest hopes of youth and love bloomed but to fade in the darkness of the grave. Words either of condolence or eulogy, however well ordered seem almost an intrusion upon the sanctuaries of such sorrow. In the solemnity of silent sympathy with the bereaved would we bow before the throne of the all-wise and beneficent Disposer of events.—Chicago Tribune.

Will supply DEALERS in Keeseville, and towns adjoining at the manufacturers lowest prices, at wholesale in any quantity. Devines Compound Pitch Lozenge.

Read This.

Here is the Effect of less than One Dozen Boxes. Certificate of a Gentleman well known.

I do feel greatful for what "Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge" has done for me, and heartily wish all that are afflicted knew, as I do, its worth.

Almost every man in Whitehall knows that I have been so afflicted that for almost a year I could not speak aloud; with a distressing cough, pain in the side, loins and shoulders; and the opinion of the physicians was that for me there was a stop only to the grave.

I commenced the use of the Lozenge in September last, soon after Mr. Renne introduced the article at our place, and I have gained my voice! and am congratulated daily by the business men on my returning health, which I attribute, under a good Providence, to the above Pitch Lozenge. THE NORTHERN

INSURANCE COMPANY,

Plattsburgh, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Capital, 100,000.

THIS Company is organized under the General Insurance Law of the State of New York, with a sound, reliable capital, and offers the following superior inducements:

1. The safer kinds of property are separated entirely from the more hazardous; affording the advantages of two distinct companies, with the expense of but one.

2. The first class, or Farmer's Department, consists of Farm-houses, Farm buildings and their contents and detatched dwellings and their contents in villages, when unexposed by more hazardous buildings.

3. The second class or Merchant's Department, consists of exposing dwellings, stores, merchandize and property not deemed specially hazardous.

4. Each class pays its own losses and thus securing equal justice and proportional rates to both.

5. Not more than $3,000 of the first class, or more than $2,000 of the second class, will be taken in one risk, nor any number of risks so contiguous as probably to subject the Company to a loss of over $3,000 at any one fire; thereby saving it from heavy and ruinous losses.

6. In taking surveys of property, the agent will be the agent of the company, and the company be responsible for the correctness of all surveys made by its agents.

7. Any one insured, may at any time surrender his policy and withdraw from the company by paying his proportion of the losses and expense up to the date of such surrender.

8. Applications will take effect at noon of the day on which they are made (unless a different day is directed by the applicant,) thus relieving the party from anxiety and suspense.

9. The company no have two-thirds clause, but will pay all loss and damage not exceeding the amount insured.

10. In case of difference of opinion in settlement of losses, the company will submit the same to arbitration in the county where the loss occurs, the claimant choosing one, the company one, and the two arbitrators another.

11. Each person insured in the company becomes a member and will be entitled to a participation of the profits, if any surplus should accrue, not required for the payment of losses.

12. This company will be responsible for losses by fire caused by lightning.

13. This company will take no risks in cities.

☞ The Directors return their acknowledgments to the public for their readiness in aiding the organization of this company, and will endeavor to make it a safe and reliable institution, affording protection from the ravages of fire, at reasonable rates, and with certainty of payment in case of loss.

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks,

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visit d half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND 'TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend, will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for,

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Gedde's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour.

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batchelder's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—Lawrence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

AGRICULTURAL & HORTICULTURAL TOOLS AND IMPLEMENTS,

a great variety and extensive assortment, such as Hoes, Shovels, Spades Rakes, Manure and Hay Forks, Scythes Snaths, Cattle Ties, Draft Halter and Trace Chains, Garden Syringes, Pruning Saws, Pruning and Budding Knives, Garden Shears and Twig Cutters, Grindstones, Patent Grindstone fixtures, rollers, barn door rolls, &c., &c.

Grain, Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.—We are prepared to furnish Herds Grass, Red Top, Lucerne, White Dutch, Southern, Western and Northern Clover Seed. Beet, Turnip, Onion and Carrot Seed, at Wholesale and Retail at the lowest market prices.

We have by far the largest and most complete assortment of Agricultural Implements Machines. Field and Garden Seeds to be found in the State, which we offer at our new and spacious Ware-Rooms to Farmers and Dealers on terms the most liberal. We are also Commission Merchants and Wholesale and Retail Dealers in heavy and shelf

HARDWARE,

Saddlery, Axles, Springs, Mechanic's Tools, House Trimmings and Furnishing Goods, Cutlery, Cross Cut, Mill and Circular Saws, Paints, Oils, Bird Cages, etc., etc., etc.

As agents of Messrs. D. Prouty & Co., Boston, Wheeler, Millick & Co., Albany, J. T. Grant & Co., Troy, and others we can fill orders for Plows, House Powers, Threshers Fan Mills, Straw Cutters, &c., at manufacturers prices. A liberal discount made to Dealers,

MARRIAGE

HAPPINESS AND COMPETENCE.

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life at an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefitted by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the full consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

MELANCHOLY AND STARTLING

To behold the sickness and suffering endured by many a wife for many years, from causes simple and controllable, easily remedied—or better still,—not incurred, if every

WIFE AND MOTHER

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (with in the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By becoming in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, 50 cts [ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.]

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE, WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriages, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is so conducive to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

Miscellany.

Looking for Employ.

Mrs. Edgar was the widow of a captain from the East, who as is to often the case with those who follow the sea for a livelihood, and spent his money as fast as he earned it, and, when he died, left his widow destitute, with one child, George, to provide for.

George was quite young, too young to be of any service to her; but his devoted affection and obedience amply repaid her for all the cares and toils she had to encounter while struggling to maintain them both by her needle. At a very early age he was taught to love and fear God, and the sincerity and fervency with which he joined in the humble devotions in which she daily engaged, was a source of pleasure to the widow's heart, which worlds of mere earthly gratification could not have tempted her to part with; and she felt often constrained to thank God that she was not wealthy, lest the influence of the world, and its deceitful pleasures that kill the soul, should be brought to bear upon his young mind, and lead him astray from the path of virtue and morality.

The story of her destitution is, unfortunately, too common to render it necessary for me to repeat it here. Sickness had overtaken her; and, having no longer the health to use her needle, poverty and deep distress came on her. One by one, every article required for comfort, as well as necessity, was parted with, until, at last, when her sufferings were ended here, and she was called to enjoy the happiness which her faith had taught her expect hereafter, she had nothing left which she could call her own, except a ring containing some of her mothers hair, which her uncle had given her, and which no necessity could induce her to part with. The ring her son secured after his mother had left him forever; and this with a lock of her own hair, was all he had left of her who loved him with all the fervor of a pious mother's love.

George Edgar felt that he was now, indeed, alone in the world; but he would not despair, for his trust was in God; and after he had seen the remains of his mother removed to their last resting place, he returned to the lonely chamber she had occupied, and there, in deep humility, implored Divine guidance and protection.

He was sadly off, indeed, for clothing, as we have already seen; but he had the good sense to know that he could procure neither clothing nor employment by sitting still and grieving. Commending himself, therefore, to the protection of God, he started off determined to leave no effort untried that could procure him employment of some kind, by which he might earn a subsistence, be it ever so scanty.

He strayed down towards the docks on the East river, and went on board several vessels, offering himself as a boy to go before the mast. His appearance, however, was much against him, for all classes are but too apt to form opinions from outward appearances, and the best of men are sometimes prejudiced against the worth and deserving, solely from their outward indications of poverty and distress.

George had almost begun to despair, as he was weak, cold, and hungry; but, trusting still in Divine mercy, he persevered. Toward the close of the day, after he had wandered about without tasting a morsel of food, and almost perishing with cold, he went on board a brig, which, from appearances was just ready to sail on her voyage, and, on reaching the deck, he approached a large portly man, whom he took to be the captain.

Do you want a boy, sir?' he asked mildly endeavoring to restrain the tears which his bodily sufferings and the fear of another disappointment had forced into his eyes.

The captain, for such he was, eyed him for one moment, and said, 'What can you do on board ship?'

'I can learn to do anything, sir,' replied George.

'What is your name?'

'George Edgar, sir.'

'Where are your parents, and where do they live? Do they know you want to go to sea?'

'My father died many years ago, sir, and my poor mother died last ni ht.'

'Poor fellow!' said Captain Hart.—'What was your father?'

'He was a sea captain, sir,' replied George, somewhat proudly.

'Then you have no friends here at all?' inquired Captain Hart.

'None but God, sir, was the meek reply.

'You are the boy I want, George,' said the worthy captain, in benevolent tones.—'You are just the boy for me; and if you trust in God he will soon make friends for you. But you seem frozen half to death. are you not very cold?

'Very, sir, and very hungry, for I have not tasted a mouthful of food to day.'

Here, doctor! doctor!'* the captain exclaimed, as a stout negro came out of the galley and ran aft; 'here, take this youngster and give him something to eat—plenty of it—and then go in the cabin and get him some of the clothes that young vagabond left the other day when he ran away. George, you go with the doctor, and when you have warmed yourself you may come down in the cabin, and I will see what i can do for you. Poor fellow! half frozen and half starved! How much we have to be thankful for!'

George could not say anything, for his heart was full; but the tears of gratitude coursed down his wan cheek, as he silently followed the cook into the galley. The good hearted negro sat before him a kid† such as had not passed his lips for many a day, and he watched the poor lad with eager interest, as he silently and thankfully devoured the meal.

'I tell you what, youngster, you may thank God you came across Captain Hart. There an't many such men as he on blue water.'

'I do thank God with all my heart for this, and for all his other mercies,' replied George.

'That's a fine fellow. I am only a poor nigger, but I have sailed with Captain Hart these seven years, and I would not leave him for all the brig could carry. He is the best man and the kindest captain I ever sailed with; he'll make a man of you, I promise you. I used to curse and swear, and drink like a brute; but Captain Hart, God bless him, has showed me better things than that, although I am only a poor negro cook, and I guess he hain't got many men who would go farther for him than the old doctor. But come, eat away, and I will go down and get you some clothes. We had a young scamp aboard last voyage, but he did not like to have Capt. Hart talk to him about God, so he ran away and left his clothes. They will just about fit you.'

When George had finished his meal, which he devoured with a grateful heart, the cook dressed him out in a suit of warm and comfortable clothing; and so great was the alteration in his appearance, he would hardly have been recognized as the same boy. His countenance was remarkably intelligent, and, beaming as it now was, with gratitude and happiness, he appeared to great advantage.

On descending the cabin hatchway, he found Captain Hart looking over some charts; but, when he perceived George, he came up to him and turning him around two or three times, and gazing earnestly on his beaming countenance, he exclaimed, 'You are cut out for a sailor, and I hope you won't be spoiled in the making, and disappoint me.'

'I will try with my whole heart to please you, sir,' said George.

'I don't doubt it. You don't look like a bad boy, and if you do please me, you may find many a harder man to serve than ould Jack Hart. But I must tell you first off—I never permit any man on board my ship to swear, and I allow no drinking among my crew.'

'I never swore an oath in my life, sir, and please God I never mean to. I have been brought up to know that God 'will not hold him guiltless who taketh his name in vain,' and had I ever so great an inclination to drink, the remembrance that you forbid it would stop me.'

'Well, that's spoken like a man. You have been well brought up, whoever your parents were; and if you go through life with such principles, you need never fear but you will anchor safe at last. I will take you this trip on trial, and if you suit me, you need not look for another berth unless you choose, for I never want any man to sail with me who does not like to.—My wife and girl are coming down to morrow to see the brig before I sail, so you can help the doctor put the cabin in order.'

'God bless you, sir,' said the grateful boy, grasping the hard hand of the worthy captain.' I hope I shall please you, for I want to do so, and I am sure I shall try.'

'Well, well, go along now, and tell the doctor to come aft and get things in order.'

George had seen the old cook come when the captain called for the doctor, and was about ascending the hatchway, when Capt. Hart called him back, and asked if there was anything he wanted.

'You have left me nothing to wish for; but, if you please, I wish you would do something for me. This,' he added, pulling the ring and lock of his mother's hair from his breast, (for he had hung it round his neck by a string)—'this is my poor mother's; will you please to keep it safe for me; and if you please, sir, to lend me a Bible, so that I can read when I have time?'

'Yes. that I will, George,' said Captain Hart, taking the ring; 'and I will tell one of the girls to get a small Bible for you.—I wish there were more boys to ask for that book.'

George then went on deck and going to the galley, related to the cook what had occurred in the cabin; and the good hearted old negro received the news with real pleasure; for little as he had seen of George, he had become quite attached to him by his deportment and manners. He promised to make a sailor of him, and while they were at work in the cabin, gave him a great deal of advice in his own homely way; but it was all good, and George listened respectfully, for he felt his need of a friend, though that friend should be a negro cook. The day was past by George in such work as was pointed out to him by the negro cook, and at night he retired to rest in the forecastle, not, however, until he had poured out his soul in grateful praise and thanks to the Great Disposer of events whose goodness had provided for him so kind a friend and protector in his hour of direst need.

GENUINE VIRGINIANISM.—It is not known to the majority of our readers [we doubt, indeed, whether it is to a dozen of them] that Virginia barrel timber and hoop poles are shipped to Boston—made into flour barrels—and then sent back here and sold to our millers. Such is nevertheless, the fact, and we blush to say that it is so.—[Virginia paper.

Lieut. Davenport is to resume the com-

Synopsis of the President's Message.

The death of Mr. Webster is briefly alluded to.

THE FISHERIES—There is a difference between the two Governments as to the meaning of the Convention of 1818. By our present policy colonial fishers acquired a monopoly of the export trade, and is entering to some extent into the home consumption. Further arrangements are recommended, to place the fisheries on a more liberal footing of reciprocal privilege. But the subject of reciprocity in our other commercial intercourses, should be made a separate matter.

CUBA—Our Minister at Madrid has instructions which will probably lead to the removal of existing inconvenience and ill-feeling. The United States have refused to enter into an agreement with England and France to disclaim all intention of obtaining possession of Cuba; but the President has assured those powers that we entertain no designs against Cuba, and that he would regard its incorporation into the Union as fraught with serious peril.

THE ISTHMUS OF TEHUANTEPEC—Proposals for protection of the right way, are rejected by the Mexican Congress. It is hoped the obstacle may be overcome.

Nicaragua Canal—Costa Rica and the Mosquito Indians agree to the settlement proposed by the United States, but Nicaragua is unwilling. Further negotiations are in train.

Venzuela has acknowledged some long disputed claims of American citizens.

Buenos Ayres and Uruguay.—Negotiations are progressing, which, it is hoped will open the commerce of those countries to the United States.

The Lobos Islands.—The sovereignty of Peru is universally acknowledged. That Government will freight the vessels that have already gone there, and save the owners from loss.

The Japan expedition is for the purpose of obtaining some relaxation of the inhospitable and anti-social system the Japanese have pursued for about two centuries; and especially to remonstrate against cruel treatment to our shipwrecked mariners. The King of the Netherlands has materially aided the United States in this enterprise.

The Departments.—The State Deparment is overburdened. Part of its business should be transferred to the Home Department. The War, State and Navy Buildings are old and unsuitable. New ones should be built.

Treasury—July 1, 1852:

Receipts	$49,738,376 89
Expenditures	46,007,886 20
Public Debt paid	9,455,715 83
Balance in Treasury	14,632,136 37

Since July about $2,500,000 more of the principal of the public debt has been paid.

Imports during the past year:

Goods	$207,240,101
Specie	5,262,643

Exports during the same period:

Goods	$167,065,937
Specie	42,507,275

The Tariff—Specific and protective duties are recommended in an argument of some length.

The Indians—Our relations with the tribes in California and Oregon, are in a very unsatisfactory condition. Territory should be set apart for them and treaties concluded with them. Texas excites their hostility by selling all her land, reserving none for their occupation. With other tribes our relations are friendly. The Semiuoles have promised to emigrate west of the Mississippi, and Sioux are quietly settled on the tract assigned them.

Patents.—A periodical digest is recommended to be published.

An Asylum for the insane of the Army and Navy of the United States is in process of erection.

The survey of the Mexican Boundary has been stopped, on account of a defect in the appropriation to pay for it.

District of Columbia.—Washington needs water, grading, paving and embellishing.

The River and Harbor improvements are being carried out as effectively and economically as the appropriations will permit.

The Navy has been unusually busy. Explorations have been or are to be made in the China Seas, the Northern Pacific, the River La Plata, the Amazon, and on the coast of Africa. A permanent corps of seamen, a corps of apprentices, and the reorganization of the Naval Academy commended.

Postage.—The receipts have dim[illegible] present cheap rates, it is thought, will be best in the end.

Several recommendations of former messages are then recapitulated.

Bribery.—It is recommended that provision be made by law for the punishment of all government officers who shall accept bribes, and all persons who give, promise or offer them.

Intervention in the affairs of foreign nations is strongly condemned. Sympathy with freedom, but neutrality, has been and should always be our policy.

The message closes—messages usually do—by proving that this is a great country, as it undoubtedly is.

Finally the President says:

Called by an unexampled dispensation to its highest trust at a season of embarrassment and alarm, I entered upon its arduous duties with extreme diffidence. * * And it is with devout gratitude, in retiring from office, that I leave the country in a state of peace and prosperity.

President's Message—Extracts.

THE TARIFF.

In my first annual message to Congress I called your attention to what seemed to me some defects in the present tariff, and recommended such modifications as in my judgment were best adapted to remedy its evils and promote the prosperity of the country. Nothing has since occurred to change my views on this important question.

Without respecting the arguments contained in my former message, in favor of discriminating protective duties, I deem it my duty to call your attention to one or two other considerations affecting this subject. The first is, the effect of large importations of foreign goods upon our currency Most of the gold of California, as fast as it is coined, finds its way to Europe in payment of goods purchased. In the second place as our manufacturing establishments are broken down by competition with foreigners, the capital invested in them is lost thousands of honest and industrious citizens are thrown out of employment, and the farmer to that extent is deprived of a home market for the sale of his surplus produce.

In the third place, the destruction of our manufacturers leaves the foreigner without competition in our market, and he consequently raises the price of the article sent here for sale, as is now seen in the increased cost of iron imported from England.—The prosperity and wealth of every nation must depend upon the productive indstry. The farmer is stimulated to exertion by finding a ready market for his surplus products, and benefitted by being able to exchange them without loss of time or expense of transportation, for the manufactures which his comfort or convenience requires.

This is done to the best advantage where a portion of the community in which he lives is engaged in other pursuits. But most manufacturers require an amount of capital and a practical skill which cannot be commanded, unless they be protected for a time from ruinous competition from abroad. Hence the necessity of laying those duties upon imported goods which the Constitution authorizes for revenue, in such a manner as to protect and encourage the labor of our own citizens. Duties however should not be fixed at a rate so high as to exclude the foreign article, but should be so graduated as to enable the domestic manufacturer fairly to compete with the foreigner in our own markets, and by this competition to reduce the price of the manufactured article to the consumer to the lowest rate at which it can be produced.

This policy would place the mechanic by the side of the farmer, create a mutual interchange of their respective commodities and thus stimulate the industry of the whole country, and render us independent of foreign nations for the supplies required by the habits or necessities of the people.

Another question, wholly independent of protection, presents itself, and that is, whether the duties levied, should be upon the value of the article at the place of shipment, or where it is practicable, a specific duty, graduated according to quantity, as ascertained by weight or measure. All our duties are at present ad valorem. A certain percentage is levied on the price of the goods at the port of shipment in a foreign country.

Most commercial nations have found it indespensible, for the purpose of preventing fraud and perjury, to make the duties specific whenever the article is of such a uniform value in weight or measure as to justify such a duty. Legislation should never encourage dishonesty or crime. It is impossible that the revenue officers at the port where the goods are entered and the duties paid, should know with certainty what they cost in the foreign country. Yet the law requires that they should levy the duty according to such cost. They are therefore compelled to resort to very unsatisfactory evidence to ascertain what that cost was.

They take the invoice of the importer, attested by his oath, as the best evidence of which the nature of the case admits.—But every one must see that the invoice may be fabricated, and the oath by which it is supported false, by reason of which the dishonest importer pays a part only or of the duties which are paid by the honest one, and thus indirectly receives from the treasury of the United States a reward for his fraud and perjury. The reports of the Secretary of the Treasury heretofore made on this subject, show conclusively that these frauds have been practiced to a great ex[illegible]oy is to destroy that high [illegible]r for which our merchants [illegible]n distinguished; to defraud the Government of its revenue; to break down honest competition; and finally to transfer the business of importation to foreign and irresponsible agents to the great detriment of our citizens. I therefore again most earnestly recommend the adoption of specific duties, wherever it is practicable, or a home valuation, to prevent these frauds.

I would also again call your attention to the fact that the present tariff in some cases imposes a higher duty upon the raw material than upon the article manufactured from it, the consequence of which is that the duty operates to the encouragement of the foreigner and the discouragement of our own citizens.

Foreign Policy.

It has been the uniform policy of this Government from its foundation to the present day to abstain from all interference in the domestic affairs of other nations. The consequence has been that while the nations of Europe have been engaged in desolating wars, our country has pursued its peaceful course to unexampled prosperity and happiness.

The wars in which we have been compelled to engage, in defence of the rights and honor of the country, have been fortunately of short duration. During the terrific contest of nation against nation, which succeeded the French Revolution, we were enabled, by the firmness and foresight of President Washington, to maintain our neutrality. While other nations were drawn into this wide sweeping whirlpool, we sat quiet and unmoved upon our own shores.

While the flower of their numerous armies was wasted by disease or perished by hundreds of thousands upon the battle field the youth of this favored land were permitted to enjoy the blessings of peace beneath the paternal roof. While the states of Europe incurred enormous debts, under the burden of which their subjects still groan, and which must absorb no small part of the product of the honest industry of those countries for generations to come, the United States have once been enabled to exhibit the proud spectacle of a nation free from public debt; and if permitted to pursue our prosperous way for a few years longer in peace, we may do this same again.

But it is now said by some that this policy must be changed. Europe is no longer separated from us by a voyage of months, but steam navigation has brought her within a few days' sail of our shores. We see more of her movements, and take a deeper interest in her controversies.

Although no one proposes that we should join the fraternity of potentates who have for ages lavished the blood and treasure of their subjects in maintaining "the balance of power," yet it is said that we ought to interfere between contending sovereigns and their subjects, for the purpose of overthrowing the monarchies of Europe and establishing in their place republican institutions.

It is alledged that we have heretofore pursued a different course from a sense of our weakness, but now our conscious strength dictates a change of policy, and that it is consequently our duty to mingle in these contests and aid those who are struggling for liberty.

This is a most seductive but dangerous appeal to the generous sympathies of freemen. Enjoying as we do the blessings of a free government, there is no man who has an American heart that would not rejoice to see these blessings extended to all other nations. We cannot witness the struggle between the oppressed and his oppressor anywhere without the deepest sympathy for the former, and the most anxious desire for his triumph.

Nevertheless, is it prudent or is it wise to involve ourselves in these foreign wars? Is it indeed true that we have heretofore refrained from doing so, merely from the degrading motive of a conscious weakness? For the honor of the patriots who have gone before us, I cannot admit it. Men of the Revolution who drew the sword against the oppressions of the mother country, and pledged to Heaven "their lives their fortunes, and their sacred honor" to maintain their freedom, could never have been actuated by so unworth a motive.

They knew no weakness or fear where right or duty pointed the way, and it is a lible upon their fair fame, for us, while we enjoy the blessings for which they so nobly fought and bled, to insinuate it. The truth is that the course which they pursued was dictated by a stern sense of international justice, by a statesmanlike prudence, and a far-seeing wisdom, looking not merely to the present necessities but to the permanent safety and interest of the country.

They knew that the world is governed less by sympathy than by reason and force; that it was not possible for this nation to become a "propagandist" of free principles without arraying against it the combined powers of Europe; and that the result was more likely to be the overthrow of republican liberty here than its establishment there. History has been written in vain for those who can doubt this.

France had no sooner established a republican form of government, than she manifested a desire to force its blessings on all the world. Her own historian informs us that, hearing of some petty acts of tyranny in a neighboring principality, "The National Convention declared that she would afford succor and fraternity to all nations who wish to recover their liberty, and she gave it in charge to the executive power to give orders to the generals of the French Armies to aid all citizens who might have been or should be oppressed in the cause of liberty."

Here was the false step which led to her subsequent misfortunes. She soon found herself involved in war with all the rest of Europe. In less than ten years her government was changed from a republic to an empire; and finally, after shedding rivers of blood, foreign powers restored her exiled dynasty, and exhausted Europe sought peace and repose in the unquestioned ascendency of monarchical principles. Let us learn wisdom from her example.

Let us remember that revolutions do not always establish freedom. Our own free institutions were not the offspring of our Revolution. They existed before.—They were planted in the free characters of self government under which the English colonies grew up, and our Revolution only freed us from the dominion of a foreign power, whose government was at variance with those institutions.

But European nations have had no such training for self government, and every effort to establish it by bloody revolutions has been, and must, without that preparation, continue to be a failure. Liberty unregulated by law, degenerates into anarchy, which soon becomes the most horrid of all despotisms.

Our policy is wisely to govern ourselves and thereby to set such an example of national justice, prosperity of true glory, as shall teach to all nations the blessings of self government, and the unparalleled enterprise and success of a free people.

WHAT BOWLEGS THINKS OF NEW YORK.—A writer in The N. O. Delta thus gives us Billy Bowlegs, the Seminole Indian's impressions of Washington and New York, as derived from his late Northern visit.—Barring its profanity it is rather rich:

I was in Tampa Bay when Billy arrived from his Northern tour, and, being desirous of knowing how he was pleased, I invited him to call on me the next morning. At the appointed time Billy arrived at my office, and after giving him something to drink—which if you should happen to omit, you would be very sure to incur the displeasure of Billy—I asked him to describe his trip to me; and he commenced: 'Well' said Billy, 'in our trip from Fort Meyres to Savanah, I saw nothing but what I had been accustomed to see every day, and I began to doubt if all the tales I had heard about the great cities were true; but when I got to Savanah I thought to myself that the white people were not such great liars after all; and when I got to Charleston and the other cities, as I proceeded, I found out I had not been told half.

'I like the steamboats,' said Billy, 'when they go on smooth water; but when they go on the big water, they make me feel bad. And the railroads, how fast they go—you can hardly see the trees; but I think I had a poney before the war that could run with them. Oh, yes! the railroads run fast; but I think my poney could beat them. When I got to Washington, I saw the Great Father, I had always understood he was an old man, and I was surprised to see him ook so young. The Great Father had white hair, but his cheeks were round like mine; I think he is about the same age as myself. I told the Great Father that I came there for justice, and I didn't want him to think I came there to beg. I told him he was a great man, and I was a great warrior. Oh, yes! I saw the Great Father in the White House. I told him no one could scare me from Florida: if I wanted to go, I would; if I did not, I would not.

'I saw plenty of squaws. They all looked very pretty, but they all looked alike. I went to New York. My God! what a big place! So many people and wagons!'

'Any children, Billy?' asked I.

'My God! don't talk—there is nothing but children. I like Washington better than New York, for in Washington you have plenty of room to walk: in New York the road is full of people just like grass. The Great Father and everybody else gave me presents, but I could not bring half.'

After he had finished about the journey, he said; 'I told the Great Father I would see my people, and try and leave next spring. I told him I wanted to stay in Florida this winter,'

He dislikes to have any one question him, about the number of warriors in his tribe. Some one asked; 'Billy, how many have you in your tribe?' He immediately answered. 'Myself, five more, and old Abraham., (the negro interpreter)—meaning the delegation.

When it was time for him to leave, he shook hands, and said., 'You must give me another drink. As Billy never lets an occasion to imbibe pass, we were obliged to 'pour out.' After visiting some more of his friends, Billy became so unmanageable that General Blake thought it best to send him down to Fort Meyers, Just as he was embarking, a crowd gathered around to see him. Some one said, 'The cowboys will be after you, Billy, if you don't move soon.' 'D—n the cow boys!' said Billy; one of my men can whip a dozen of them!'

Billy is very abusive when intoxicated, and cursed every one who happened to come in his way. He was sitting down when the boat left, and some one asked him to give the war whoop. He jumped up and gave some of the loudest yells I have ever heard from an Indian. Billy Bowlegs is about five feet eight inches in height, rather stout, has a round face, and an expression one never forgets. He is said to be possessed of more cunning than any other Seminole Chief that ever lived. General Twiggs tried several times to entrap him, but always failed. It is my opinion he will never leave Florida until driven out by an army. I am certain he will not go next spring.

KEESEVILLE.

Saturday Morning Dec. 18.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands,
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

RAIL ROAD MEETING.

The friends of a Rail Road on the west side of Lake Champlain convened at Keeseville on the 15th, pursuant to the request heretofore published.

HON. WINSLOW C. WATSON of Port Kent was called to the chair, and J. M. Davison of Saratoga, and C. R. Richards of Troy were appointed secretaries. A committee of fourteen consisting of Hon. George W. Goff of Port Henry, John Maulson and W. F. Coffin of Montreal, Geo. Leslie of Troy, C. R. Richards of the R. and S. R. R. Co., G L. Schuyler of the S. and W. R. R. Co., O. F. Blount of Whitehall, R. A. Loveland of Westport, C. F. Taber and O. Keese of Keeseville, M. K. Platt of Plattsburgh, Samuel Corning of Fort Ann, Peter Comstock of Port Kent, and Nathan Lapham of Peru, was appointed to draft and report articles of Association for the organization of the "Whitehall and Plattsburgh Rail Road" which were drafted and reported accordingly. The following named gentlemen were recommended for directors: L. G. B. Cannon, C. R. Richards and George Leslie, Troy, Governeur Morris, and George L. Schuyler, N. Y. O. F. Blount, Whitehall, John C. Hammond, Crownpoint, George W. Goff, Port Henry, William Molson, and James Ferrier, Montreal, Henry Green and Thomas A. Tomlinson, Keeseville, and Lawrence Myers, Plattsburgh.

There was a much larger attendance than at any former meeting, and characterised by more talent, character, and Capital than perhaps ever assembled for a similar object.

The afternoon, and evening were occupied in the discussion of points of location at Keeseville.

The people of Keeseville were of course tenacious after all the anxiety, and effort they have been subjected to. The Plattsburgh and Montreal interest also desired a specific connexion with their road. After various amendments, and votes it was finally agreed that no definite connexion should now be decided upon either at Whitehall, or Plattsburgh, but that the location should be left to surveys and estimates, and the connexions to negotiations. Subsequently subscriptions were invited, but they proceeded slowly, and the prospect of an organization was apparently afar off.—Those however, who met with a determination to have a road, transferred their deliberations from public discussions to private consultations, and the whole aspect of things changed at once. There was evidence on the part of those who have the ability, of an earnest desire to have the project succeed. On Thursday morning subscriptions proceeded rapidly, and with assurances of further large sums sufficient to complete the organization. There was also a good degree of confidence among those interested. Mr. Schuyler was particularly energetic.

Later and better.—Since writing the foregoing the most satisfactory results have been accomplished. All conflicting interest have been harmonised It is now agreed that if $60,000 can be raised on the line of the road from Plattsburgh to Whitehall the balance shall be raised by the interests North and South. It therefore depends upon the people on the line to say whether we shall have a road. We cannot doubt the result. The next gathering will be to break ground.

Henry Green and Peter Comstock are appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions, and they will call on the people the whole length of the route during the next week. We trust the response will be prompt, and liberal. It is now or never.—No class will be more benefitted than farmers, and merchants as they will be more than repaid in the mere building of the road. They should subscribe liberally.—Let there be no mistake this time. A failure now deferes a road for years.

Masonic.

At the Annual election of officers of Clinton Lodge, No. 155, held at Masonic Hall, in this village, on the 7th inst., the following gentlemen were chosen:

ST. JOHN B. L. SKINNER, Master.
Zephaniah C. Platt, Senior Warden.
Charles S. Mooers, Junior Warden.
Hiram H. Haile, Secretary.
Noyes P. Gregory, Treasurer.
Samuel Carter, Senior Deacon.
William H. Morgan, Junior Deacon.
William P. Platt, } Stewards.
Rollin C. Ladd, }
Michael McDermott, Tyler.

Lodge holds its regular communications on the first Tuesdays in each month.—[Plattsburgh Republican.

EXHIBITION FOR THE Industry of all Nations.

Many of our readers are aware that this Exhibition is announced to open on the 2d day of May next, in the Palace erected for that purpose on Reservoir Square, N. Y. The building is constructed of iron and glass. The ground plan of the building forms an octagon, and is surmounted by a Greek Cross, with a Dome over the intersection. The extreme length and breadth of the building are each 365 feet. Height of Dome to top of Lantern, 148 feet. Galleries, 62,000 square feet. Whole area, 173,000 square feet, or 4 acres.

This is a subject that should receeive the attention, and enlist the active co-operation of every class of our citizens. There are but very few but what should have an active sympathy—a desire that this undertaking of their fellow-citizens, should receive the largest encouragement, for to individual activity and enterprise entirely is this undertaking to be ascribed. The form of our political system and the constitutional restrictions imposed on our State and Federal action, rendered it impossible that the affair should be, as in England, taken and carried on by Government. In order that it may prove creditable to the country and to the parties concerned, it becomes necessary that we should all put our shoulder to the wheel. We all recollect with what pride and gratification we read of the triumphs of our reaping machines, and locks, and safes, and daguerreotypes, and yachts—with what National pride we exulted in the high encomiums recieved from the London press. The disadvantages were all with us in London, the advantages with the English manufacturer and mechanic. They were on their own soil, backed by the over-weening pride of British aristocracy, while our mechanics were mostly alone, with nothing to back them but their own iron will and indomitable perseverance. In N. Y. the case will be reversed, and many articles of great practical utility, that we could not think of sending so far, can be shown with great advantage, and with increased credit to our artists and mechanics.

Looking at this subject in another point of view and we cannot resist the conviction that we are to be greatly benefited by our intercourse with the multitude of people of almost every nation that will assemble during the Exhibition. Our mechanics will have an opportunity of examining the mechanism of foreign machinery, which, perhaps, may be pregnant with valuable practical results; our Artists of viewing and examining celebrated works of Art, in fact every class of our citizens may be greatly benefitted by the inspection of so large a collection of the "Industry of all Nations," as will be gathered together on this occasion, many articles of great value and merit having already been promised from various parts of the Old World.—Here will be gathered the richest products of India, from every part of Europe will be large contributions in the Mechanic Arts,—its finest and most curiously wrought fabrics—all that is singular and novel, combined with utility. Now we can all do something to help on so desirable a project, if we only try. Many things that here are of the most trivial account, were sources of great inquiry and instruction at the great Exhibition in London, in '51. For instance, the maple sugar and the process by which it is produced, and even a quantity of peculiar moss was a source of much attraction. There are but few of us but what like to take a pleasure trip to the great metropolis of wealth and Fashion of the New World, and how much would that pleasure be enhanced by a visit to the most magnificent as well as the most stupendous edifice ever erected in America, filled with the curious and cunningly devised machines of the mechanic, the highly wrought and finished articles of the Artisan—to view some splendid work of Art, that has, perhaps, filled Europe with its author's fame, in fact, to inspect the contributions of every nation from Russia's 'siberian regions' to the balmy air of India. Here will be England's haughty aristocrat, the moustached representive of a defunct Republic, the representives of kings, lords, dukes and emperors. The Chinese with his sallow complexion, the indolent Turk, with the representative of the oriental richness of the East. Who of us but would view these representatives of different nations with peculiar interest? None we imagine. †

☞ REYNOLDS, of the AUSABLE House has just presented us with as fine a lot of trout as ever caused a printers heart to throb with pleasure, or satisfied the craving tooth of the most fastidious epicure.—This is characteristic of the whole hearted benevolence of mine host of the Ausable House. Two hundred and thirty years ago. $29

Mr. WATSON,

Dear Sir;

I give you all the analysis I have now completed. Several others are under way and will soon be ready to send to you.—Soil No. 17, Adirondac has laid in meadow since it was first cleared and has never been manured. 100 parts divided at 212° gave of organic matter 25,12

Silicia,	55,41
Alumina and Iron	17,22
Manganese	1,04
Phosphoric acid	0,32
Sulphuric acid	0,07
Chlorine	0,08
Lime	0,13
Magnesia	0,06
Potassa	0,11
Soda	0,26
	99,82

This soil is quite peculiar. Its analysis indicates at present a high degree of fertility. If cropped for a few years however without manureing, it will begin to show symptoms of exhaustion with out any perceptible cause. That is the crops will gradually grow less and less, while at the same time the land will appear to the eye quite as rich as at present. The bodies which will be first exhausted in the soil are lime, magnesia, pottassa, chlorine and sulphuric acid. As these all occur in the ash of plants and as there is already an abundance of organic matter present.—Common house wood ashes will be the best and most economical manure for this soil for many years to come. Even now its fertility would be considerably increased by the additions of small quantities of this material.

Soil No. 18, Adirondac. I have not analyzed. It seems to the eye to be considerably richer in organic matter.

Soil No. 20, from D. Blish Jay.

The general appearance of this soil is quite different from No. 17. It is much less adhesive and has much less power for absorbing and retaining moisture. The microscope shows it to be quite silacious, and much less rich in organic matter than No. 17, and 18. 100 parts dried at 212° gave of

Organic matter	5,38
Silica	82,34
Alumina and Iron	11,24
Manganese	0,22
Phosphoric acid	0,04
Sulphuric acid	0,02
Chlorine	0,05
Lime	0,24
Magnesia	0,13
Potassa	0,14
Soda	0,16
	99,96

This analysis indicates a soil of about medium productiveness. The sulphuric acid, lime magnesia, potassa, soda, chlorine and phosphoric acid are in such small proportions, that the greater part of them, will be considerably exhausted, in the course of a few years by cropping without the addition of manures. The per centage of organic matter is also too small to indicate a soil of great productiveness or retentive power. The most available and best manures indicated by the above analysis, for the region in which the soil lies are barn yard manures, or peat mixed with hard wood ashes leached, or (better) unleached The phosphate of lime, plaster, caustic and guano will all be found highly valuable and profitable when they can be obtained without involving to great an expense.

Bog Earth or peat No. 22, W. T. Haywood Schroon. This is very similar to the specimen from W. Fowlers. 100 parts dried at 212° gave of

Organic matter	93 48
In organic matter or ash	6,32

This is a remarkably pure peat it being comprised almost entirely of organic matter. 100 parts of the inorganic matter or the ash gave of

Phosphoric acid	12,37
Sulphuric acid	3,61
Carbonic acid	0,41
Chlorine	3,78
Lime	22,86
Magnesia	8,78
Potassa	13,24
Soda	16,32
Iron	7,01
Alumina	1,06
Manganese	041
Silica	3,11
	99,94

About from 4 to 7 per cent of this dry peat is made up of a peculiar resinous matter, which seems to impregnate and envelope the fibres and prevent their ready decomposition. By combining with this peat caustic lime or ashes or both, the resinous matter unites with the lime or potassa and soda of the ashes and forms a soluble soap which is readily dissolved in water, leaving the undecomposed peat to be acted on freely by the agents of decay.—Every farmer who has used peat to any extent is aware of the little benefit he derives from it, when he spreads it alone upon the land. In fact many have become so prejudiced against it, by not understanding how to treat it that they have unhesitatingly set it aside as one of the quite useless humbugs of book farming.

The Fruits of Fillmore's Administration.

The Register and its new Editor has revived the war on the isms, and is determined to drive out of the Whig party, every man who believes in restricting slavery to its present limits—who agrees with Judge Harris that the title of the Van Renselaer family to the twenty four miles domain is a villanous fraud, and every ism calculated to elevate and enlighten the masses.—When he succeeds in his undertaking, he will have a respectable party big enough to be conveniently seated in one of Halsted's omnibusses. Before The Register came into existence, the Whig party was the all-powerful party in the country. They controlled seventeen of the thirty-one States of the Union, and the Executive and Legislative Councils of the Federal Government. Since then th[illegible] been losing ground i[illegible] Confederacy, until th[illegible] party that previously r[illegible] al tornado, has been u[illegible] and the fruits produced by The Register and its hired allies. On the doctrines laid down in Seward's Cleveland speech, the Whig party went into the canvass in 1848. They went to the ballot box with Daniel Webster, claiming the Wilmot Proviso as his thunder. With Webster's declaration flying from the head of every Whig paper at the North. "No more slave territory," and with these issues clearly and distinctly before the people, they carried the great State of New York and Pennsylvania, and a majority of the electoral votes in the Union. These were the days when the heart of the Whig party throbbed in sympathy with the isms of the day, and carried Taylor and Fillmore triumphantly into power, and secured them a majority in the House of Congress. It was by the force of these isms which The Register desires to read out of the party that Mr. Fillmore holds his present position, and his horde of mischievous followers now fatten on the public spoils. Let The Register succeed in its crusade, and there will scarcely be left enough of the Whig party to form a corporal's guard. We will see what we shall see.—Albany Knickerbocker.

"The Historic Parallels of the Mexican Campaign."

Capt. Coffin of West Point lectured on this subject the other evening before the Young Men's association of Troy. The Troy Post makes the following remarks:

The picture he chiefly endeavored to present was, the conquest of Mexico by Cortez, in the sixteenth century, as compared with that of Gen. Scott, in the year 1847. He described in most glowing language the debarkation of Cortez and his little band in 1519, his march towards the Capitol of the Aztecs, and his final entrance into the halls of the Montozumas; and in the enthusiastic spirit felt by every American officer, and especially all who participated in the "Second Conquest," he pictured the landing of the American army before Vera Cruz, its surrender, and then proceeded to enumerate the brilliant victories of the American army, previous to their marching into the City of Mexico, and finally the planting of the stars and stripes, at the scene where Cortez saw his greatest triumphs.

But unlike Cortez he spared. His magnanimity took the place of his daring. No cruel tortures stained his name, but many a prayer has ascended from the lips of those he saved, for his welfare. The religion of the country was observed, law was restored, and order reigned. The law of nations in his hands was far more potent than the municipal authority of Mexico ever was.

ESSEX CO. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—At the annual meeting of this Society, held at Elizabethtown, on the 8th instant, the following gentlemen were chosen as officers for the ensuing year:—

President.

WINSLOW C WATSON, Chesterfield;

Vice-Presidents.

DAVID JUDD, Elizabethtown;
HARRY GLIDEN, do
NORMAN PAGE, Chesterfield;
CHILION A TRIMBLE, Crown Point;
WILLIAM S FLACK, Essex;
MONROE HALL, Jay;
PHINEAS NORTON, Keene;
BREWSTER M HOPKINS, Lewis;
ABSALOM P MORSE, Minerva;
GEORGE W GOFF, Moriah;
ALEXANDER RALPH, Newcomb;
DANIEL AMES, North Elba;
JACOB PARMERTER, North Hudson;
JAMES H PIERCE, St. Armand;
ERASTUS B POTTER, Schroon;
THOMAS DELANO, Ticonderoga;
SAMUEL ROOT, Wesport;
PAUL B BOYNTON, Willsborough;
ARTEMAS BEACH, Wilmington;

Secretary.

ROBERT S HALE, Elizabethtown.

Treasurer.

LEVI D BROWN, Elizabethtown.

Mr. Hale wishing to be excused from serving as secretary, George S Nicholson, of Elizabethtown, was chosen in his place. Mr Hale was afterwards appointed a delegate to the Annual Meeting of the State Society.

The committe of Judges on Field Crops made their report, awarding the following premiums.

Corn—Best Acre (2 Entries)

David Judd, Elizabethtown: yield 78 bushels, 19 quarts, 1 pint—1st Premium, - $5,00
Orrin French, Lewis; yield 55 bushels, 18 quarts—2d Premium. - - - $3,00

Potatoes—Best Half Acre (1 entry)

William Simonds, Elizabethtown. yield 204 bushels to 1-2 acre—1st Premium - $3,00

Carrots—Best 1-4 acre (1 entry)

Daniel Ames, North Elba: yield 250 bushels from 35 rods, 9 yards of land.—1st Prem, $3 00.

The Society then adjourned to meet at Judd's Hotel on the 2d of February, at 2 P M.

The British Victory.

We have before us the Haldimand, (C. W.) Independent of Nov. 16 in which the Editor says.

"As the great contest on the other side of the lines, has terminated in the victory of that party, whose leading principle is Free Trade, it is but natural to expect that they will, when in power, make some attempts at removing the restrictions under which the Commerce of the United States now labours, that they will in accordance with the doctrines which they profess, endeavor to open their ports to the commodities of those countries who are seeking there a market for their produce."

The Editor then enters into a long, and ingenious argument in favor of reciprocity.

It is not our purpose to discuss that question, but to call the attention of our readers to the similarity in language between the Canadian and British Press, and democratic speakers. The latter during the late Campaign, spoke of Protection as "restrictions upon commerce." We quoted from a number of such speeches. The democratic organ here of course did not see them! General Cass frankly pronounced Protection a humbug, and declares that the people had a right to trade where they choose. The Canadian and British Press think so too. We agree with Gen. Cass in the abstract right of people to trade where they please, but we also believe it is for their interest to encourage domestic manufactures and the creation of a home market.

The London Times says. "The tri[illegible]

The Chronicle says. "In the triumph of General Pierce we cannot but recognize the success of the party which proclaims the policy of unrestricted commerce."

If the democratic party is not Free Trade it is thus shamefully traduced by an old professed enemy of theirs. It is somewhat curious to see the democracy and the British "Cheek by jowl" after all the former have said against the latter. "British whigs," eh?

THE

Knickerboker Magazine.

EDITED BY LOUIS GAYLORD CLARK.

THE number for January, 1853, will be the first of the Forty-First Volume of the Knickerboker Magazine.

Since the price of subscription has been reduced from five to three dollars a year, the circulation of the Knickerboker has been increased nearly four to one. In many places ten are sold where there were but one before, and through the year it has been steadily increasing. It is now offered as cheap as any of the magazines, all things considered. Instead of making new and prodigious promises we submit a few extracts from notices of late numbers, which might extend to a number of pages.

'These familiar with the Editor's monthly 'Gossip with his Readers,' have doubtless, with ourselves, admired the perennial source of its pleasant wit and joyousness. In this number 'The Gossip' holds on its way like some fair rivulet glancing and dancing in the sunshine of a May morning. We used to wonder how Mr Clark hold out, expecting he must certainly 'snow brown' in the coming number; but this number gives no sign of exhaustion.'—National Intelligencer, Washington.

'Plesant, genial, delightful 'Old KNICK.!' Thy name is a suggestion of all things delectable; the sight of thy modest, fresh cover, a balm to spiritual sore eyes; a glance within thee, best antidote for the blues. Thou hast give to kindly humor, to piquant delineation, and to side-splitting fun, a local habitation, without which they might go wandering over the domain of letters, calling now and then where a friendly door opened to them, but refusing to be comforted for the loss of their old dear home.'—Courier, Burlington, Vt.

The Fudge Papers, by Ik Marvil, Author of the Reveries of a Bachelor, Dream Life, &c. &c., The Sequel to St. Ledger, or the threads of Life, by Richerd B. Kimball, Esq.; and Meister Karl's Sketch-book, by Charles G. Leland, Esq., will be continued regularly, unless interrupted by the absence or illness of the authors.

Rev. F. W. Shelton, Author of Letters from up the River, etc., will be a regular contributor.

Fitz-Greene Halleck has engaged to furnish poetical contributions from time to time.

The best talent in the country will be enlisted, and no expense or effort spared, to make the Knickerboker more than ever deserving of the first position among our original American Magazines.

TERMS.—Three Dollars a year, strictly in advance—there will be no deviation from this condition; Two copies for $5 00; Five copies, and upwards, $2 00 each Booksellers and Postmasters are requested to act as Agents.—Those who will undertake to procure subscribers will receive favorable terms Specimen numbers will be sent gratis on application, post-paid.

INDUCEMENTS FOR CLUBBING.—The Knickerbocker and Harper's, Graham's or Godey's Magazine will be sent one year for five dollars; the Knickerbocker and Home Journal, or any other of the two dollar weekly papers published in New-York Philadelphia or Boston, for four dollars a year.

REDUCTION OF POSTAGE.—The Postage on the Knickerbocker, when prepaid quarterly in advance, will be only two cents per number. It may be paid by the Subscriber or the Publisher.

All remittances and all business communications must be addressed, post-paid, to

THE PEOPLE'S OMNIBUS.

A VEHICLE for the Free Expression of the Opinions of all:

A medium for Free Discussion—Moral, Religious, Politicial, Social and Scientific.

Well printed, on a large folio sheet—new type, good paper—containing a comprehensive summary of the News of the Week, and contributions from the ablest pens in this country and Europe, &c., &c.

The want of an Independent Paper—unbiased by party, sect or local prejudices, open to every one, with the single restriction that the cause of mortality shall not be outraged nor the ear of decency be offended, has long been felt as a desideratum.

Such a paper we now offer to the American public, under a firm conviction that it requires but to be seen to give it a place in every family and work shop in the union.

The Philanthropist—the Social or Politicial Economist—the Moral, Medical, Scientifio, Politicial or Social Reformer—the Inventor, the House-keeper, the Merchant, the Farmer, the Manufacturer, or Laboring man, will find the "Omnibus" a "pioneer" in the great work of human progression."

TERMS.

Published every Saturday Morning, (commencing Oct. 23,) at $1,50 per year, or five copies to one address for $5, payable in advance.

In Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Baltimore, and other cities or large towns of easy access by railroads or steamboats, it will be furnished at 12½ cents per month, payable to the carrier.

One copy each of the "People's Omnibus" and "Wright's Casket," (a monthly, of 16 pages, 4to,) one year to one address, $2.

☞ SPECIMEN COPIES FURNISHED GRATIS.

THE WEEKLY.

DAY-BOOK

IS PUBLISHED every Saturday at the office of the Merchant's Day Book, 203 Broadway. It contains the most interesting articles published in the Merchant's Day Book of the same week, and furnishes a larger amount of reading matter than any other paper at so low a price.

In the Commercial Department it will be found to supply ample intelligence, which may be always relied upon for accuracy. This part of the paper is under the special supervision of the senior editor, whose experience and practical knowledge as a merchant in this city partiularly qualify him to meet the wishes and tastes of commercial men, and to supply them with intelligence of the most useful and valuable character. In the "Dry Goods" department it will be found unrivalled, and will keep its readers fully informed of all changes in prices, and other circumstances affecting the trade.

Valuable statistics of this important branch of business, and of commerce generally, will be contained in the "WEEKLY DAY BOOK;" and subscribers are advised to keep a file of it from the beginning for future reference.

Terms.—Two Dollars per annum—always in advance. Or two copies for three dollars.

To Clubs—Twenty five copies will be sent to one address for $25

SATURDAY EVENING POST.

THE LEADING LITERARY WEEKLY

Over Thirty one Years have now elapsed since the POST began its weekly round of blending instruction and amusement; and in all that period, was its success so marked as at the present moment. Possessing undeniably the largest circulation, by many thousands, of any paper of its class in the Union, its subscribers have the best of reasons for believing that it stands upon a permanent basis, and that they will receive the full value of every dollar intrusted to its publishers. In announcing some of our preparations for the coming year, we may begin by stating our continued connection with MRS. SOUTHWORTH, a writer who, in vigor and fertility of genius, is not surpassed by any, male or female, in the Union. MRS. CAROLINE LEE HENTZ a lady whom it would be almost superfluous to praise, in view of the general popularity of such tales as "The Mob Cap," "Eoline," "Linda." "Rena," etc., also is enrolled among our contributors. We are now engaged in the publication of a story entitled Clara Moreland, By EMMERSON BENNETT, Author of "Viola," "Prairie Flower," "Bandits of the Osage," etc.—And at the opening of the ensuing year we designate commencing the publication of the following Novelet; Miss Thusa's Spinning-Wheel, By Mrs. Lee Hentz, of Florida, Author of "Eoline," "Linda." "Rena," etc. This novelet we design following by a story entitled, A STRAY PATCH FROM AUNT HANNAH'S QUILT, By Mrs. FRANCES D. GAGE, of Ohio, widely known as the author of some admirably written and very effective household poems, sketches, etc. After this we expect to be able to commence THE LOST HEIRESS; A Story of Howlet Hill. By Mrs. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH, Author of "The Curse of Clifton," "Virginia and Magdalene," "Shannondale," "The Deserted Wife," etc.

In addition to these and other Original Tales, involving a large expenditure of money, we shall lay before our readers, as heretofore, choice Tales, Sketches, Essays, Narratives, etc., from the English Magazines—such as have given the Post a name for the excellence of its selections.

Engravings.—In the way of engravings we present at least two weekly—one of an instructive, and the other of a humorous

Agricultural Articles, Miscellaneous matter, General News, Witty and Humorous Sketches and Anecdotes, Letters from Europe, Editorials, View of the Produce and Stock Markets, Bank note List, etc., etc, shall also be duly given.

☞ Of course, we shall maintain for the Post the character it has acquired, of being a strictly moral paper—not ridiculously squeamish and straight laced, but really and truly moral—such as may be taken into the family circle without fear. Advertisements of an improper character shall be as heretofore, rigorously excluded.

☞ Cheap Postage.—The postage on the Post to any part of the United States, when paid quarterly in advance, is now only 26 cents a year. And we trust that the public generally will show their appreciation of this commendable reduction of postage, by largely increasing the number of papers taken at the various offices—that thus there may be no falling off in the revenue of the Post office Department. This will ensure a continuance of the present reduced rates.

TERMS.—The terms of the POST are Two Dollars if paid in advance, Three Dollars if not paid in advance. For Five Dollars in advance, one copy is sent three years. We continue the following low terms for Clubs, to be sent, in the city to one address, and, in the country, to one post-office.

4 Copies, $5 per annum. 8 Copies (and one to agent, or the getter up of the club) $10. 13 Copies, (and one to Agent or the getter up of the club,) $15. 20 Copies, (and one to Agent, or the getter up of the club,) $20.

The money for Clubs always must be sent in advance. Subscriptions may be sent at our risk. When the sum is large, a draft should be procured if possible—the cost of which may be deducted from the amount. Address, always post-paid.

Read This.

Here is the Effect of less than One Dozen Boxes. Certificate of a Gentleman well known.

I do feel greatful for what "Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge" has done for me, and heartily wish all that are afflicted knew, as I do, its worth.

Almost every man in Whitehall knows that I have been so afflicted that for almost a year I could not speak aloud; with a distressing cough, pain in the side, loins and shoulders; and the opinion of the physicians was that for me there was a step only to the grave.

I commenced the use of the Lozenge in September last, soon after Mr. Renne introduced the article at our place, and I have gained my voice! and am congratulated daily by the business men on my returning health, which I attribute, under a good Providence, to the above Pitch Lozenge. THE NORTHERN
INSURANCE COMPANY,

Plattsburgh, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Capital, 100,000.

THIS Company is organized under the General Insurance Law of the State of New York, with a sound, reliable capital, and offers the following superior inducements:

1. The safer kinds of property are separated entirely from the more hazardous; affording the advantages of two distinct companies, with the expense of but one.

2. The first class, or Farmer's Department, consists of Farm-houses, Farm buildings and their contents and detatched dwellings and their contents in villages, when unexposed by more hazardous buildings,

3. The second class or Merchant's Department, consists of exposing dwellings, stores, merchandize and property not deemed specially hazardous.

4. Each class pays its own losses and thus securing equal justice and proportional rates to both.

5. Not more than $3,000 of the first class, or more than $2,600 of the second class, will be taken in one risk, nor any number of risks so contiguous as probably to subject the Company to a loss of over $3,000 at any one fire; thereby saving it from heavy and ruinous losses.

6. In taking surveys of property, the agent will be the agent of the company, and the company be responsible for the correctness of all surveys made by its agents.

7. Any one insured, may at any time surrender his policy and withdraw from the company by paying his proportion of the losses and expense up to the date of such surrender.

8. Applications will take effect at noon of the day on which they are made (unless a different day is directed by the applicant,) thus relieving the party from anxiety and suspense.

9. The company no have two-thirds clause, but will pay all loss and damage not exceeding the amount insured.

10. In case of difference of opinion in settlement of losses, the company will submit the same to arbitration in the county where the loss occurs, the claimant choosing one, the company one, and the two arbitrators another.

11 Each person insured in the company becomes a member and will be entitled to a participation of the profits, if any surplus should accrue, not required for the payment of losses.

12. This company will be responsible for losses by fire caused by lightning.

13. This company will take no risks in cities.

☞ The Directors return their acknowledgments to the public for ther readiness in aiding the organization of this company, and will endeavor to make it a safe and reliable institution, affording protection from the ravages of fire, at reasonable rates, and with certainty of payment in case of loss.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be ill seased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND THERE NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge of name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr, Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. MARRIAGE

HAPPINESS AND COMPETENCE.

WHY IS IT?

That we behold many females, scarce in the meridian of life broken in health and spirits with a complication of diseases and ailments, depriving them of the power for the enjoyment of life at an age when physical health, buoyancy of spirits, and happy serenity of mind, arising from a condition of health, should be predominant.

Many of the causes of her sufferings at first—perhaps years before, perhaps during girlhood, or the first years of marriage—were in their origin so light as to pass unnoticed, and of course neglected.

IN AFTER YEARS,

When too late to be benefitted by our knowledge, we look back and mourn, and regret the full consequences of our ignorance.

What would we not often give to possess, in early life, the knowledge we obtain in after years! And what days and nights of anguish we might not have been spared, if the knowledge was timely possessed. It is

MELANCHOLY AND STARTLING

To behold the sickness and suffering endured by many a wife for many years, from causes simple and controllable, easily remedied—or better still,—not incurred, if every

WIFE AND MOTHER

Possessed the information contained in a little volume, (within the reach of all) which would spare to herself

YEARS OF MISERY,

And to her husband the constant toil and anxiety of mind, necessarily devolving upon him from sickness of the wife, without giving him the opportunity of acquiring that competence which his exertions are entitled, and the possession of which would secure the happiness of himself, wife, and children.

SECURE THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

By becoming in time possessed of the knowledge, the want of which has caused the sickness and poverty of thousands.

In view of such consequences, no wife or mother is excusable if she neglect to avail herself of that knowledge in respect to herself, which would spare her much suffering, be the means of happiness and prosperity to her husband, and confer upon her children that blessing above all price—healthy bodies, with healthy minds. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S
Private Medical Companion.

BY DR. A. M. MAURICEAU,

PROFESSOR OF DISEASES OF WOMEN.

One Hundredth Edition. 18mo., pp. 250. Price, 50 cts

[ON FINE PAPER, EXTRA BINDING, $1 00.]

First published in 1847, and it is not

SURPRIZING OR WONDERFUL,

Considering that EVERY FEMALE, WHETHER MARRIED OR NOT, can here acquire a full knowledge of the nature, character and causes of her complaints, with the various symptoms, and that nearly

should have been sold.

It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage, but no female desirous of enjoying health, and that beauty, consequent upon health, which is so conducive to her own happiness, and that of her husband, but either has or will obtain it, as has or will every husband who has the love and affection of his wife at heart, or that of his own pecuniary improvement.

Poetry.

For the Republican.

Autumn Reflections.

Autumn winds are sighing round me,
Faded leaves are fleeting past;
Summer flowers are withering now,
In the chilling northern blast.

Summer birds have flown away,
To a distant, sunny land,
Where flowers bloom, and skies are bright,
And whisp'ring zephyrs always bland.

The sky assumes its yellow hue—
The woods in dying robes are clad;
All nature mourns the year's decline,
In accents mournful, low, and sad.

Mournfully, oh, mournfully the passing breeze
Doth wail among the leafless trees—
And echoes sad are borne along
Like funeral dirge or mournful song.

Oh! what is this that weighs me down?
That warns me of some coming blow?
Some gushing sorrow by the future veiled,
Presaging death, and crushing woe?

Why do our tears unbidden start
When all looks gay around?
Why doth the sigh unbidden rise
At every joyous sound?

Alas! there is some hidden power,
That breathes upon those silver strings—
And warns us, ere a tender flower
Is borne away on Angel wings.

For the Republican.

DIRGE.

Let me mourn—let me mourn with a sorrowful song,
For a deep tone of sadness is sweeping along:
It arose where the Pilgrims first landed of yore:
And its cadence will reach the Pacific's broad shore.

Let me weep—let me weep, for a Nation now weeps—
A great man has fallen, in silence he sleeps—
And sorrow and sadness prevades every breast.
For the Statesman of Marshfield has gone to his rest.

Let him sleep—let him sleep, near the home he preferred.
Where the green willow shakes, by the ocean breeze stirred;
And the requiem sound o'er the Patriot's grave,
Be the rush of the wind, and the roar of the wave.

Breathe a dirge—breathe a dirge for his time-honored name.
And the ocean shall waft it as far as his fame:
Let the hills of New England a monument be
To a name as enduring as island or sea.

Miscellany.

The Orphan.

"He faded yet so calm and meek,
So gently wan, so sweetly weak"

The bustle of the fight was over; the prisoners had been secured, and the decks washed down, the watch piped, and the schooner had once more relapsed into midnight quiet and repose. I sought my hammock and soon fell asleep. But my slumbers were disturbed by dreams, which like the visions of a fever, agitated and unnerved me; the late strife, the hardship of my early life, and a thousand other things mingled together, as figures in a phantasmagoria. Suddenly a hand was laid on my shoulder, and starting up, I beheld the surgeon's mate.

"Little Dick, sir, is dying," he said.

I sprang from my hammock. Little Dick was a sort of protege of mine. He was a pale, delicate child, said to be an orphan, and use to tender nurture, and from the first hour I joined the schooner, my heart yearned towards him, for I too had once been friendless and alone in the world. He had often talked to me in confidence of his mother, whose memory he regarded with holy reverence, while to the other boys of the ship he had little to say; for they were rude and coarse, he delicate and sensitive. Often when they jeered him for his melancholy, he would go apart by himself and weep. He never complained of his lot, though his companions imposed upon him continually. Poor lad! his heart was in the grave with his lost parents.

I took a strong interest in him, and had lightened his task as much as possible.—During the last fight I had owed my life to him, for he had rushed in just as a sabre stroke was leveled at me, and by interposing his cutlass, had averted the deadly blow.

In the hurry and confusion I had forgotten to inquire if he was hurt, though, at the time, I inwardly resolved to exert all my influence to procure him a midshipman's warrant in requital of his service.—It was a pang of reproachful agony, therefore, that I leaped to my feet and exclaimed.

"You don't mean it? he is not dying?"

"I fear sir," said the messenger, "that he cannot live till morning."

"And I have been lying idle here," exclaimed I, with remorse. "Lead me to him!"

"He is delirious but in the intervals of reason he asks for you," and as the man spoke, he stood by the bedside of the dying boy.

The sufferer did not lie in his usual hammock, for it was hung in the very midst of the crew, and the close air around it was too stifling; but he had been carried under an open hatchway, and laid there in a little open space about four feet square.—From the sound of the ripples, I judged the schooner was in motion, while the stars of stars, betokened that the fog had broken away. How calm it smiled down on the wan face of the dying boy. Occasionally a light currant of wind—oh! how deliciously cool in that pent up hold—eddied down the hatchway and lifted the dark chestnut locks of the sufferer, as with his head reposing in the lap of an old veteran, he lay in an unquiet slumber. His shirt collar was unbuttoned, and his childish bosom, as white as that of a girl, was open and exposed. The wound of which he was dying had been intensely painful, but within the last half hour had somewhat lulled, though even now his thin fingers tightly grasped the bed clothes as if he suffered the greatest agony.

A battle-stained and gray haired seamen stood beside him, holding a lantern in his hand and gazing sorrowfully upon the sufferer. The surgeon knelt, with his fingers upon the boy's pulse. As I approached they all looked up. The veteran who held him shook his hand, and would have spoken, but the tears gathered in his eyes.—The surgeon said,

"He is going fast, poor fellow; do you see this?" and he lifted up a rich gold locket which had laid upon the boy's breast. "He has seen better days."

I could not answer, for my heart was full. Here was the being to whom, but a few hours before, I had owed my life—a poor, slight, unprotected child, lying before me, with death already written on his brow, and yet I had never known his danger, and never sought him out after the conflict.—How bitterly my heart reproached me in that hour. They noticed my agitation, and his old friend—the seaman that held his head—said sadly;

"Poor little Dick, you'll never see the shore you have wished for so long. But there'll be more than one (he spoke with emotion) to mourn over you."

Suddenly the little fellow opened his eyes and looked vacantly around.

"Has he come yet?" he asked in a low voice, "why wont he come?"

"I am here," said I, taking the little fellow's hand, "don't you know me, Dick?"

He smiled faintly and said:

"You have been kind to me, sir; kinder than most people are to an orphan boy. I have no way to show my gratitude, unless you will take the Bible which you will find in my trunk. It's a small offering, I know, but it's all I have."

I burst into tears

"Doctor, I am dying, ain't I?" said the little fellow—"my sight grows dim. God bless you Mr. Danforth."

"Can I do nothing for you, Dick?" said I, "you saved my life. I would give my blood to buy yours."

"I have nothing to ask; I don't want to live; only if it's possible, let me be buried by mother. You'll find the name of the place, and all about it, in my trunk."

"Anything, everything, my dear lad," I answered chokingly.

The little fellow smiled faintly; it was like an angel's smile; but he did not answer. His eyes was fixed on the stars flickering in the patch of blue sky overhead. His mind wandered.

"It's a long, long ways up there;—but there are bright angels among them.—Mother used to say that I would meet her there. How near they come and I see sweet faces smiling upon me from among them. Hark! is that music?" And lifting his finger he seemed listening for a moment. He fell back, and the old veteran burst into tears. The child was dead.

Did he indeed hear angel's voices?

☞ WANTED. — Twenty independent Yankee men, under thirty years of age, who dare wear their coats in the street, with a patch the size of a cent and a half on the elbow.

WANTED.—The same number of native-born Americans, in good standing in society, who dare wear their hats, though sound as a well conditioned life preserver, if the nap is a litle short, and the rim half an inch narrower than the latest fashion.

WANTED.—The same number of gentlemen who are members of "the three learned professions," or in the mercantile line, that would prefer wearing an overcoat three winters in succession, to running in debt for a new one.

WANTED.—Twenty spruce dry goods clerks within the City limits, who would be satisfied to dress no richer or more fashionably than their employers WANTED.—Twenty gentlemen of strong and robust body, who could help their brothers carry a trunk four blocks on Broadway by daylight.

WANTED.—Twenty, ten, or even five gentlemen, respectably connected, and enjoying an extensive circle of acquaintance, who dare saw a stick of wood before the door of their City residence.

If the above named gentlemen will meet at any convenient gathering place, something may turn up for their mutual benefit. They may be sure of honorable intentions in this call. It is not to offer proposals from Barnum, or anything of that sort.—Young men of common sense, rally!—N. Y. Daily Times.

More Wants.

If the following notices are responded to, it is proposed that the ladies described below should meet at the same time and place with the independent gentlemen, advertised for in Thursday's Times, to form an Association or Phalanx for their mutual good.

WANTED.—Twenty independant young ladies, of "good families," who dare wear their last Winter's bonnets to church on a clear Sunday.

WANTED.—The same number of young ladies, who are anybody,' who dare be seen in Broadway wearing shoes with soles thick

WANTED.—The same number of young ladies of sufficient age to "go into company," who dare own that they ever made a loaf of bread.

WANTED.—One young married lady who is willing to begin housekeeping in the same style in which her parents began.

WANTED.—Twenty fashionable young ladies, who dare be seen wielding a dusting brush, or darning their brother's stockings, if a gentleman should happen to make an early morning call.

WANTED.—The same number of maiden ladies, who dare own they never had an offier.

WANTED.—The same number of matrons—leaders of the upper ten—who dare confess that they were tailoresses and their husbands milkmen.—[N. Y. Times.

BREACH OF PROMISE—ORIGINAL LOVE-LETTER.— The other day, at Hamilton, Canada, there was a trial for breach of marriage-promise, in which Miss Cary was plaintiff and Richard Moore, calling himself a preacher, was defendant. The lady was a plain, but bright eyed and smart tonged mulatto daughter of a neighboring farmer. She said, in her evidence, that Moore paid addresses to her in 1850, that he had popped the question and been accepted. September was the time for the wedding; but in September he made excuses, said he had no money, and named Christmas. Christmas came and went, and she, who had gone to some distance for work, soon heard that Moore had married somebody else. Her evidence was clear against him, and the following letter demolished his defence;—it was written on about one third of a page of ruled foolscap:

DECEMBER, the 2.

DEAR MISS,—I avail myself of the present to informe you that I have come conclusion to Chaing my single li married life and if you intend to yours and have not done it and will know if you will or will not except my offer without many words. I am very poor and offer nothing flowery but will love you and fear God I love my sister as she is next to my mother in the flesh I love her very much I think we know each other sufficiently well you know my head is grey but not from age. I am 33 years old last August the 15 so you may think on these things, and if you say marry so be it Sumetime in the crismas I think I will be down or before then will give you my mind in full my health is good as I hope this find you the same my sister sends her love to you an answer is expected. R. L. MOORE.

MISS CARY.

Several witnesses were examined, leaving the plaintiff's story unweakened; and the jury mulcted the reverend perfidious Moore in damages of £25.

Facts from the Census.

Mr. J. C. G. KENNEDY, Superintendent of the Census, has made an able though too long a report from his Bureau for the information of the present Congress. The most interesting facts contained in it are annexed:—

—The Population of the United States has increased 337 per cent, during the last fifty years. In the same period the Population of France has increased but about 30 per cent. The Population of the United States is now increasing at the rate of about three per cent per annum, while that of all Europe (we infer from the Secretary's partial statistics) is increasing at about the rate of one per cent per annum.

—Immigration has not swelled our population to any such extent as has generally been supposed. The Census returns indicate that, of our Twenty four Millions of People, only Two Millions and a Quarter, or less than ten per cent., were born in Europe—or, in round numbers, One Million in Ireland, Half a Million in Germany, a Quarter of a Million in England, One Hundred Thousand in Scotland and Wales, half as many in France, One Hundred and Fifty Thousand in Canada, and One Hundred Thousand in all other Countries. We think the Census takers did not obtain complete lists of the nativity of all born out of this Country—that their inquiries must have been misunderstood to some extent, or imperfectly answered—still, we should consider Three Millions a liberal estimate for the Foreign born Population of our Country, or about one eighth of the whole. We have known the Irish alone estimated at a higher figure.

—Of our Total Population, the Deaf and Dumb are 9,717, the Blind, 9,702; the Insane, 15,768; the Idiotic, 15,706. Of these the Colored Deaf and Dumb are but 632; Colored Blind, 1,715; Colored Insane, 612; Colored Idiots, 1,476. That is to say, the Colored Persons afflicted with these various infirmities are fewer in proportion to their numbers than the Whites.

—Of Paupers, the Census reports only 134,972 as having received public charity during the year proceeding June, 1850, and only 50,353 as actually receiving a subsistence from public on the 1st of June in that year. Of these nearly three fourths (36,916) were Natives. The aggregate cost of supporting Paupers during the year aforesaid was reported as only $2,954,806, whereof New York paid $817,336 and Massachusetts $392,765. Pennsylvania ranks next, but disburses only $232,138 in public charity, and New Hampshire fourth, paying out $157,351. Virginia and Maine are just behind. We are very sure that these returns are imperfect and deceptive. True, a great many of the indigent are subsisted in Hospitals, Retreats, &c., on the gifts of private munificence; others (as by our Commissioners of Emigration) from communications paid indirectly by certain classes; but after allowing for all this, we do not believe that Pennsylvania [for instance] paid so little as $232,138 for the support of Paupers, whether chargeable on Township, County or State There must be a blunder here, and, we trust, Mr. Kennedy [a Pennsylvanian] will review the data.

The Real and Personal Estate in the United States and Territories is returned as of the actual value of $7,133,369,725. We would raise that, to make it correspond with truth and the year 1852, to $10,000,000,000, and estimate the present actual Population of the Union at Twenty five Millions, giving $400 per head of Property to each human being or $2,000 to each average family of five persons. We believe this is a close approximation to the facts.

—The Churches or edifices for public Divine worship, in the United States, number Thirty six Thousand, [36,011,] of which the Methodists own one third, or 12,467; the Baptists nearly one fourth, or 8,791; the Presbyterians the next number, or 4,584; and if we count the Dutch Reformed, Congregational, Lutheran and German Reformed with the Presbyterian, [and the differences between all these seem slight and unessential,] the total is 8,112. But the estimated capacity of the Presbyterian and allied Churches is greater in the average than that of the Baptist and Methodist Churches, so that while all the Methodist Churches will accommodate but 4,209,323 worshipers, and all the Baptist but 3,130,878, the Presbyterian and related Churches aforesaid have room for 3,705,211 worshipers. The Catholics have but 1,112 Churches, accommodating 620,950 worshipers. The Episcopalians have 1,422 Churches, accommodating 625,213 worshipers. The average number that each church edifice in the Union will accommodate is 384; the total value of Church [illegible]6,416,639; and if all the [illegible]ld be filled at one time, they [illegible]3,849,896 persons—probably [illegible]r the total population that

The Farm Lands of the United States are set down in the census as amounting to 118,457,622 acres of Improved and 184,621, 348 of Unimproved; total 303,078,970 acres, worth in the average $10 per acre. The average value of the Farm Lands of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersy and Pennsylvania is about $30 per acre [New Jersy highest, Pennsylvania lowest; [while Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont average about $15 per acre. We are rather supprised to see the farmlands of North and South Carolina, Georgia Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee valued in the average below $5 per acre.

Of Domestic Animals, this country had an early supply and has always been prolific—and the number continues to increase steadily and rapidly. The increase of Horses, Mules, and Asses, from 1840 to 1850 was 559,053, although the number has considerably decreased in all the States liberally chequered with Railroads, New-York has one horse to seven persons, Ohio one to four, and the whole Union about one to every five persons, or a little over Four Millions in all.—Of Neat Cattle, the number in 1850 was 18,35[illegible]287—an increase in ten years of about twenty per cent. The average product of Butter appears to be about 49 pound per annum to each cow, with 16 2-3 pounds of Cheese. We export annually a little over One Million Dollars' worth of Dairy Products.—Of Sheep, there was an increase of 2,309,108 between '40 and '50 notwithstanding a diminution of 646,855 in New England and 1,761,460 in the Atlantic Middle States, equal to 45 per cent, in the former and 22½ in the latter. Sheep Husbandry is tending rapidly westward and southward—to the milder slopes of the Alleghanies and the Prairies of Illinois, Missouri and Texas.—New Mexico has six sheep to each person—an extraordinary proportion. Best of all, the returns show that while in 1840 the average annual yield of Wool was a little under two pounds per sheep, it was in 1850 nearly two and a half pounds per sheep, so that 21,600,000 sheep produced in 1850 forty six per cent, more Wool than 19,311,374 sheep did in 1840. An increase of twelve per cent, in the Sheep had been paralleled by an increased of forty six per cent, in the Wool. And in Vermont, where the greatest attention has been paid to Sheep Husbandry, the average yield per sheep is almost four pounds. Yet we import considerably of Wool—mainly the cheapest and coarsest. In 1850, the importwas 18,669,794 pounds, valued at $1,681,691 or between eight and nine cents per pound. The Imports of Wool have largely increased during three or four years.

Of Tobacco, the aggregate returned in 1840 was 319,163,319 lbs; in 1850 it was 199,752,6[illegible]6 pounds—a decrease of about ten per cent. We fear the Millennium is not approaching so rapidly as these returns would indicate.

Of Cotton, the production continues largely to increase. The product is now over 3,000,000 bales or 600,000 tons per annum.

Of Potatoes, the product would seem to have fallen off from 108,298,060 bushels in '40 to 104,055,989 bushels in 1850; and we presume this is correct: The reason being the effects and fears of Potatoe Rot. This disease would now seem to be passing away, and the culture of the root consequently reviving.

Of Wine, the production is steadily increasing. Our importation amounts to Six Millions of Gallons per annum; our consumption to at least Twenty Millions of Gallons: so that our home product on must be not far from Fourteen Million Gallons. Of this aggregate, it seems that only 221,249 gallons are acknowledged in the Census—whence we infer that our manufacturers of Maderia, Champagne, Hock, &c prefer not to 'let their light shine before men,' but meekly put aside the credit of their enormous consumption of Cider, Turnips, Logwood and other domestic and imported products. Such an example of modesty is very rare in this brazen age.

Of Spiritous and Malt Liquors, the annual product reaches the enormous aggregate of Eighty six Millions of Gallons, [six gallons for each person old enough to drink or to know better]—our imports and exports just about balancing each other.—This is a great country! The Hop culture (mainly confined to this State) is extending.

Of Flax and Hemp, the production did not materially vary from 1840 to 1850.—We trust it has since '50 received a strong and lasting impulse; but Rome was not built in a day.

Our Silk Culture, is a ruin. We produced in 1831 no less than 396,790 pounds of Cocoons; in 1840 only 61,552 pounds; in 1850 barely 14,763 pounds! And yet it is demonstrable that we have every facility of climate, soil unemployed hand, &c., for this branch of industry, and that its vigorous prosecution would add largely to the National wealth. But to secure this end present sacrifices are essential; and these individual cannot or will not make, and the Nation is too dull, too careless too fettered by partnership, to do the thing needful. So we run in debt for our Silks, and leave the children who ought to produce them, to grow up beggars and theives along our highways.

Our Sugar culture is extending. Our production (Maple and Culture) in 1840 was 155,100,809 lbs., in 1850 it was 281,880,886, lbs, an increase (mainly in Louisiania and Texas) of 126,730,077 lbs., Much credit is due for this to the Tariff of 1842, which gave the Sugar Culture an impetus which it has never lost. It has now obtained command of the most admirable and efficient machinery, and is steadily working further and further Northward, through the gradual acclimation of the Cane, and can nevermore be broken down, —Such is the substance of Mr. Kenedy's Report, but he is not to be held responsible for our deductions and reflectins.

The Two Doctrines——Protection, and Free Trade.

The N. Y. Courier and Enquirer, after giving the receipts and expenditures, the the imports and exports, of the country, as set forth in the Message of President Fillmore, talks sensibly as follows:—

Here is the matter in a few words. In the year 1850-51 we imported 210,000,000 and exported $189,000,000—balance ags't us $21,000,000.

In the year 1851-52 we imported 207,000,000, and exported (exclusive of specie ($167,000,000, showing a clear balance against us of $40,000,000, notwithstanding the high price of cotton and other domestic produce.

This apparent balance of forty millions of dollars will be further and actually increased when we bear in mind that the imports are generally at low valuations. It would prehaps not be amiss to assume ten per cent, by undervaluations, making the total imports for the year $228,000,000.—Even this we consider underrated.

How is this balance of the past year, and similar balances for future years, to be liquidated? It is seen that we not only part with $42,000,000 in specie, in round numbers, but we all know that a still larger balance is created, for which we have temporarily arranged, by the negotiation of State, City, County, and Railroad Bonds, during the past twelve months, in Europe. These enormous imports of foreign fabrics, which in the opinion of the President, break down our own manufactures, not only exhaust our total exports of domestic and foreign goods. $167,000 000, and coin ($42,000.000, less $5,000,000,) $37,000.000, but the whole of the avails of domestic bonds issued, and thus far sent to Europe, estimated at (for the year) $50,000,000.

"The South are all Free Trade."

Such is the constant declaration of all those who wish to deceive the voters of the north, but it is not the truth as we have frequently shown. With individual exceptions a whig is a friend of the principal of Protection whether his home is in the "Sunny South," in the expanding West, or amid the hills of the North. We have before us another item of proof in the New Orleans Commercial Bulletin a leading, and valuable Whig paper in which "the fallacies of free trade" are examined at length. We give the conclusion of an article of great ability:—

The advocate of the system among us, urge the policy of its adoption, because England has manifested a disposition to relax, in a degree, its old restrictive views of foreign trade, and to co-operate with us in originating and supporting a more liberal policy. But what a pitiful subterfuge the whole propositions is. What a miserable misnomer and humbug this so-call Free Trade is as advocated by COBDEN, BRIGHT, and the other reformers of English trade and commerce, when we investigate the subject, and take into consideration our relative positions—the amount of our respective concessions, and the precise footing upon which we stand. Would time and space admit, we would analyze the above tables, and show how Free Trade in England is understood to protect the products of the home market, and to extort all that is practicable from the foreign. It never entered into the imagination of the most latitudinarian Free Trader of England, to assimilate their rule and conduct of trade to our standard; to reduce, for instance, their tariff on articles of general consumption, the products of foreign countries, to a maximum of thirty per cent, as we have done. They would scout the idea as perfectly absurd. And yet the advocates of the system in this country would think they had consummated their great object, could they take the tariff off altogether, on iron, woollen and cotton goods, notwithstanding England should keep her tariff up to the present high notch on our tobacco, rice, corn and provisions of every kind; reciprocity does not seem to be an element or essential of Free Trade a quid pro quo is not asked nor expected

By way of illustration: The duty we pay on English iron is 30 per cent; in consequence of this low duty, the best market for the English iron miner and monger, is the United States; they are making immense profits on their shipments to this country, and are at the same time ruining our own manufactures. The duty on tobacco in England, ranging according to the quality of the article. 600 to 1200 per cent amounts in the aggregate to twenty-one millions of dollars; this large sum is exacted on a single article, in a country whose entire products into the United States pay only about eighteen million of dollrs duty annually.—We need no stronger illustration of the fallacies of Free Trade, this one fact is enough and speaks volumes.

A TOAST.—The followin was among the toasts given at the late Democratic jubilee at Washington:

"Franklin, Pierce and his Administration—May his history be written in the blood of the Galphins."

This is rather hard, considering that "Galphin W. Crawford" voted for Franklin Pierce, and the claim was allowed by a Democratic Congress.

"Truth is mighty and will prevail."

Upon all sides of us from every quarter, we are constantly hearing the phrase, "This is an age of progress" rung in our ears; and by no class of men are these words made use of more frequently than by the so called medical fraternity—and by this, I mean the regular physicians—the allopathists. Progress—improvement, is their continual and everlasting cry; and the world, thus far, has been humbugged into the belief that, they really were what they pretended to be—the great promoters of progression and advancement, not only, in science and the arts, but in nearly every-thing else; and most especially has the poor world been deluded into the conviction that, these wise guardians of its health were travelling with great celerity the onward road in medicine; and even among the sapient doctors themselves, there will, now and then, one be found who, doubtless faithfully believes what he preaches. "Mistaken souls that dream of Heaven." But the time has come when the omnipotency of regular practice is beginning to be seriously doubted, and upon most valid grounds too; and the period is not far distant when it will be remarked of allopathy, as of ancient Troy—"Ilium fuit."—The inevitable fate of any system that remains stationary; which has been the condition of the old established theory of medicine, since time immemorial—Start not, my gentle allopathic patient, for such is the bare fact, notwithstanding the loud assertion of my good Doct. Lancet to the contrary. It is a most palpable truth, fairly investigated, that there never existed a set of men so opposed to the slightest improvement in their own profession, as the old medical faculty, unless the progressive idea emanated from their immediate ranks; for the first rule in their creed is, that no mortal ungarnished by a diploma is capable of originating anything that shall be of utility in medicine. The magic letters M. D. are imperatively requisite in the constitution of an inventive mind. Upon the first alarm the cry of innovation is raised, and the luckless reformer is forthwith branded with the name of quack without a hearing But thank heaven, a change is coming over the spirit of their dreams. The star of allopathy is gradually, but certainly, fading before the rising splendor of the homeopathic sun. Yes, my worthy masters, the shrill whistle of reform is sounding an alarm in your ears, offering you a choice of three things, either to step off the track, jump aboard, or be run over.

I will now endeavor to set forth, in as clear and succinct a manner as possible, the principles upon which homeopathy is founded.

Paracelsus, one of the great lights of Medicine, who flourished in the latter part of the fifteenth century, was the first promulgator of the prime law in the homeopatic creed of "similia similibus curantur," and, judging from his extraordinary success in curing disease, we may safely infer, that he practiced what he preached. The system died with him, and was not revived again until the observing and practical Hahnneman caught sight of the almost extinguished spark, and gently fanned it into a glowing ember; since when the breath of popularity has been steadily blowing it into the brilliant flame it now is.

True homeopathy, we take to be founded upon the following basis, viz: First. To the entire organization is superadded an immaterial principle—a dynamical, or moving force—active in itself—by which the organization is ruled and controlled.—It is this dynamical force or principle, upon which all morbific causes or influences act; and the disturbance, which these causes occasion in this principle, operates of necessity upon the organization, deranging its healthy actions, and perverting its natural sensations. Secondly. Every modification of this immaterial and independent principle, throughout the altered and deranged sensations of the organs, which it governs and moves, manifests itself by external signs, or symptoms, which are always recognisable and appreciable, by the attentive and careful observer; so that the totality of the symptoms, in any given case, becomes an absolute and infalliable index and exponent of the changes in the organs, or, in other words, of the disease. These changes themselves, are beyond the reach of our investigation.

Thirdly. The vital force being a dynamic power, the morbific causes, occasioning its disturbance, can do this only in virtue of a like dynamic power in themselves, and these disturbances, thus produced can be removed only by modifiers or remedies, equally dynamic in their character, and acting on the vital force. Fourthly. The effect of all modifiers, or remedies, upon this force, can be certainly and positively ascertained, only when the force itself is not already disturbed by the action of morbific causes—or, in other words—when the body is in a state of perfect health. The action of these modifiers is constant and uniform; so that when they act as remedies it can only be by modifying the vital force precisely as they do in health.—Fifthly. The totality of the symptoms, and, the disease, being, so far as our knowledge is concerned, equivalent terms, or the same thing; the former being removed, it follows, of necessity, that the latter is cured. Sixthly. This cure can be accomplished only in two ways,—first by exciting, through the agency of modifiers, or remedies, actions in the vital force like those which already constitute the disease; or, second, by exciting actions in the force unlike, or opposite, to those constituting the disease. Seventhly. All pure experience, and all careful trials, show that the latter is impossible; and that even when the symptoms are diminished, or removed by it, they never fail to reappear in an aggravated form. It follows, then, that there is only one method by which the totality of the symptoms, representing the disease, can be certainly and permanently removed; and that is through the agency of those substances and influences, which so modify the dynamic force of the healthy body, as to produce a totality of symptoms like or more powerful, than that representing the disease. Ninthly. Pure experience shows, that all true remedies do act in this manner; and do cure diseases. All opposite, or allopathic experience is false and deceptive. Diseases are never removed by substances, which do not act in this manner. Tenthly. Remedies, or modifiers, in order to produce the desired effect on the disturbed vital force, must be introduced into the body in exceedingly minute, and almost infinitesimal quantities. This, Mr. Editor, is the creed of the homeopathist, and our practice proves its correctness.—Let him gainsay it who can.

B.

Vindication of the Rum Party.

BY F. J. C.

While the popular feeling is so much against us, and while so many attempts are being made to eradicate our party from the list of sects that be; a few remarks to remove the groundless prejudices of the public mind, might not be out of place.—For while the literary world has been flooded with praises and encomiums of the Cold Water Party, we have remained comparatively silent, and not a single writer has been found, who has attempted to answer the insult and abuse of the other party.—Our naturally jovial good nature has long been trespassed upon; but after long years of patient endurance even Job like patience will at length be wearied. It is high time therefore that the work of vindicating the Rum Party, so long delayed, should commence.

There is no danger of confounding our party with the other, for there are so many wide cotrasts, and striking differences, that such an event would be nearly a miracle.—This difference in the members appears very early. When you meet a young man who promptly answers your questions with a stiff "No Sir," you always know at once that he is a member of the Cold Water Party; but if his hat is inclined about forty-three and a half degrees, cheeks rosy with his nose inclined to the same color, and if he winks you in the eye and answers "No sir ee, then he is one of our boys.

Happiness never falls to the members of the Cold Water Party, while that is eminently our lot. While they can never enjoy themselves but in a fine house, with clean apartments and splendid furniture, the nature of our organization is such that we can even roll and sleep in the gutter, or pass the night with no better pillow than a brick house or a friendly sign post. Besides we never aspire so high as the members of the Cold Water Party, and hence never trouble our neighbors. Did you ever hear of a true member of our party, ever troubling men for their votes to elect him to any public office? No Sir ee; we are too happy, too contented with our present condition to wish to do this. And again, when one of our members die, how do we bury him? Do we do it like the Cold Water Party, and make a great parade? Do we ever cost our friends a penny for costly monuments over our graves? No Sir; we do no such thing at all, but carry him quietly, without ever troubling community for a general "turn out," much more for a regret or a tear.

Kind Reader if you do not see our evident superiority over the Cold Water Party yet, just compare their works with ours.—Tell us if you can, what they have been doing all the while we have been building up Sing Sing and state prisons by the score; while we have been establishing poor houses and insane hospitals, and jails and lock ups, in every city and village in the Union? What have they been about, while we have been giving employment to hundreds of doctors, lawyers and city police? Nothing at all; they have not helped a penny towards supporting taverns, grocery paupers or drinking saloons.

But as much as we do for the public, we pay some attention to home affairs. Altho' we are much opposed to "laying up treasures on earth, where moth and rust corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal," yet we are economizing, but never miserly.

We are great admirers of the animal and vegetable kingdoms, so much so indeed that we suffer rats, mice, and vermin, to inhabit our dwellings, and grass and sundry vegetables to sprout from our roof and eaves.

We are great enemies to pride; and this is the great reason why we have never boasted before. You never heard of our wives becoming vain, because we had bot' them fine rings, fine dresses, or costly ornaments; and it would indeed be a wonder if one our children while remaining with us, should ever have occasion to boast of his learning or high station. We are as I said before too great enemies to pride to allow this. On the other hand Freedom and Liberty meet with our hearty support, especially Free License.

But although we do so much in public and in private, although our superiority over the Cold Water Party is so unmistakably evident and plain, yet they are always insulting and abusing us. They have acquired a singular prejudice against the use of spirituous Liquors, which we know not how to account for. They affirm that it is the use of this, which pushes out the toes of our boots, pushes out the bottoms of our chairs, pushes down our chimneys, pushes our houses into a leaning attitude. and finaly to complete the string of abuse they say, that it pushes out the bottom of our purses, and the contents after them.

It is seldom if ever that we descend to make any answer to their arguments, but now we would ask them, that if the use of Spirituous Liquors were to be entirely and totally discontinued, what would be the effect? Depend upon it that if the event should ever actually take place, hundreds of doctors and lawyers would be entirely destitute of employment, thousands of city police would be no longer needed, the poor houses would be emptied, the insane hospitals and lock ups, would be deserted, and nothing but the general ruin of these professions and employments would inevitably ensue; for not surer is the eternal

The Republican.

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning Dec. 25.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands,
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

Honor to Gen. Scott.

"The proposition to give General Scott the rank of Lieutenant General is regarded with favor by all parties in Congress, and it will undoubtedly pass."

So say the papers, and so far as General Scott is personally concerned no honor can be conferred upon him which he is not worthy to wear. But this proposition, coming from a party which has spent the last few months in the vilest abuse of him which Billingsgate afforded, and from the man who of all others has been the lowest in the search for vile epithets; nay more, from that same party who murdered the great and pure De Witt Clinton, and then were loudest in their wailings, and considering that this same title may by and by be used by another Polk to overslaugh Whig Generals in the enemy's country as he attempted to Taylor and Scott, we are led to doubt the expediency of the proposition.—But when we consider that its design is to confirm the people in democratic assertions that Gen. Scott is a warrior only, we are almost led to oppose it, for in this view it is an insult rather than an honor. Gen. Scott is already engraved on the memory, and in the affections of the American people. His deeds embrace some of the most glorious portions of our history, both Military, and civil. He is eminently fitted for the Presidential chair, and we do not despair of seeing this honor bestowed upon him by acclamation. Should he be the champion of the new administration, as he was of Polks, on the enemy's soil, this result will most assuredly follow for the people will not permit such a faithful public servant to go down to the grave disgraced by a defeat at the hands of a third rate New Hampshire Attorney—defeated by British Gold, whom British lead could not kill—no—never!

Democratic tyranny—Ky. U. S. Senator.

No party in this country, and no monarchy in any country ever presumed to more high handed outrages than our American democracy. Who does not remember the high handed measures from 1830 to 1840, and particularly that of disfranchising N. Jersey in violation of the Great Seal of the State. Another similar attempt is now made in the Senate to deny to Mr. Dixon a newly elected Senator from Ky. the right to his seat, tho' his claims are based upon an election by the Legislature, and are duly certified by the proper authority under the Great Seal of the State. The unscrupulousness of the attempt will be apparent by a brief statement:

Henry Clay had been elected Senator from Kentucky. He resigned his seat, the resignation to take effect on the first day of September, 1852. The Legislature of Kentucky, thereupon, elected the Hon. Archibald Dixon to fill the vacancy thus created.

But it happened that Mr. Clay died before the time fixed for his resignation to take effect. The Governor of Kentucky thereupon appointed the Hon. David Meriwether to fill his place, and gave him a commission which authorizes him to take the seat vacated by the death of Mr. Clay, and hold it till the first day of September, 1852. By the very terms of his commission, his office expired on that day, and he does not pretend to hold a seat.

It should also be added that every Senator in that body is elected several months in advance to take his seat on the expiration of the term of the Senator he is to succeed.

This is, therefore, a sort of "higher law" outrage based on the behests of party, without even the pretence of right to sustain it. We have only to remark, that "whom the Gods wish to destroy they first make mad." How little justice had to do in the matter may be gathered from the following:

☞ The out spoken editor of the Richmond (Va.) Examiner is in favor of admitting Mr. Dixon to the Kentucky Senatorial seat, because his rejection would be "the thwarting of the State's intention," and that the Democrats are reminded, "will set the State of Kentucky dead against us." The Examiner adds:

"A contested election ruined us there once before. Another time the same thing killed us in New Jersey—at another in North Carolina—and at another in Mississippi"

Washington letter state that intimations similar to the above from leading democrats of Kentucky, will probably induce the majority of the Senate to give Mr. Dixon the seat to which he was elected.

Gov. Seymour's Military Appointments—The Atlas, under its "Delta" alias, announces Gov. Seymour's Military Appointments in yesterday's Evening Post, as follows:—

Adjutant General—Robt. E. Temple, Albany.

Assistant Adj. Gen.—Isaac E. Vanderpoel, Albany.

Judge Advocate Gen—Elijah Ward, Westchester.

Quartermaster Gen—Zadock Pratt, Jr., Greene.

Engineer in Chief—[illegible] New York.

Surveyor General—[illegible] Albany.

The Vice Presidency.

Wm. R. King is reported in the last stages of consumption, in view of which the N. Y. Express makes the following comments:

The question has been asked us, what would be the effect of the death of Mr. King upon the office to which he was elected, and especially should he die previously to the second Wednesday of February, when by law the votes will be counted and recorded at Washington, for President and Vice President for four years from the 4th of March next. The 12th article of the Constitution, 2d provision, declares that

"The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice President shall be the Vice President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two higher numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice President. A quorum for the purpose shall consist of two thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice."

In case of Mr. King's death before the day named for counting the votes, the Senate would have to select "from the two highest numbers on the list" or persons voted for; and as only two numbers or persons were thus voted for by the people, (Wm. R. King and Wm. A. Graham) the Senate would have to declare Mr. Graham Vice President of the United Ssates. If Mr. King should live until after the votes are counted, as provided for in the 1st section of the 12th article of the Constitution, as follows,—

"The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for Pesident and Vice President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. They shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President and, in distinct ballots, the person voted for as Vice President; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice President, and of the number of votes for each; which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the President of the United States. The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted."

—then the Senate, on being convened by the President of the United States on the 4th of March next, would elect its own President pro tem., as it did on the death of Generals Harrison and Taylor, when the Vice presidents were transferred to the executive mansion, because the time would have passed when a different action is required.

Should a President or Vice President die after the election by the people in November, and before the meeting of the Electoral Colleges in the States in December, the Electors would be at liberty to return from any State any two names for the two offices, and the choice would be made from such returns as above stated; but there having been but two names returned, and these two "from the two hi hest numbers," nobody can be declared by the Senate Vice President but Mr. King or Mr. Graham.

If Mr. Graham should be declared Vice President (in the event of the death of Mr. King,) we might possibly have a Whig President e'er the end of the four years!

☞ Would our democratic friends admit it to be "a Providential interference" as they have alleged in the case of Harrison, and Taylor?

The following are the analysis of Iron ore No. 124, 125, and 126.

	No 124 Hemetit Moriah	No 125 Putlers Magnetic ore.	No. 126 Butle's ore exposed to atmosphere for a time.
Per oxide of Iron	76.01	56.53	49.11
Prot. oxid of Iron	—	28.49	21.02
Silica	22,83	13.81	28.14
Alumina	1,00	1.02	1,43
Carbonate			1.21
	99,97	99,85	90,91
Percentage of pure Iron in the per. and prot. oxides	52.741	61,202	50,284
Per centage of oxygen in the per. and rot. oxides	23.319	23.918	19.841

These are all very good ores. No. 126 contains more silicious matter than No 125. It also contains a small quantity of carbonate of lime. From the manner in which they are labelled I should judge that both come from the same bed. No. 125 & 126 should be well roasted before placing them in the furnace for reduction. The roasting should be carried on at a temperature below the fusing point of the ore. The magnetic ore melts into a sulg at a cherry red heat. Care should be taken not to reduce the ore to a slug while roasting, as this slug is useless and even injurious to the blast in reducing furnace. The heat should be simply high enough to peroxidise the protoxide and dissipate volatile bodies. One great difficulty in working this ore successfully, probably has been, in not properly washing it or in reducing the protoxide to a peroxide. When the ore in its natural state is thrown into a blast furnace and subjected to a red heat a portion of the peroxide only is reduced, while the remainder with the protoxide is converted into a slug from which it is extremely difficult to seperate the Iron without a high heat and strong bases.

As a general rule the higher the state of oxide iron, the more ready is the ore reduced. The protoxide, is very difficult of reduction. After the ore is properly roasted it should be placed in the blast furnace with a strong base, as lime and flux.

This strong base will act beneficially in combination with silicia and allumina and thus prevent the formation of silicites and aluminates of iron.

If the ore from which 124 is taken is all as puerly a peroxide as the sample, I think it will not be necessary to subject it to the roasting process.

No. 179, from H. Smith Schroon Lime used as fertilizer. Subjected this merely to a qualitative examination. Found it made up principally of carbonate of lime. Beside from this it contains a small quantity phosphate of lime appears to be principally in small grains by itself. The superiority of this rock over that ordinary limestone arises from the presence of the small amount of Silicate and phosphate of lime.

No. 171, rock from Sherburns, Keene. The green matter which this contains is Sahlite, one of the silicious minerals. It is composed mostly of the silicate of lime and magnesia.

No. 174, Mihill's, Keene. This is a magnetic ore contained in coarsely crystalized primary limestone. The proportions are as follows:

Magnetic iron ore	31,04
Cole, spar or limestone	68,96

It is not sufficiently rich in magnetic iron ore to make it valuable. *

J. H. Sailsbury.

*I apprehend Pro. Salisbury may not have taken into consideration the remarkable softness and maliability of this ore, nor the high value of the spar as a flux.

Here is the Effect of less than One Dozen Boxes. Certificate of a Gentleman well known.

I do feel greatful for what "Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge" has done for me, and heartily wish all that are afflicted knew, as I do, its worth.

Almost every man in Whitehall knows that I have been so afflicted that for almost a year I could not speak aloud; with a distressing cough, pain in the side, loins and shoulders; and the opinion of the physicians was that for me there was a step only to the grave.

I commenced the use of the Lozenge in September last, soon after Mr. Renne introduced the article at our place, and I have gained my voice! and am congratulated daily by the business men on my returning health, which I attribute, under a good Providence, to the above Pitch Lozenge.

THE

Knickerboker Magazine.

EDITED BY LOUIS GAYLORD CLARK.

THE number for January, 1853, will be the first of the Forty-First Volume of the Knickerboker Magazine.

Since the price of subscription has been reduced from five to three dollars a year, the circulation of the Knickerboker has been increased nearly four to one. In many places ten are sold where there were but one before, and through the year it has been steadily increasing. It is now offered as cheap as any of the magazines, all things considered. Instead of making new and prodigious promises we submit a few extracts from notices of late numbers, which might extend to a number of pages.

'Those familiar with the Editor's monthly 'Gossip with his Readers,' have doubtless with ourselves, admired the perennial source of its pleasant wit and joyousness. In this number 'The Gossip' holds on its way like some fair rivulet glancing and dancing in the sunshine of a May morning. We used to wonder how Mr Clark held out, expecting he must certainly 'snow brown' in the coming number; but this number gives no sign of exhaustion.'—National Intelligencer, Washington.

Plesant, genial, delightful 'Old Knick.' Thy name is a suggestion of all things delectable; the sight of thy modest, fresh cover, a balm to spiritual sore eyes: a glance within thee, best antidote for the blues. Thou hast give to kindly humor, to piquant delineation, and to side-splitting fun, a local habitation,' without which they might go wandering over the domain of letters, calling now and then where a friendly door opened to them, but refusing to be comforted for the loss of their old dear home.'—Courier, Burlington, Vt.

The Fudge Papers, by Ik Marvil, Author, of the Reveries of a Bachelor, Dream Life, &c. &c., The Sequel to St. Ledger, or the threads of Life, by Richard B. Kimball, Esq.; and Meister Karl's Sketch-book, by Charles G. Leland, Esq., will be continued regularly, unless interrupted by the absence or illness of the authors.

Rev. F. W. Shelton, Author of Letters from up the River, etc., will be a regular contributor.

Fitz-Greene Halleck has engaged to furnish poetical contributions from time to time.

The best talent in the country will be enlisted, and no expense or effort spared, to make the Knickerboker more than ever deserving of the first position among our original American Magazines.

TERMS.—Three Dollars a year, strictly in advance—there will be no deviation from this condition; Two copies for $5 00; Five copies, and upwards, $2 00 each Booksellers and Postmasters are requested to act as Agents.—Those who will undertake to procure subscribers will receive favorable terms Specimen numbers will be sent gratis on application, post-paid.

INDUCEMENTS FOR CLUBBING.—The Knickerbocker and Harper's, Graham's or Godey's Magazine will be sent one year for five dollars; the Knickerbocker and Home Journal, or any other of the two dollar weekly papers published in New-York Philadelphia or Boston, for four dollars a year.

REDUCTION OF POSTAGE.—The Postage on the Knickerbocker, when prepaid quarterly in advance, will be only two cents per number. It may be paid by the Subscriber or the Publisher.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Taboo's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up flat-furrow, bar-furrow, self-sharpening side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Geddes and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Fan Mills and Grain Crades—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Hatchelder's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots,

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are no widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—Low, price, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

AGRICULTURAL & HORTICULTURAL TOOLS AND IMPLEMENTS.

a great variety and extensive assortment, such as Hoes, Shovels, Spades Rakes Manure and Hay Forks, Scythes Snaths, Cattle Ties, Draft Halter and Trace Chains, Garden Syringes, Pruning Saws, Pruning and Budding Knives, Garden Shear and Twig Cutters, Grindstones, Patent Grindstone fixtures, rollers, hand, or rolls, &c., &c.

Grain, Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.—We are prepared to furnish Herds Grass. Red Top. Lucerne. White Dutch, Southern, Western and Northern Clover seed Beet, Turnip, Onion and Carrot Seed, at Wholesale and Retail at the lowest market prices.

We have by far the largest and most complete assortment of Agricultural Implements Machines. Field and Garden Seeds to be found in the State, which we offer at our new and spacious Ware-Rooms to Farmers and Dealers on terms the most liberal. We are also Commission Merchants and Who esale and Retail Dealers in heavy and shelf

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be consultually and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver-street ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L's remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, fo[illegible]ce that the Full

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or confinement from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throat and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender glin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood, Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5 000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in healing these diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion

YOUNG MEN.

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND ITS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All this deceive will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of his ease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Persons who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietors of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for,

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Bride's Treasure, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 6 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—sealed free to any part of the world

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address, All communications destroyed or returned

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students admitted: nor single persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

SHERIFF SALE.

BY Virtue of an Execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to me directed and delivered against the goods and chattels, real estate and chattels real of Joseph Weed and Almerin Smith, I have seized and taken all that tract or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga, and Essex county, bounded as follows:

All that piece and parcel of land lying and being in said town of Ticonderoga, being the westerly part of a lot of land formerly leased by Samuel Deal to Jonathan Drury, and known on a map of said land as lot No. 51, beginning at a maple stake standing in the east line of a lot of land lately conveyed to the said Almerin Smith, by the said Thomas Wheeler, thence running south eighty two degrees east, forty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty degrees thirty minutes east, eighty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty two degrees west, forty rods to the stake and stones, thence south eight degrees thirty minutes west, eighty rods to the place of beginning. Containing within said bounds twenty acres. Excepting from off the said lot two acres, conveyed by Samuel Deal to the Congregational Meeting House, and Society of Ticonderoga, and one half acre to the Corporation of St. Paul's Church, also in said town.

Also, all that piece parcel or tract of land situate, lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga aforesaid, and bounded as follows:

Beginning at a stake standing in the north east corner of a lot of land formerly owned by James Jones, and conveyed by him to the said Smith, and now in his possession; thence running south eighty degrees east, twenty-eight chains and sixty-three links to a stake; thence south eight degrees and forty-five minutes west, nineteen chains 70 links to a stake standing in the north line of Edward McCaughin's land, thence north eighty degrees west, 28 chains and 63 links to a stake, thence in a straight line to the place of beginning. Containing 56 acres and one-third of an acre be the same or less or less.

Also all that certain other lot adjoining being a part of the Holcomb and Jones farms, bounded on the south and west by the highway leading from Ticonderoga to Crown Point on the east by lands formerly owned by Wm. Stewart now McCaughin and on the north by the highway leading past John Ledwitch's farm and residence and on the south by said McCaughin's land.

Also, all that certain farm in Ticonderoga, aforesaid, known as the Lake farm containing about 350 acres, being lot No. one and two in the McIntosh Patent, in the possession of Charles F. Hammond and Allen Penfield, and about 75 acres adjoining part of lot No. in same patent now in possession of Geo. D. Clark

Also, all that certain other lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as part of the James Jones farm, sold and conveyed by Almerin Smith, to Alva Bennett in the year of lands belonging to Francis Arthur Esq., being also the south west corner of the William Canfield farm, thence along the southerly line of said Canfield's land, south 80 degrees east, 5 chains and 8 links to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to Ticonderoga village, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 31 chains and 25 links to a stake then north 86 degrees west, 25 chains to a stake standing in a ditch or drain and being also in the easterly line of said Arthur's land, thence along the same north 10 3-4 degrees east, 26 chains and 76 links to the place of beginning, containing 40 acres of land.

Legal.

Also, all that certain lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, commonly called the Holcomb lot now in possession of Almerin J. & Charles H. Bennett, and sold and conveyed by the said Almerin Smith to them in the year 1847, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning in the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Upper Falls in Ticonderoga, being the north east corner of Sylvanus Bennett's farm, thence along the north line of said Bennett's farm north 80 deg. west. 32 chains and 14 links to a stake in the east line of Gustavus N. Wicker's land, thence along the same and along part of the east line of Francis Arthur's land, north 10 3-4 deg. east, 14 chains and 85 links to a stake standing in a ditch or drain, thence south 86 deg. east, 25 chains to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Lower Falls of Ticonderoga, thence along the same south 30 degrees east. 10 chains and 80 links to the centre of the first above mentioned highway, thence southerly along the same 9 chains to the place of beginning containing 48 acres and 71-100 of an acre of land.

Also, a certain other lot in Ticonderoga aforesaid, now in possession of Jeremiah O'Brien, bounded on the south by the road leading past John Ledwitch's land and residence, on the east by said Ledwitch's lands, on the north by lands of Alexander McCambridge and on the west by lands of Wm. A. G. Arthur containing fifty acres or thereabouts.

Also a certain other lot piece or parcel of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid lying and being on the south and west side of the highway leading from the Lower Falls to the street so called or Crown Point between the former dwelling house of the said Almorin Smith and burnt a few years since, and the present dwelling house of Edward McCaughin, being the same lot sold by the said Smith to the said McCaughin in 1847, and now owned by him, containing by estimation about 14 acres, being originally part of lands belonging to Stephen and Silas Sayro.

Also, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Schroon, Co. and State aforesaid on the west side of Lake George and comprehended within the bounds of a tract of land granted by Letters patent under the great seal of the state of N. Y., to James Caldwell, Robert McClellen, and Robert Cochran and is more particularly known and distinguished by being lot No. one hundred and forty seven of the division of said tract bounded as follows, viz:

Beginning at the southwest corner of lot No, one hundred and forty four being a stake No. 144, 145, 146, 147, and runs thence along No. 146 south 25 chains to lot No. 148, thence along the same east 40 chains to lot No. 143, thence along the same north 25 chains to lot No. 144, thence along the same west 40 chains to the place of beginning, containing one hundred acres of land, be the same more or less. The courses are as the magnetic needle pointed at Lake George in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen. Which said several lots, lands and real estate I shall expose for sale at Public Vendue at the Hotel kept by S. Woodard at the Lower Falls in Ticonderoga on the 26th day of July next at ten o'clock in the forenoon. Dated June 5, 1852.

THE WONDER OF THE WORLD.

DEVINES' COMPOUND

PITCH LOZENGE,

A sure and pleasant Remedy for Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and if lungs enough are left to sustain life, A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, safe for the Infant or the Invalid, in any stage of weakness.

"The statements that consumption cannot be cured, has destroyed more lives than the disease itself.—(Dr. Warren

Read the following, which to a candid mind places this "Great Remedy," like Cæsar's wife "above suspicion."

TO THE PUBLIC!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Lee, Mass., are acquainted with Mr. Devines, the proprietor and Manufacturer of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge and from what we know of it ourselves and have learned from others of its beneficial effects, in cases where it has been used, give it as our opinion that it is a valuable remedy in diseases for which it is recommended and is worthy of public confidence. A. G. Hulburt, Leonard Church, F. G. Taylor, Wm. Taylor, E. A. Bliss, S. A. Hulburt, Josephus Crafts, T. P. Eldridge.

If any individual is to be pitied, and needs sympathy, it is the consumptive—always expecting to get well and yet the painful evidence of decay almost "makes the inner soul shrink with the outer flesh"

"Some bloom as roses bloom, and live as roses live, A single morning space!"

While others, in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HERE IS HOPE! Mr. Wm. Devines, the originator and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges alone, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk, and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN.

THE NORTHERN

New York Mutual

INSURANCE COMPANY,

Plattsburgh, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Capital, 100,000.

THIS Company is organized under the General Insurance Law of the State of New York, with a sound, reliable capital, and offers the following superior inducements:

1. The safer kinds of property are separated entirely from the more hazardous; affording the advantages of two distinct companies, with the expense of but one.
2. The first class, or Farmer's Department, consists of Farm-houses, Farm buildings and their contents and detatched dwellings and their contents in villages, when unexposed by more hazardous buildings,
3. The second class or Merchant's Department, consists of exposing dwellings, stores, merchandize and property not deemed specially hazardous.
4. Each class pays its own losses and thus securing equal justice and proportional rates to both.
5. Not more than $3,000 of the first class, or more than $2,000 of the second class, will be taken in one risk, nor any number of risks so contiguous as probably to subject the Company to a loss of over $3,000 at any one fire; thereby saving it from heavy and ruinous losses.
6. In taking surveys of property, the agent will be the agent of the company, and the company be responsible for the correctness of all surveys made by its agents.
7. Any one insured, may at any time surrender his policy and withdraw from the company by paying his proportion of the losses and expense up to the date of such surrender.
8. Applications will take effect at noon of the day on which they are made (unless a different day is directed by the applicant,) thus relieving the party from anxiety and suspense.
9. The company no have two-thirds clause, but will pay all loss and damage not exceeding the amount insured.
10. In case of difference of opinion in settlement of losses, the company will submit the same to arbitration in the county where the loss occurs, the claimant choosing one, the company one, and the two arbitrators another.
11. Each person insured in the company becomes a member and will be entitled to a participation of the profits, if any surplus should accrue, not required for the payment of losses.
12. This company will be responsible for losses by fire caused by lightning.
13. This company will take no risks in cities.

The Directors return their acknowledgments to the public for ther readiness in aiding the organization of this company, and will endeavor to make it a safe and reliable institution, affording protection from the ravages of fire, at reasonable rates, and with certainty of payment in case of loss.

CARRIER'S

ADDRESS

PATRONS

OF THE

Essex County Republican,

JANUARY 1, 1853.

Hark! 'twas the chime, of the last fleeting hour
That robs fifty two of its scepter and power,
And o'er the green mountain so gorgeous and free
Comes dancing along, the young prince '53—
But hold youthful Monarch and we will portray
The deeds of thy brother, now passing away;
What wonderful changes and sights mark his reign,
Few crosses, few losses, but large stores of gain;
Presto, see the gold that thy good ships they bore
From the Ophir of old, to thine own happy shore
And what Israel's fam'd King took three years to obtain
Thou hast done in three months and can do it again.

Thou hast seen men with ease converse with ease other
The matron and daughter, the maiden and lover,
Though hundreds on hundreds of miles interveno
With the speed of the lightning the answer is seen.
What a wonder of wonders thy project will be
To guide the train'd fluid beneath the dark sea,
Then from York's busy town 'twill not be pedantic
To exchange a good morrow across the Atlantic.

And thy Railways and Cars have so numerous become
That its far cheaper traveling than staying at home,
We can breakfast at Plattsburgh, take lunch on the way,
And sup at New York e'er the close of the day.

See yon Crystal Palace in embryo yet
Its equal when finished will never be met;
May all nations bring thee their tributes of worth
And thus may sweet friendship obtain a new birth.

But what mean those tokens of sorrow around,
The flags at half mast, and the bells doleful sound?
Ah! the mighty have fallen, a Webster and Clay,
Have finished their work and from earth pass'd away.
No more shall their voice in our councils be heard
No more shall their wisdom and tact be revered,
But their memory shall live in the hearts of us all
Till the Archangel's Trumpet shall sound the last call.

But the earth still revolves and time speeds along
Nor heeds the demise of the mighty and strong,
So now we proceed as we purpos'd to do
In recounting the deeds of old '52.

And first on the list of political wonders
Comes our sister France with her national blunders;
Don't think her false Louis with all his finance
Can rule without bloodshed o'er unlucky France?
Where "Bony" has failed 'tis futile and vain
For any crown'd head o'er Frenchmen to reign.
So Napoleon beware for we tell you now flat
That your days will be few and your end like Marat

Of our turmoil with Cuba, not enough has transpired
To furnish a theme for a pen so inspired,
Therefore we conclude to forego the trouble
And trust that the rumor will end like a bubble.

We thought '52 that e'er thy demise
A sight of poor Franklin would have gladden'd our eyes,
But peace to his manes and as time rolls its round
May his Lady find comfort where only 'tis found.

Now glance we at China and rejoice to behold
The gates of her cities to strangers unfold—
It strengthens our faith in that era of peace
When the lamb shall recline with the fierce King of beasts.

Then on board some steamer we'll cross the wide sea
Till we hail with delight the blest land of the free,
To Columbia we haste our deeds to recount—
Bend we low with reverence at Vernon's fair mount.—
Then ho! for the White House to see the whigs scatter
On the arrival of "King and that other feller."
But stay—we're forestalling.—this is not for thee—
This miraculous event is for gay fifty three.
But thou hast had part in a work most sublime
Which will live through all ages co-equal with time,
That great demonstration their great love to prove
Which our nation is rearing to virtue above,
To the sire of Columbia their beacon shall rise
With its base on the earth and its cone in the skies.
To perfect the work see the nations advance
From the Isle's of the South to the fair Isle of France,
From the cold frozen north to the far Torid Zone
Each link of our union will furnish a stone.

But the fair Swedish Songster that guilded thy reign
No more shall we list to her warbling again—
She has chosen her mate and snugly they rest in,
The fair sunny land of the Kingdom of Dresden.
But Kate Hayes, and Sontag and the black Swan are here,
Our ennuie to banish, our languor to cheer,
And, Lola, the Coquette—but of her I am mum—
It would have been better had she staid at home.

Now in snug winter garb we'll boldly dash forth
And leave the warm South for the health giving North,
For the news boy is just and will serve all quite handy,
In high life, or low, from the man to the dandy;
But, ah, '52, thou art failing quite fast
And the fire of thine eye is extinguished at last—
Hark, hark! the town clock is now tolling thy knell,
So dear friend '52, we bid thee, Farewell.
Now silent and still—nor ought can'st thou see
Of the greetings that welcome the fair '53,
But thou must not murmur for all we decery.
Like thee once have flourish'd to wither and die.

And now fifty three as thou art a stranger
We tender our aid to secure thee from danger
And while we are roaming our village at ease
Just list to the music that comes on the breeze:
'Tis the clangor of forges, of nail works, and hammers,
Such as fable to issue, from vulcan's dark chambers.
And there is our Depot for lightning dispatches
O'er which yon Bold Eagle so potently watches;
His position is twofold as you read neath his sails:
He heralds the Kingslands grand depot for nails.
Me thinks that for industry, knowledge and skill
You'll meet with few places that vie with Keeseville,

For proof see our Churches, enough for a row
In spite of hard times like magic did grow,
The inference, that's drawn, is always for good
To those who thus build for the worship of God.
With our schools none can vie, or at most supersede;
There are taught all the branches that most mortals need
And to soften the classic's and make them less cold
Can have music more sweet than had Orpheus of old.
Our mechanics—to see them would make your heart glad,
If they but had protection, they'd go it like mad.
But we'll hope for the better, as oft says our printer,
Perhaps they will show us some mercy this winter.
Let us visit our merchants and see them display
Their excellent wares, in their elegant way,
Too tempting for those whose pockets declare.
There are lodgings "to let" but no tenants are there.
There's Kingsland & Baber with politeness and skill
Sell at wholesale or retail, almost what you will,
There's Boynton & Smith, and Garfield are fam'd,
With Spencer & Adgate, and Mathews & Ames.

Go to Hasbrouck's for classics, to Jones's for pies
And to Reynolds & Tufts for every thing nice,
There's Jenkins and Prescott are first rate for time
And for Jewelry and plate, they have some that's prime.
For a new coat or pants you've no need to pas on
For Cowlbeck, or Morris, will rig you in fashion.
Should they have none on hand, go to Cardwell's and there
You'll see such a pile, as will cause you to stare.
Should your toee or your heels be getting in view
Friend Scribner will hide them in boots neat and new,
Or shoes, so will Tabor or Adams, for all
Have workmen to answer each customers call,
And there's the fair Milliners must not be forgot
But we can't name them here, there are such a lot,
Only call when you will for ought in their line—
Their Alamode fits are almost divine.
And all our mechanics our smiths and our nailors,
Our Bloomers, and Rollers, our Barbers, and Tailors,
Our Doctors, and Lawyers, and Cabinet makers,
Our Tin men, and Saddlers, our Millers, and Bakers,
Our Printer is great as you all must confess
By the neatness and style of this lengthy address.
And now, should you fancy a portrait so nice
Just call in at Tousley's, 'tis done in a trice,
And so life like 'twill seem in both form and feature
You'll own that the artist has out done dame nature.

But the sky hath its clouds and the Rose hath its thorns,
The sea hath its tempest's its whirlwinds and storms;
All things are imperfect in lifes changing tide
To teach us our folly and humble our pride.
So with all the endowments our village can claim,
Its worth and its beauty, its wisdom and fame,
Her value is marr'd by one spot on her sun:
Tis the vending and using that mad demon rum.
Perhaps we ought not to have told thee this truth
But forborne in pity to thy feelings, fair youth,
Nay, if we had tried this sin to disguise
Too soon thou had'st witnessed the fact with thine eyes.

Among the absurdities of this present hour
Is a partial belief in the spiritual power,
To answer dark questions by rapping or knocking,
Such a foolish idea is both simple and shocking.
We see men and women with eyes staring wide
Conversing with friends who have long ago died
With but mental requests and each answer will be
One rap tells you "no," and for "yes" you'll have three.
And, clairvoyants sleep their fortunes to make
For they wont earn their living, when in health and awake.
Poor ignorant Salemites, thy doings were queer
But we marvel no longer when such things we hear.

There is one mortal evil in every society
Which rhymes in well here and adds to variety:
'Tis the framing of scandal which some should confess—
There's but little here now and we hope there'll be less.
Just take a survey of our village around
And see the industry and skill that abound:
This tells us the reason why gossips can't thrive
For they please more when going, than when they arrive.

Now turn we from the gloom of the last pictures drawn
As to the soft splendor that heralds the dawn,
How soon will each visage be deck'd with a smile
As we now change the subject our woes to beguile.
The Ladies! and now let Circassia stand by—
'Tis in vain with our fam'd northern beauties to vie
And for intellect here their chief ornament is found
For they cannot be beat take the universe round.
Such wives, and such daughters, O, had we a heart
That would bear subdividing so each have a part
It would be in our prayers for their happiness here
And a home in the skies still undim'd by a tear.

But the subject must change, to keep pace with the weather
For they seem to go hard, unless both go together,
Though the storm king is shrieking our dwellings around
We hope that no place for admission is found.

Just say '53, why you make such a rout,
Both you and your brothers when your terms are most out,
With frowns on you faces to freeze us you strive
You'll make us dislike you "sure as you're alive."
Why not like your sisters May, June, and July
Come with smiles and caresses and with love in your eye?
'Tis because we are destined our part to perform
To purify Earth from Contagion and harm,
And bind dire disease in the frost spirits chain,
So you see that stern winter is not made in vain.
When I deck the tired earth in my mantle of white
She sinks to repose with most welcome delight
And I bare my own breast to the juvenile throng
Who on hand sleds or sleighs glide swiftly along.
Apropos, should you need one that will suit to a hair,
Just call at N. Kingsland's you'll sure find it there.

One very grand item until now we had miss'd
Which should have been noticed as first on our list,
'Tis the far fam'd Ausable that place of renown
For the weary or hungry from Country or town.
Where Reynolds presides we ever shall find
Refreshments first rate for body or mind.
You'll scarce find a place throughout the wide north
That can vie with this Hotel for neatness and worth,
And for Ames's fine stages ever found at their station
You'll not find their equal throughout all creation,
With Cook or himself his sure leaders to guide
By night or by day you in safety may ride.

Having taken a view of most things of note
In this our own ville, we now will devote
A few leisure hours for a country excursion
To add to our knowledge as well as diversion.

There's Clintonville, New Sweden and Ausable Forks,
Where Dickinson trades and Roger's nail works,
There are deer in those forests and trout in their streams—
That will cause us more sport than is thought of in dreams.

Now leaving the "Country" for Plattsburgh's gay town,—
We'll view the cantonment—that place of renown
Where many a soldier rests far from his home
For he fell among strangers and by such was entomb'd.
See yon Locomotive come proudly along
With a train of fine cars to their depot so strong.

Heigho! there's a steamer—the bold Saranac—
On board for Port Kent—a short voyage to take.
There's a plan for a new line of steamers next spring
And which if perfected will be a fine thing,
Unless they sell out as they've been wont to do
And suffer the old line to eat up the new.
Thus having completed our trip out of town,
We come back to Keeseville that place of renown,
Where soon fifty-three I must leave you alone,
To act for yourself as your brothers have done.
A word to our patrons is all that remains,
And then our address will have compass'd its aims.
'Tis lengthy we know, but there's so much to say
Of a country like ours that there's no other way.
We can say and with truth like Sheba of old
Of Israel's King—the one-half was not told,
But one thing I surely must say e'er we part,
For it cannot be left as it lies near my heart,
'Tis this: now remember at this opening of winter,
Pay all debts if you can but neglect not the printer,
And then you can walk without fear or dismay
Nor meet with a dry invitation to pay—
But we've said enough and too much we fear.
So kind friends one and all, A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Keeseville, January 1st, 1853.

DOW JR.'S FAITH.—I believe that kicking against custom, and spitting in the face of fashion, are futile and foolish endeavors. Both may need correction, but they must and will have their own way.

I believe that if the devil be the father of all liars, he has a plaguy large family to look after, and that it is rapidly increasing.

I believe girls are like kittens—gently smooth them the right way, they rub and purr most affectionately; but give them the contrary brush, and their backs are up in a most disdainful manner. They like to be kissed, but sham a delicacy about the operation.

I would not answer for the conduct of the ablest man in the world, if I knew that he was so conceited of his own abilities, as to be above advide.

Miscellany.

[From the National Intelligencer.]

Private Letter to Gen. Pierce.

DOWNINGVILLE, STATE OF MAINE,
Nov. 16, 1852.

Dear Gineral: I guess you little thought when we was having that scratch in Mexico, that it was going to make a President of you. But time and chance happens to all men, and why should'nt luck come to you as well as any body else? I did'nt expect, when I lost dear old Gineral Jackson, that I should ever have a chance to write to another Gineral in the President's chair.—President Polk was only Colonel, and somehow it did'nt seem half so natural for me to say "dear Colonel," as it did to say "dear Gineral," I had been so used to it in old Hickory's time. And I can't help thinking that nobody lower than Gineral ever ought to be President. But that's neither here nor there; you are Preident and have got to go ahead and make the best of it. And as I had a good deal of experience in Gineral Jackson's time, and you are kind of young in Government matters, I felt it my duty to write to you and try to encourage you along, for I don't expect you know what darksome and trying times there is in going through the Presidency. The first thing that is necessary is to keep a stiff upper lip. It was keepin a stiff upper lip that carried Gineral Jackson through a great many hard trials. There was so many hands to the bellows that blowed you into the Presidency that I'm afraid when they come to settle up accounts there'll be a squabble that will make more trouble for you than ever old Hickory had. When the old line Dimocrats, North and South, and the Hunkers, and the Barnburners, and the Freesoilers, and the States Rights Dimocrats, and the Union Whigs, and the Secessionists, and the Carolina Nullifirs, and the Old Fogies and Young America, all get you by the throat, and every one crying out "pay me that thou owest," I almost tremble to think what will become of you, unless you have a good deal of the true old Hickory grit. You must put on the stiffest kind of upper lip and take the responsibility, or it'll be gone goose with you. You had better shake them off, and advertise that you won't pay no debts of their contracting.

You must remember that the Whig party is dead and buried, so you haven't got to fight again that no more. And you must remember, too, that the Whig party has left considerable valuable property, and that the Dimocratic party is natural heir to it. So you can take up the Bank, and the Tariff, and Internal Improvements, and such kind of notions, and use'em quietly for the benefit of the great Dimocratic party, and say nothin about it. Only you must take to fix'em over into Dimocratic Bank, and Dimocratic Tariff, and Dimocratic Internal Improvements, and then nobody won't say a word again em.

Well, now, about the Cabinet. That is a ticklish kind of business, and I feel uneasy to know how you'll get along with it.—Uncle Joshua thinks you'd better take one out of each party, that went for you, and give'em all a fair chance. But you can't have but seven members in the Cabinet, unless you conclude to have a Kitchen Cabinet too, and I don't suppose you'll do that, for they ain't apt to work very well. Old Hickory himself got rather tired of his before 'twas over. So if you havn't but seven members, there won't be enough to give one to each party, and them that's left to suck their fingers will always be biting their thumbs at you. And then you know the rule is, that the Cabinet should always be a unit. But I'm afraid if you get one in from each party, it will be a very quarelsome kind of a unit, and you will have no comfort of your life. And then if you was to give the whole to one or two parties, you would of course have about a dozen parties up in your arms again you, and squalls and hurricanes blowing from all quarters. Jest see how it would work. If you should pick out a sound, wise Old Fogy, to take hold with you to help cook matters up, the Democratic Review would be down upon you like a thousand of bricks, and blackguard you like a pickpocket for trying to hobble along on the "mere beaten horse," And then if you was to look 'tother way, and set Young America to the helm, the Old Fogies would be afraid some of the madcaps would run us on the breakers and send us all to the bottom. In that case pretty likely there'd be a greater unit out of the Cabinet than there was in it, and there would be danger of mutiny all round. So there you are. You seem to be in a snarl, any way you can fix it.

Now if you will take my advice, Gineral, you will shet your eyes, and stop your ears, and take the respousibility, and when they come pulling and hauling around you, jest say to the Dimocrats, and the Old Fogies, and Young America, and the Hunkers, and the Barnburners, and the Freesoilers, and the Abolitionists, and the Secessionists, and the Nullifiers, that you don't know none of 'em and that you ain't their President, but that you are the President of these thirty-one United States, and you mean "to go for the whole or none." That is I mean the whole of these United States that is fairly ours, and not the whole of creation, for this last business is one that needs to be looked at and thought on a considerable before going into it. I know some folks say there is to be a great deal of annexin done during your administration. Now I don't know what your notions is on this subject, but if annexin is to be the main business of your term, the next question is, what is the best way to do it? Uncle Joshua always says, in nine cases out of ten it costs more to rob an orchard than it would to buy the apples. If that's true, may be that fillibusterin wouldn't be the cheapest way to annex. But some folks have a great fancy for fillibusterin, let it cost what 'twill. If you should think of branching out strong that way, I don't suppose you could do better than to take Kossuth for Secretary of State. For he is Governor of Hungary, you know, and could hitch that fine country right on to our team without the trouble of any fillibusterin about it. It could be done so quick the Russian Bear wouldn't hardly have time to growl. And then a small fillibusterin army could bring in Cuba, and Canada, and Mexico and the rest, as fast as we should know what to do with 'em.

Good by, Gineral; go ahead and keep a stiff upper lip, and anything I can do for you jest let me know. So I remain your true friend.

MAJOR JACK DOWNING.

Neither discouraged, nor disheartened.

The Hon. JOHN BELL, United States Senator from Tennessee, wrote a letter recently, in reply to an invitation to partake of a public dinner, tendered to him by a large number of the Whigs of New Orleans, in which there are the following cheering paragraphs:

I will venture the prediction, that the Whigs of Tennessee, nothing daunted by the recent and signal defeat of the National Whig party, will continue to be loyal to their party and their principles, and be as ready and able to renew the contest whenever and as long as a hope may be indulged of engrafting permanently upon the practice of the Government the principles and policy they believe to be essential to an enduring prosperity, of our republican system in a healthful and vigorous existence.

We occasionally hear the opinion advanced, that the Whig party, for reasons which need not be recited, can no longer maintain an effective organization. I regard this as a mistaken apprehension.—The cardinal principles and policy of the Whig party will endure every vicissitude of fortune; and as organization in some form, and under some denomination, Whig, Conservative, or what not—some mode of securing a concentrated effort, by which those principles can be brought to bear, and to have a salutary influence upon, if not the control of public affairs, must and will be maintained.

And I may state, with some confidence, that the Whigs of every section, who adhere to and cherish original Whig principles—the old landmarks—with but few exceptions have an abiding faith that while the South will be true to itself, the North, the whole Whig North, will come to perceive that to be true to themselves and to the country, they must be true to the South and to all the obligations of the Constitution, and thus not only preserve, but impart increased energy to the Whig party. In speaking of original Whig principles, I have no reference to the establishment of the United States Bank, or the prosecution of a system of internal Improvements by the construction of roads or canals in the States. These are not principles—they are only modes or forms of effecting great objects, which may be dispensed with or modified as experience may dictate. Principles lie deeper, and embrace multitudes of modes and forms.

The discomfiture of the Whig party in the late election, effected chiefly by the activity of the new, or what is denominated the progressive Democracy, was so unexpectedly complete and overwhelming, as to lead some to depend and to doubt whether the Whigs will ever be able to make head against them. It is true that the present prospects are far otherwise than flattering, either to the Whig party or the country.

The Whigs, now reduced to the subordinate position of mere breakmen upon the whirling train, may combine with the better portion of those in higher command, and by their united skill prevent the cars from running together off the track.—Whatever may betide the Whigs in future, I trust they will never wage a factious opposition, or fail to do full justice and yield a cordial support to those measures of the incoming administration which may appear to be dictated by wise and patriotic views.

While party divisions must and will ever exist in the coutry, yet every patriotic citizen, to whatever party he may attach himself, most ardently desires that the only difference between them shall come to be the difference of honest conviction on questions of public duty and policy—the only strife, which shall most advance the true interests and welfare of the country. Upon the whole, I see no sufficient cause of despondency, either on the part of the Whigs or the country, in the recnt popular demonstration in favor of the progressive Democracy.

DEATH OF THE COUNTESS OF RUMFORD.—A special dispatch to the Boston Journal, announces the death of Miss Sarah Thompson, Countess Rumford, at Concord N. H., on the 2d inst., aged about 70. This lady was the daughter of the celebrated Count Rumford, and was well known in Boston, and in Woburn in Massachusetts. Count Rumford, it will be remembered, was an American by birth, named Benjamin Thompson. He went to England and afterwards to Bavaria, in each of which countries, he held high official possitions. The King of Bavaria loaded him with honors and made him a Count. The name selected was Rumford, the old name of Concord where he was born. An annuity was settled on him, half of which we believe, continued on his daughter, during her life.—He was a liberal benefactor of Harvard College and the American Academy

"Beware of Dogs!"

Such was the notice in staring capitals posted a few days since all over our village followed by the indiscriminate slaughter of every dog found abroad.

The occasion calls for a few remarks:

There have been many arguments pro and con on the dreadful disease their bite produces—it is enough to prove that multitudes of men, women and children have died in consequence of having been bitten by dogs. What does it matter whether they were the victims of bodily disease or mental irritation?

One of our citizens prominent in the recent war on the animals says the life of the most humble human being is of more value than all the dogs in the world, and that 'twere better, perhaps, that all the dogs now alive should be massacred, to prevent hydrophobia, than that a human being should be bitten. Let us investigate this matter a little. In the first place, we cannot credit the sweeping assertion, that multitudes of men, women and children have died in consequence of being bitten by dogs. Even the newspapers do not sum up the number above a dozen per annum, from which you may safely deduct two thirds. Now four men, women and children, are not a "multitude." Of these four, we may set down two as problematical—having died, it is true, in, but not of, hydrophobia—states of mind and body wide as the poles asunder. He who drinks two bottles of pure spirits every day generally dies in a state of hydrophobia—for he abhorred water, and knew instinctively the jug containing that insipid element. But he never dies at all of hydrophobia, there being evidence to prove that for twenty years he had drank nothing but brandy.—Suppose we are driven to confess the other two, why one of them was an old woman of eighty, who was dying as fast as she could hobble, at the very time she tho't herself bitten—and the other a nine year old brat, in whooping-cough and measles, who had there not been such a quadruped as a dog created, would have worried itself to death before evening, so lamentably had its education been neglected, and so dangerous an accomplishment is an impish temper.—The twelve cases for the year of that most horrible disease, hydrophobia, have, we flatter ourselves, been satisfactorily disposed of—eight of the alleged deceased being at this moment engaged at various handicrafts, on low wages indeed, but still such as enable the industrious to live—two having died of drinking—one of extreme old age, and one of a complication of complaints incident to childhood. Where now the "multitude" of men, women, and children, who have died in consequence of being bitten by mad dogs?

Gentle reader—a mad dog is a bugbear: we have walked a distance equal to many times the diameter and circumfrence of this our habitable globe, along all roads, public and private, in Metropolitan Streets and suburban paths, and at all seasons of the revolving year and day; but never, as we paddled the hoof along, met we nor were overtaken by greyhound, mastiff, or cur, in a state of hydrophobia.

Whence then this eternal war on Pointers, Spaniels, Setters, Stag Hounds, Grey Hounds, and New Foundlands, Bull Dogs and Terriers, the infinite generation, of mongrels and crosses? this indiscriminate war of extermination? the question is put to the most dogmatical and puppyish cynic.

We will not undertake the defence of dogs, of their many amiable qualities, any further than to show, that they are often of immense value to the human species, in various ways, but particularly in furnishing food for us poor mortals. We know that "sassages" have been unusually abundant and cheap, since this unholy warfare commenced, and some of our professional fellow citizens can testify to the immense value of just one dog, in supplying their tables with an abundant stock of that most savory of all meats—Venison. The writer of this has been credibly informed, that this same dog went a distance of over forty miles from this village in pursuit of his favorite game, and his owners had to go in pursuit of him, not the deer, but the dog—and were absent only three days, obtained the dog, but no venison, the latter they will be seen to have a year hence.

Now will any man put one hand on the Bible and the other on his heart, and take a solemn oath, that he would rather have every dog exterminated, including the one mentioned above, than that one poor mortal should be bitten? we trust not.

Mr. Calhoun on Cuba.

"The New York Journal of commerce thus produces Mr. Calhoun's in reference to the question of Cuba, as directly communicated to the editor of that paper:

"The great statesman who so long and so ably represented South Carolina in the councils of the nation, once observed to us, in a conversation relating to this Island, that 'Cuba was forbidden fruit to the United States.' He spoke at great length, and with much earnestness, of the dangers from the attempt to absorb it, and declared that our policy with respect to it should be limited to prevent its being acquired by any of the strong governments of the world; that it was in the hands of a weak power, which held it as a sort of stakeholder between the nations of the earth; that through our commerce we were quietly but effectually enjoying all that we could claim or expect of its industry; that its government was improving through our example: that life and property were becoming entirely safe there, and that acquisition of the island through conquest, containing as it did a foreign and also a slave population, would be fraught with great dangers to us, and must be prevented."

"Mere Prattle, Without Practice."
Shakespeare.

Mr. Editor:—I noticed in your paper of last week an article, headed. "Truth is mighty, and will prevail," and purporting to be an exposition of the principles of the homeopathic doctrine. This I purpose answering. Permit me however to preface this, by remarking that, in thus noticing it, I am well aware, I have nothing to gain; that I am but gratifying their desire for publicity by throwing this stone into their nests; well do I know the joy with which these sterile hybrids welcome every cuff of criticism, regarding it as a gratuitous advertisement. They grow turgid with delight, upon every eminence of exposure which enables them to climb up where they can be seen. Little as they know of anything, they understand the hydrostatic paradox of controversy: that it raises the meanest disputant to a seeming level with his antagonist: that the calibre of a pipe-stem is as good as that of a water spout, when two columns are balanced, against each other. All this I know but too well, but, on some occasions, it is justifiable, and perhaps useful, to show up some extreme and insupportable extravagance, as an example, not for the sake of those who live by it, or those whom they live upon, but for that of a few sensible persons, who are disturbed by their clamor, and wish to know its meaning. Let us see then how far these "Fundamental principles" are conformable to medical philosophy, as every intelligent practitioner of medicine understands it. Are these principles, as they are called, true principles, according to the legitimate and philosopical meaning, which ought to be attatched to this word? Do they consist of phenomena and relationships of an appreciable and positive character, ascertained by absolute and extensive observations? Let us see.

How is it with the first, fundamental proposition, upon which all the others are made to depend, and from which they flow? What is the material of which this foundation consists? Is this proposition, fact, or, fancy? Is this foundation wrought from the adamant of positive phenomena, or is it woven with the tissue of dreams? It is impossible that there can be but one answer to these questions, unless the answer comes from a dreamer. There is no evidence, whatever, of the existence even—to say nothing of its alleged properties and relations—of this independent, dynamical force, presiding over, and moving the organic structure. The existence of this force is an assumption, just as perfectly and entirely gratuitous, as it is possible to imagine. It is more so than that of the strictum and laxum of the Methodists. or the spasm of Cullen. The whole doctrine of this dynamical force is nothing but physiological transcendentalism. Life is the sum of the organization, and its actions. This is all we know—this is all we can know about it. What the vital force is—how it is connected with the organic structure—the nature of the bond between them—the intimate manner in which each is acted upon by its modifiers—is utterly unknown to us; and the probability is, that this ignorance will never be removed. This element in the doctrine of Hahnneman is no new thing; it is very much like the archeus of Van Helmont, and other old systematists, and the evidence of its existence is of just the same character.

In regard to the second proposition, it is not enough to say that it is gratuitous; it is worse than this. It is in direct and unqualified opposition to the most extensive and positive observation. It is not true, that every modification of the condition of the living structure and powers has its invariable and characteristic external sign, or manifestation, through which the modification is made known. Certainly, it is by their signs and symptoms, that internal diseases are revealed to the physician. But daily observation shows, that there is no uniform and invariable relationship between the extent and intensity of disease, and its external signs. The prominency, the number, and the combination of these, depend upon many circumstances beside the disease with which they are connected. Has no change taken place in the condition of the living structure, or its actions—in the relations, susceptibilities, and tendencies, of one or both—during the latent period of the contagion of small-pox, yellow fever, or hydrophobia? Is this independent vital force of homeopathy—admitting it to be present with all its assumed properties—in no way affected by this poison of terrific energy, that has crept into the system? It is impossible to suppose, that such can be the case; but the modification, whatever it may be, gives no outward and intelligible sign of its existence. Neither is it true as is alleged by homeopathy, in connection with this subject, that the internal changes in the organs themselves, are wholly beyond our means of investigation. To a very great extent, they are entirely within our means of scrutiny, and they constitute one of the most valuable and positive elements in our knowledge of disease.

The third proposition, asserting the existence of certain properties and susceptibilities of the dynamic vital force, is like the first, in regard to the separate and independent existence of the force itself, wholly gratuitous. The fourth principle is, that the remedial action of all substances can be ascertained only by the effects which they produce upon the dynamic power in its undisturbed state. My limits are such as to preclude my entering into an argument to demonstrate, that all theraputical laws consists in ascertained relationships between morbid conditions, on the one hand, and their modifiers, on the other: suffice it to say that this is the fact, capable of clear and succinct proof. More than this it is unnecessary to say with respect to this principle of Hahnneman.

I will not comment in detail upon the several other propositions. The priciples which they profess to set forth are not principles, but assumptions. There is no proof that disease can be removed in only two ways, or in only one of two ways. There is no proof, that remedies act on the assumed vital force, by producing a modification like that in which the disease consists. We [illegible] knowledge whatever of the intimabilities of the body. All these elements of the doctrine before us, so gravely set forth as facts, are anything but facts. They are all "Such stuff as dreams are made of," and nothing else. The whole system of Hahnemann, from begining to end—in its principles, and in its details—is one of unadulterated and arrogant dogmatism, resting exclusively upon a priori reasoning, or, in other words, upon mere speculation.

But it will probably be said,—the doctrine is sustained by facts; its soundness and correctness are corroborated and demonstrated by the results of observation,—it professes to rest upon experience, as well as upon reason, and the nature of things.—The experience upon which Hahnemann founds his doctrine, and by which his followers profess to sustain it is, if possible, more fallacious, and less philosophical, than the doctrine itself. I only insist, that, this experience shall be tried by the same test as is applied to all medical experience.—Hahnemann's chief work is full of bold and unqualified assertions upon this subject. I admit; but the evidence of the experience itself is totally wanting. In the entire history of medical doctrines, there is not one in regard to which the proof of their soundness derived from experience is so entirely defective and unsatisfactory as it is here. Her the most striking fact running through the whole exposition, or Organon, of Hahnemann, is the absolute nullity of all conclusive observation. He says, with no qualification, whatever;—"The Allopathic method never really cures;"—"The homeopathic method never fails to cure;" but when we look for any evidence of the truth either of one allegation, or the other, it is no where to be found. There is no evidence, in the first place, at all conclusive, of the power of the remedies themselves, to produce, in the healthy body, the effects that are so confidently attributed to them. The author of the system lays down a general law, which he wishes us to regard as invariable and absolute—for instance, that similar diseases must, and do cure each other,—the stronger disease always curing the weaker,—and then gives such facts as the following to provo it. Small pox is often complicated with ophthalmia and dysentery,—they are similar diseases. Two other cases of ophthalmia cured by innoculation; and the occurrence of small-pox cured a dysentery in a case reported by Wendt; and so on It is upon such experience, that homeopathy,—apart from its a priori doctrine,—urges its claims to our consideration. The efficacy and advantages of its mode of treating disease, can be established in only one way. Let it produce its comparable facts,—its cases of disease clearly distinguished, and separated from other diseases, both in their nosological diagnosis and in their varieties,—and let it produce these in large numbers,—not in groups of twos and threes, or of twenties and fifties even, but of hundreds;—let it conform to there vigorous and indisputable conditions; let it follow the methods laid down for all medical doctrines; and then, and not till then, will true philosophy give heed to its word. These things it has not yet done; it cites in its favor only the loose tongue of common report; the same tongue that proclaims, with like confidence, and on precisely similar proof, the superiority of Swain's Panacea, Brandreth's Pills, and lobelia.—The smallness of the homeopathic doses; it's apparently improbable and exclusive mode of treatment, constitutes no philosophical and valid objection to the system itself. I do not deny its claims, on these grounds, or for any such reasons. I doubt and deny them,—so far I mean as the results of its practice are concerned;—solely because they are not established by competent observation. Whenever they can be so established; whenever in conformity to the conditions of all conclusive and satisfactory experience in therapeutics, it is shown, that homeopathic treatment cures diseases with more readiness, ease and certainty, than other treatment does, I will at once embrace and believe it. Its fate as a doctrine is certain and inevitable. Of this, the voices all medical history are here to inform us. Like all its forerunners, and like all its concievable successors, constructed on false principles; consisting not of positive facts and their relationships, clearly ascertained, and suitably classified; but of gratuitous assumptions of facts and relationships, altogether imaginary, one only possible doom awaits it. After living its short day of sunshine in the popular and professional favor, it will follow in the footsteps of its departed predecessors—Methodism, Chemicalism, humoralism, Cullenism, Rushism, Cookism, Thomsonianism, and all the hosts of other so called rational isms; "It shall be borne to that same ancient vault, Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie;"—there to rest, as in the spirit and inspiration of a better philosophy, we may not undevoutly hope, in a sleep that shall know no awakening; its final departure rendered somewhat more respectable perhaps, altho' hardly accelerated, by this somewnat lengthy notice bestowed upon it by your most humble servant.

Gen. Cass, Fillbustering, Cuba, France,

(Written for the Republican.)

"Old Foggy," Says in a speech in Congress, he approves of the course of President Fillmore relating to Cuba, and thanks God the honor of the Nation is not in the keeping of George Law. He complains of being called a "fillibuster" by the Wasington Republic and Journal of Commerce, and so thought of by many others—"rats leave a sinking ship." His whole conduct in the Kossuth humbug and resolution that the Emperor of Russia had violated the law of Nations in interfering with Hungary, and to discontinue diplomatic relations with Austria, and on the Oregon question, saying in the Senate war with England was inevitable has made Filibusters by thousands, and now he says he is misapprehended. Very well, he calls himself "Old Foggy," and I thank our destiny that he has not the Honor of this nation in his keeping. He says he cannot believe France intends to establish a government in any part of Mexico; if she does he is for war with all the power of this nation to prevent it.

The fact is he is a compound of Demagougism, Filibusterism, Crepusculence, and Crassitude. He has been reading Mr. opinions, but in the matter of France, he is radical and dangerous. In the abstract, France manifestly has the right to establish a government on this continent if the people of the locality wish it and we have no right to object unless it is dangerous to our peace and future safety. If so we may take counsel from our fears, declare war, and take the consequences. Who fears France in these United States while we are in the right? If she establish colonies out of our bounds, let her do so, I would not allow her or any other nation to take the Island of Cuba for prudential and not propaganda reasons.

Our true policy manifestly is a strict observance of all the compromises of the constitution among ourselves, a sleepless vigilance on the part of our nation to do nothing in relation to other nations but what is clearly right. and submit to nothing from them that is wroog, and "a masterly inactivity" in relation to our young neighbors or colonies of other nations round about us. This course will cause them to drop into our arms faster than we can find cradles to rock them or teachers to educate them in the science of free, representative government. Z.

The Holidays.

It is customary for Editors "about these days" to moralize upon the various duties of life, moral, political, religious, and to indulge in such good wishes, and kind admonitions as the season naturally suggests. Our heart is full—too full—and to say now all we would like to—to express our thanks for life, health, and business, to remember all our good friends, to relate all our trials, and troubles on the one hand, and all our blessings on the other, to unfold our projects for the future, in short to "balance the bonks" up to this date, and "turn over a new leaf" for the coming year, would occupy too much space. We shall however endeavor to keep these thoughts in view, and to give them from time to time during the year. These things to the winds for the present then. Now is the time to be merry, and happy. All—old and young—parents and children should make the most of these days.

Their observance in making ourselves, our families, and our neighbors happy, does the heart good, and leaves a little corner always open to the charities and sympathies of life, which do so much towards elevating us as men and christians. We are then sincerely in favor of the fervent observance of these days, and hope our readers have all done so. If they have we know they have been merry and happy, and that they are better and wiser.

The Rail Road.

A friend writing us from North Hudson wishes to know why we do not advocate the route through that portion of the country as it is, he says, "shorter and more feasible."

We go in for a road. Our personal preferences are for the Lake route—but give us a road and through Keeseville. Our columns are open, and we know of no one more capable, or responsible than our friend. Only assure us and our Keeseville friends of a road by the Lake shore, or North Hudson, and we are there. There ought to be a Rail Road through Essex Co. Here is a section of country cut off from the rest of the world half the year for the want of one. The particular route is of less consequence than the road. We understand that a survey, and estimate of the Schroon route is to be immediately undertaken.—The intimation is also given out that the Albany folks are in earnest about the matter, a fact which has been seriously doubted. If they are let them manifest it.

Christmas,

Was throughly enjoyed by our people.—The children most certainly have been generally visited by old Santa Claus for all our stores with their bountiful supplies were put under contribution to contribute the necessary presents. The young folks too hung "bags" on the outer doors, which were duly filled. The streets presented a lively scene during the day, clouded, we regret to say, however, by one or two broils.

This day appears to have been generally observed, also, more than it has been recently. The press, particularly, has universally given long, and interesting articles on the history of the day, and its observances, and customs in olden time. It is well.

Gold from Vermont.—A fried in Bridgewater Vt., has sent us a specimen of quartz rock, containing a few particles of gold, such as has been recently discovered in that town, by Mr. Kennedy. He informs us that its extent has not yet been fully tested. Several dollars worth had been taken out, and some of it has been worked into ornaments by the jewelers, who pronounce it to be of rare purity. It occurs in small scales in quartz rocks, in association with black zinc, blende and lead ore. This is a similar association, to [illegible] found in this State, an[illegible] one. ☞Another year has nearly gone. 1852 with its silvery locks, is about to pass from our view forever; but its deeds and actions will long keep it fresh in our memory.—We dislike to part with it for the reason that it has become familiar to our ears, and its presence has become entwined with many dear objects that draws it closer to our bosom. 1852, thou hast been a year of stirring incident and remarkable event. Thou hast witnessed in thy infancy, the outpourings of an exile, whose enthusiastic fervor and resistless eloquenee made our nation wave and surge like the mighty ocean, in recounting the wrongs and pleading the cause of his bleeding country—a country whose spirit is crushed but not broken, and who will yet, in spite of the great difficulties that environ her, assert her liberty and take her place among the nations of the earth.

Thou hast witnessed the demise of two of the greatest statesmen of our nation—the going out forever of two of the mightiest intellects that grace the pages of our civil history. The firey and intrepid Clay whose clarion voice so long rung through the length and breadth of the land, upholding the laws and the Constitution and perpetuating and sustaining universal freedom, is stilled in death; no more will his trumpet voice and matchless, impassioned eloquence be heard; no more will the burning words of patriotism, on which a nation have with transport hung, emenate from those inspired lips; they are hermetically sealed, and his bones now lie mingling with the soil of his own loved Kentucky.

And the profound Webster, the colossus of the New World, has been called to render his final account. We cannot realize yet that this great mind has ceased its efforts forever—whose sublime eloquence has made the nation's mighty heart throb with the wildest emotion and filled the school boys soul with a patriotic fire akin to that which supported the martyrs of '76. Few can find words to give expression to the unspeakable eloquenee of his gifted mind, All have bowed with homage and acknowledged its power.

"I have seen
The dumb throng to see him, and the blind
To hear him speak: the matrons flung their gloves.
Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchiefs.
Upon him as he passed: the nobles bended
As to Jove's statue; and the commons made
A shower and thunder, with their caps and shouts:
I never saw the like."

It does not seem possible that this transcendent intellect, that stood in the breach and defended the Constitution, when assailed by a fanatical hand, who thought more of self agrandizement, than of this glorious confederation, is stilled forever. But true it is, the remains of the Nation's idol whose name is written in uneffacable letters upon the heart of every true American citizen, now lie entombed at Marshfield, where the wind, as it comes sighing over the white capped waves of the billowy deep, will sing in pathetic symphony, his requium.

How many a family circle has been bereft of some bright link, since thy face was first beheld among us,—how many a fond mother's heart has been darkened by the loss of her first born. O, who can paint the agony of soul, the deep, crushing anguish that fills the heart of that young mother, when the gloom of the tomb hides from her view the object of her devoted love, that first stirred the deep, latent affection of a mother's heart. O, none.—Time cannot efface it,—a high, holy and heavenly faith can only chasten it. Its little cherub face and innocent smile, that was a sovereign balm for all the ills and annoyances that surrounded her, will not soon be forgotten. Its merry prattle will still ring like distant music in her ears.

How few of the numerous resolves that were made one year ago to day have been rigidly kept. How different would the time be spent could we live it over again. How many improvements would we seek to make. How much more sparingly would the leisure moments be meeted out for frivolous amusement. Time is a precious jewel that cannot be too highly prized.

"The greatest schemes that human wit can forge,
Or bold ambition dares to put in practice,
Depend upon our husbanding a moment."

Let us see that our resolves for the New Year are more zealously observed, and our leisure moments more studiously improved. Let us strive to improve ourselves in all the relations of life; let us strive to be of some service to those that are suffering about us, and not wrap ourselves up in the cloak of false dignity, and stifle and wither the noblest attributes of our nature.

"Desire not to live long but to live well;
How long we live, not years, but actions tell."

As this is a day of general sport and feasting remember in your bounty the poor. Many there are that a trifle from your bounteous store would enable them to pass a merry day, and to participate, in a measure, in the felicity that you enjoy. Bestow with a bountiful hand, and let the sunshine of hope illumine the dark chambers of the suffering heart. "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the lord."

It is an old custom,
More honor'd in the observance than the breach,"
or the "latch string" to be out, for every who feels disposed to go in and regale themselves on the good cheer spread before them on New Year's day, and is at this time very generally observed in many places. Let the greatest cardinal virtue, Charity, predominate in every bosom to day.

"True charity, a plant divinely nurse'd
Fed by the love, from which it rose at first,
Thrives ag'st hope, and in the rudest scene,
Storms but enliven its unfading green;
Exuberant is the shadow it supplies,
Its fruit on earth, its growth above the skies." †

We have also, just completed, a very nice Gothic Church, erected through the benevolence of some of our prominent citizens, for the Episcopal Society. It is a very neat, unpretending structure, and reflects great credit upon the individuals through whose instrumentality it was built. Divine service will be held on alternate Sabbath's, here and in Essex. †

About our Communications.

The article on "Old Foggy" is from an important source in the democratic party, and entitled to consideration

The article in reply to "B" of last week opens rather sharp, but the writer chooses to have it so, as he thinks "B" cast some unnecessary reflections on the profession.—Otherwise, it is not only an able, but an agreeable article as was that of "B." We commend these articles to those who wish to learn some of the leading principles of the different theories of medicine. These will no doubt be followed by others.

P. S. We have already rec'd from "L" another interesting article in reply to "B." which will appear next week.

Webster and Hayne's Speeches.—Redding & Co., Boston, have just issued a neat edition of Webster's great speech, together with the speech of Gen. Hayne. If our readers will bear in mind that in Mr. Webster's published works Gen. Hayne's Speech is omitted, and that one great and marked character of Webster's Speech was the skillful manner in which he turned all his enemy's defences, even unto the "ghost of the murdered coalition," they will see the importance of forthwith securing a copy, in order that they may preserve, side by side, and compare for themselves these master pieces of forensic eloquence. 84 pages, price 25 cents. It can be sent by mail.

The last of Earth."—The funeral of Dr. Justin E. Stevens, Surgeon attached to the 9th regiment in the Mexican war, was attended by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, and the Fusileers, to which companies he belonged.

Doctor Stevens, mentioned above was a schoolmate of ours under Capt. Patridge. On the breaking out of the Mexican war, being a democrat, he received a commission as Surgeon, and was attached to the New England Regt. commanded by the lamented Col. Ransom. The Doctor was with the Regt. from its departure to its return, sharing in all its honors, and dangers. He himself was wounded, and contracted disease, which thus terminates a useful career. He sought glory—and won it with his life!

Important Verdict in an Advertising Case.—In a suit in the supreme Court of New York, before Judge Oakley, brought by the proprietors of the Courier & Enquirer against Henry Ibbotson for $300 for advertising, the jury rendered a verdict for plaintiff of—$318,89, the amount claimed with interest. It appears that when the advertising was taken to the Courier office there was some misunderstanding respecing the number of insertions. The defence set up was chiefly that Mr. Ibbotson's ordors in respect to the advertisement were not carried out. However he took the Courier & Enquirer daily, and, as was presumed by the Court, saw the advertisement in question, and should have notified the editor to alter or discontinue it. The Court ruled that he should have given this notice, and not have expected to enjoy the benefit of the advertisement without paying for it.—Albany

☞A Buffalo paper contains the following original verses, a sentimental parod on which, under the name of "Coming thr the Rye," has been extensively sung by Mrs. Goldsmith and others:—

If a buggy meet a buggy
Coming down the street,
Is it right to run together
When these buggies meet.
Every driver has his failings.
They're but men at last,
But comin' up or going down,
Should they drive so fast?
When a buggy meets a buggy
Should these buggies race?
And run over civil footmen
In a public place?
Let the driver speed like lightning,
Lashing neck and flank,
But let them mind that human flesh
Aint covered o'er with plank!

☞We would call particular attention to the Insurance advertisements of Jas. B Diskinson Esq., of Ausable Forks, who has established an extensive agency at that place. He is agent for nearly all the reliable companies in successful operation; both Fire, Health and life. We commend Mr. Dickinson to the public with heartfelt pleasure, in the full assurance that he will, give the most unqualified satisfaction.

Mr. Dickinson, is a thorough, capable and efficient business man, and acknowledged as unshrinking and energetic in the prosecution of any business which commands his attention and enlists his energies.

In this vicinity, where Mr. Dickinson is so well and favorably known, this notice is entirely gratuitous, but still we cannot refrain from thus giving publicity to our appreciation of his business tact and industry. †

Complimentary.—The Northern Gazette in noticing the Keeseville Academy and the Catalogue got out by us pays a deserved compliment to our foreman, Mr John Nash. Mr. Nash is a first rate Mechanic as those can testify who have had work done at this office. We can imagine with what an ill grace the Editor of the Gazette would speak well of this office, yet the testimonial to Mr Nash meets our hearty approval as he is worthy of the most flattering notices.

DICKENS' HOUSEHOLD WORDS.

HAS been re-published in this country by the subscribers, who have for sale complete sets of the work. The character of Mr. Dickens as a writes is so well and favorably known, that the most we can say of his weekly is, that it fully sustains his reputation. Whole books have already been formed of extracts from the work but though the compilers of these have copied extensively, they have failed in their endeavors to transfer every article of general interest,—they could not do it without copying the whole. No general reader of our most popular magazines can have failed to notice the frequent and lengthy "contributors" from "Household Words," provided the publisher had been honest enough to have given the proper credits. We would call attention to the following extract from a speech of Sir James Stephen at the Free Library at Manchester, as well as a few selections from a host of complimentary notices from the Press in this country:

* * * But the merit of the writing of the third [Dickens school.] is of yet a higher nature; it is, that amid all the riot of their fancy, their humor and their whim while they teach us to laugh most heartily at each other's follies, they still have in common the one unbroken aim—to teach us all to assist, to pity, to forgive, and to love one another—and hence it is not without reason that the latest of these works which I have the good fortune to read. has taken to itself that fitting title of "House hold Words."

"Abounding in pleasant and useful reading and admirable family book."—New York Observer.

"A very entertaining and instructive for the domestic circle.—Reading Gazette and Democrat.

"It abounds with useful and interesting information"—National Democrat.

"The best of all popular matter-of-fact periodicals."—Literary World.

RAIL ROAD

Through Keeseville!!

The Cars will stop 30 minutes in front of Cardwell's Celebrated

CLOTHING STORE,

in order to give the passengers an opportunity to clothe themselves up in prop r and appropriate costume, adapted to their destination whether North or South.

Almost every thing for the outer man in the shape of

Ready-Made Clothing,

may be found at this store.

Just returned from the South, and having on hand a very heavy stock of WINTER GOODS at this advanced stage of the season, great bargains are being made. All of my garments are cut and made up in the latest styles. Owing to the great increase in my trade, I have thought it a saving of time and labor to adopt the ONE PRICE SYSTEM which gives perfect satisfaction to all.

N. B. Wholesale Buyers will find it to their advantage to call and examine as they can buy just as cheap as at the South, and save their time, fare and freight.

Sales exclusively for cash.

ADIRONDAC HOTEL BUILDING.

G. A. CARDWELL.

Keeseville, January 1, 1853.

A SERIOUS APPEAL TO THE THINKING.

"Among all the contrivances of men to protect the family ... Life Insurance ... [illegible]

"Let any husband, father, son, ask himself — If I was to die to-night, would these wives and children be safe from the pangs of want? Would these children have a comfortable home, and the means of education? Would this whole be independent of the cold charities of the world? Would my aged and feeble parents be provided for? Would my estate pay my debts? Would there be no sacrifice of property by forced sales of an administrator to meet the demands of creditors—sales made when the market tends downward, and fair prices cannot be realized? How few can answer these questions to their satisfaction! They fear to ask them, and cherish the belief that they have a long lease on life. This is both foolish and cowardly. The brave man looks the danger in the face, that he may grapple with it; the wise man, that he may study its nature and palliate its threatenings. The means of palliation are at hand, of easy access to all—it is Life insurance.

"Young men just starting in business, whose chief capital is their energy and integrity, should insure their lives to the amount of half their liabilities. Such an act of disinterested honesty, when known to their creditors, would justly increase their confidence in them. It would show that they did not wish to leave their best friends exposed to any avoidable contingency; and the annual premium might fairly be regarded as the tribute which an upright heart pays at the shrine of justice."

CHARTER OAK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL, 200,000.

THIS Company will issue Policies on the Joint Stock principle, and upon the mutual plan, thus combining the benefits of both systems at the option of the insured; and make contracts upon any and all conditions pertaining to or connected with the risks of whatever name or nature.

Policies will be issued at the lowest rates of premium that can be adopted and afford requisite security to the insured and perpetuity to the institution.

On the surrender of the whole Policy, the holder will receive its equitable value in cash.

This Company continues to effect insurance on the lives of persons going to California, at fair rates of premium; and to grant permits for traveling, sea, and foreign residence at equitable rates.

Policies are held for the benefit of a married woman, on the life of her husband, or any other person, will ensure to her separate use, independently of her husband and of the claims of his creditors.

COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE.

HARTFORD, 29th JAN. 1851.

BE IT KNOWN, That in conformity with the act incorporating the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company, I hereby certify, that the Capital Stock amounting to Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($200,000,) has all been paid in or invested in securities of undoubted character, which have been passed and approved by their Board of Directors, and by me, each note having my official indorsement thereon.

This Certificate of the validity of the transaction is due alike to the State, the Company, and the public, who are interested. The Legislature having thrown extraordinary and unusual guards around this Charter, for the protection alike of the Company and the public: the strength, ability and well invested capital of the institution, are, in my opinion, unsurpassed by any Life Insurance Company in this State, or Union.

AGRICULTURAL WARE-HOUSE AND SEED STORE.

DAVEY & ALLEN,

No. 8, COLLEGE STREET, BURLINGTON, Vt.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self-sharpening side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Gedde's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour.

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batchelder's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction,

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—L. wrence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

AGRICULTURAL & HORTICULTURAL TOOLS AND IMPLEMENTS,

a great variety and extensive assortment, such as Hoes, Shovels, Spades, Rakes, Manure and Hay Forks, Scythes Snaths, Cattle Ties, Draft Halter and Trace Chains, Garden Syringes, Pruning Saws, Pruning and Budding Knives, Garden Shears and Twig Cutters, Grindstones, Patent Grindstone fixtures, rollers, barn door rolls, &c., &c.

Grain, Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.—We are prepared to furnish Herds Grass, Red Top, Lucerne, White Dutch, Southern, Western and Northern Clover Seed, Beet, Turnip, Onion and Carrot Seed, at Wholesale and Retail at the lowest market prices.

We have by far the largest and most complete assortment of Agricultural Implements, Machines, Field and Garden Seeds to be found in the State, which we offer at our new and spacious Ware-Rooms to Farmers and Dealers on terms the most liberal. We are also Commission Merchants and Wholesale and Retail Dealers in heavy and shelf

HARDWARE,

Saddlery, Axles, Springs, Mechanic's Tools, House Trimmings and Furnishing Goods, Cutlery, Cross Cut, Mill and Circular Saws, Paints, Oils, Bird Cages, etc., etc., etc.

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No. 5 Beaver street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time, change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres, Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had their ... would ... FRIEND ... OF THE SICK. Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND 'TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with sure and pleasant remedies—and has within doubt cured within the past five years more than 3,000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for

DR. VICHOP'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted. No boys or precocious students allowed: Aimed persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care, will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

SHERIFF SALE.

BY Virtue of an Execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to me directed and delivered against the goods and chattels, real estate and chattels real of Joseph Weed and Almerin Smith, I have seized and taken all that tract or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga, and Essex county, bounded as follows:

All that piece and parcel of land lying and being in said town of Ticonderoga, being the westerly part of a lot of land formerly leased by Samuel Deal to Jonathan Drury, and known on a map of said land as lot No. 51, beginning at a maple stake standing in the east line of a lot of land lately conveyed to the said Almerin Smith, by the said Thomas Wheeler, thence running south eighty two degrees east, forty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty degrees thirty minutes east, eighty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty two degrees west, forty rods to the stake and stones, thence south eight degrees thirty minutes west, eighty rods to the place of beginning. Containing within said bounds twenty acres. Excepting from off the said lot two acres, conveyed by Samuel Deal to the Congregational Meeting House, and Society of Ticonderoga, and one half acre to the Corporation of St. Paul's Church, also in said town.

Also, all that piece parcel or tract of land situate, lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga aforesaid, and bounded as follows:

Beginning at a stake standing in the north east corner of a lot of land formerly owned by James Jones, and conveyed by him to the said Smith, and now in his possession; thence running south eighty degrees east, twenty-eight chains and sixty-three links to a stake; thence south eight degrees and forty-five minutes west, nineteen chains 70 links to a stake standing in the north line of Edward McCaughin's land, thence north eighty degrees west, 28 chains and 63 links to a stake, thence in a straight line to the place of beginning. Containing 56 acres and one-third of an acre be the same or less or less.

Also all that certain other lot adjoining being a part of the Holcomb and Jones farms, bounded on the south and west by the high way leading from Ticonderoga to Crown Point on the east by lands formerly owned by Wm. Stewart now McCaughin and on the north by the highway leading past John Ledwitch's farm and residence and on the south by said McCaughin's land.

Also, all that certain farm in Ticonderoga, aforesaid, known as the Lake farm containing about 350 acres, being lot No. one and two in the McIntosh Patent, in the possession of Charles F. Hammond and Allen Penfield, and about 75 acres adjoining part of lot No. in same patent now in possession of Geo. D. Clark

Also, all that certain other lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as part of the James Jones farm, sold and conveyed by Almerin Smith, to Alva Bennett in the year 1847. and now in the possession of said Bennett bounded and described as follows: beginning at a stake and stones in the easterly line of lands belonging to Francis Arthur Esq., being also the south west corner of the William Canfield farm, thence along the southerly line of said Canfield's land, south 80 degrees east, 5 chains and 8 links to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to Ticonderoga village, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 31 chains and 25 links to a stake then north 86 degrees west, 25 chains to a stake standing in a ditch or drain and being also in the easterly line of said Arthur's land, thence along the same north 10 3-4 degrees east, 26 chains and 76 links to the place of beginning, containing 40 acres of land.

Also, all that certain lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, commonly called the Holcomb lot now in possession of Almerin J. & Charles H. Bennett, and sold and conveyed by the said Almerin Smith to them in the year 1847, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning in the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Upper Falls in Ticonderoga, being the north east corner of Sylvanus Bennett's farm, thence along the north line of said Bennett's farm north 80 deg. west, 32 chains and 14 links to a stake in the east line of Gustavus N. Wicker's land, thence along the same and along part of the east line of Francis Arthur's land, north 10 3-4 deg. east, 14 chains and 85 links to a stake standing in a ditch or drain, thence south 86 deg. east, 25 chains to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Lower Falls of Ticonderoga, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 10 chains and 80 links to the centre of the first above mentioned highway, thence southerly along the same 9 chains to the place of beginning containing 48 acres and 71-100 of an acre of land.

Also, a certain other lot in Ticonderoga aforesaid, now in possession of Jeremiah O'Brien, bounded on the south by the road leading past John Ledwitch's land and residence, on the east by said Ledwitch's lands, on the north by lands of Alexander McCambridge, and on the west by lands of Wm. A. G. Arthur containing fifty acres or thereabouts.

Also a certain other lot piece or parcel of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid lying and being on the south and west side of the highway leading from the Lower Falls to the street so called or Crown Point between the former dwelling house of the said Almerin Smith and burnt a few years since, and the present dwelling house of Edward McCaughin, being the same lot sold by the said Smith to the said McCaughin in 1847, and now owned by him, containing by estimation about 14 acres, being originally part of lands belonging to Stephen and Silas Sayre.

Also, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Schroon, Co. and State aforesaid on the west side of Lake George and comprehended with in the bounds of a tract of land granted by Letters patent under the great seal of the state of N. Y., to James Caldwell, Robert Mc Clellen, and Robert Cochran and is more particularly known and distinguished by being lot No. one hundred and forty seven of the division of said tract bounded as follows, viz:

Beginning at the southwest corner of lot No. one hundred and forty four being a stake No. 144, 145, 146, 147, and runs thence along No. 146 south 25 chains to lot No. 148, thence along the same east 40 chains to lot No. 143, thence alon the same north 25 chains to lot No. 144, thence along the same west 40 chains to the place of beginning, containing one hundred acres of land, be the same more or less. THE WONDER OF THE WORLD.

DEVINES' COMPOUND

PITCH LOZENGE,

A sure and pleasant Remedy for Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whopping Cough, Asthma, and if lungs enough are left to sustain life, A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, safe for the Infant or the Invalid, in any stage of weakness.

"The statements that consumption cannot be cured, has destroyed more lives than the disease itself.—[Dr. Warren

Read the following, which is a candid mind places this "Great Remedy," like Cæsar's wife "above suspicion."

TO THE PUBLIC!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Lee, Mass., are acquainted with Mr. Devines, the proprietor and Manufacturer of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge and from what we know of it ourselves and have learned from others of its beneficial effects, in cases where it has been used, give it as our opinion that it is a valuable remedy in diseases for which it is recommended and is worthy of public confidence. A. G. Hulburt, Leonard Church, F. G. Taylor, Wm. Taylor, E. A. Bliss, S. A. Hulburt, Josephus Crafts, T. P. Eldridge.

If any individual is to be pitied, and needs sympathy, it is the consumptive—always expecting to get well, and yet the painful evidence of decay almost "makes the inner soul shrink with the outer flesh"

"Some bloom as roses bloom, and live as roses live,
A single morning space!"

While others, in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HERE IS HOPE! Mr. Wm. Devines, the originator and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges alone, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk, and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN.

Communications.

Parturiunt Montes——
Hor—Ars Poet——
Chesterfield—January 1853.

COL. TARBELL,

In looking over your paper of the 25th inst., my attention was directed to an article with the caption "Truth is mighty and will prevail." B's assertion is true and I do not call in question his sincerity when he applies it to the foundation of his remarks, viz Homœpat y. "Distinguished men will disagree," so I dissent in toto from his reasonings. Progress—improvement, has indeed been the cry of not only Alopathists, but Homœpathists—and the former have fallen in the rear, when the stentorian voices of the latter have been raised ten to one—and why? forsooth because "all cry and little wool" as the old adage runs proves true. This is an age of humbuggery—and he who can humbug the most is regarded as possessing the greatest amount of cerebral matter—throwing aside however the idea of common sense effusion. Credulity with its magic wand, and Homœpathy with its ridiculous absurdity and charlatanical nonsense will ere long show itself in its proper light to its followers.

"An ignis fatuus that bewitches
And leads them into pools and ditches."

The veteran and so call venerable Hahnemann has forestalled human device, by th· promulgation of his shaking doctrine—by the great and good discovery of the law of "similar similibus curantur." The credulous and superstitious constitute a very large portion of the human family, and this is the reason why; the prevalence of various popular delusions, which extends at times like an epidemic disease, hence the popular attachment to Indian Remedies and the like. Since "sin brought death into the world. Look at the tar water of Bishop Berkley, the metallic tractors of Perkins, the animal magnetism of Deleuze and Dupotet, in the past, and at present, at Swains panacea, Brandreth Pills, Moffets Phœnix Bitters, Townsends Sarsaparilla and last, though not least, at the infinite, infinitesimals of Hahnemann, and his followers. Credulity arises from the fact that people are unwilling to be at the pains of examining, and weighing the preponderance of contrary proofs and testimonies, hence the obtuseness of the public mind in regard to the legitimate claims of the Profession, a want of discrimination in recognising the genuine tokens of success, and an absence of veneration for the dictates of experience. B. seems to sneer at the idea of reform, and casts reproach upon the old school doctrines, only however so far as it appertains to reform, acceeding to the tiny pills all the credit.

Has he fortified, with the requisite knowledge compared the anatomy taught forty years ago, with the knowledge of the human structure, as now set forth by the teachers of these days? Has he compared Monroe and Fivfe with Bichat and Crureilheir? Has he ascertained for a truth that Abernethy, Cooper, Dupuytren, Larry, Physic, Post. Hosack, Rush, and a host of other worthies in the medical ranks, have lived in vain; and after all their investigations, and deep research must all their labor go for naught? No. Common sense is opposed to it, and methinks that Homœpathy cant help but blush at the thought, and if Hahnemann was alive he would laugh outright at the attempt made by his followers to hold up his views, and idiotic assertions, at this age of the 19th century. B. has offered us ten conclusions which he has arrived at to prove the doctrine "almost divine." He has aimed at the stars, but has fallen in the mud. If the signs of the times are correct, if coming events cast their shadows before, then Homœpathy will ere long fall into oblivion before the steady and increasing light of honest truth, patient study and inductive philosophy. Homœpathists rests the hope of their favorite theory, upon the establishment of theories which new and accumulating facts are proving to be visionary. Its theories are nothing but ingenious hypothesis which serve no other purpose than to bind together a series of apparent facts, and which, by the observation or discovery of new and conclusive facts are rendered nugatory. And when from such theories are deduced principles and rules for our guidance in the cure of diseases, our individual interests demand that they be reported and scattered. To those who have enriched their minds with the offerings of medical literature, and made observation and experience the foundation of their reasonings and practice in medicine, the infinitesimal therapeutic appliances, their chimeras and prestiges, appear foolish, childlike, and a blind or wilful devotion to visionary hypothesis. Does B really and conscientiously believe in the rules and doctrines, as laid down by Hahnemann? Does he believe he can cure this or that disease with a billionth or decillionth of a grain? that the infinite, very infinite infinitesimals of their dilutions can have the least possible action upon the human economy. If he can see it

"He must have optics I ween
To see what's not to be seen."

Well may we all lift up our hands open our eyes, and exclaim "O tempora—O mores." L.

☞The New York Tribune says there are 8000 hotels, drinking saloons and dram shops in that city, and the amount expended in them is amazing, almost exceeding belief. If the sales average $10 each, which is a very low estimate, the amount will be $80,000 a day, $2,400,000 a month and 28,000,000 a year.

The Taking of Stony Point Fort.

MR EDITOR:—There are many incidents in the history of the past, that will bear relating a thousand and one times. In the forefront of these, are some of the more interesting events of the American Revolution. Several years ago, an old veteran of these trying times gave me an acoount of the storming of Stony Point Fort, which I have thought might not be uninteresting to your readers; especially so, as some incidents connected with it are not found in ordinary published accounts. The story he gave was nearly as follows:—

By the unusual bustle and whispering among the superior officers, it was perceived by the soldiers that some new movement was to be made, but what it might be they could not conjecture. In a few days, an order was given to get in readiness two days provision and be prepared to march at a minutes warning. Just at dusk they were mustered, and without beat of drum and in darkness, they slowly and silently descended from the heights they occupied, and, by a circuitous path, reached a level spot in a densely wooded ravine near the bank of the Hudson. A hollow square was there formed; Washington stepped into the centre of it, and read from a paper as follows:

"1. Stony Point Fort is this night to be taken by surprise.

2. No soldier is permitted to speak a loud word on pain of instant death.

3. No one is allowed to drink a drop of spirits without special permission.

4. Let no one discharge his musket till he has distinct orders to that effect.

5. If any, through fear, choose not to go on this enterprise, let him now step out into this open space, and they shall be permitted to remain here."

It was a terrible undertaking, and three poor fellows so far quailed before it as to come out and thus acknowledge themselves cowards. All were then ordered to rest on their arms till called. The light was now extinguished or concealed, and darkness and silence reigned in their little encampment. Soon after midnight they were mustered, the roll was called, but the three cowards were missing, no one doubting that they had gone to the enemy. A question now arose as to the command, the subordinate officers insisting that Washington should remain there and not expose his valuable life to such imminent danger. He at length reluctantly consented, and the command was given to Gen. Wayne, familarly called "Mad Anthony," on account of his daring impetuosity in an attack. As they approached the fort they perceived, by the unusual number of lights and the movement, that their design had been discovered. The outer sentinel fired and fled to the Fort. The British perceiving them called out, "Come on, my boys, we are ready for you." And on they went scaling at a leap the Abattis, composed of appletrees closely set in the ground with the limbs sharpened. On they went as Mad Anthony alone could lead them, and in a few minutes the fort was theirs. Terrible was the onset, and many precious lives were lost, but the shout of victory was soon heard above the groans of the dying. It was early dawn of day, and far in the distance on a piece of low meadow ground, three persons were seen running at the top of their speed. They were instantly pursued and taken. The reason they gave for deserting the night before, was the disgrace which their apparent cowardice would bring upon them, and the certainty, in their own view, that the Fort could not be taken. They were immediately tried by Court Martial, and sentenced to be hung that morning at nine o'clock, upon the British flag staff.—In ascending the platform, one of them only sixteen years old fainted and fell. In consequence of this and in further consideration of his extreme youth, he was pardoned, But he was immediately discharged, and drummed out of the fort, followed by the hisses and execrations of his former companions. He lived to a grey old age. For many years during my residence in Crown Point, he resided in the south part of Essex County, and was well known to many of your readers. His name for good reasons, I surpress. Let it be forgotten.—But while we execrate his baseness, let us also pity his weakness; remembering that those were times that "tried mens souls."

Fairhaven, Vt., Dec. 27, 1852.

A DUTCHMAN CONSULTING THE RAPPERS.—"Ish dat you, Mrs. Hauntz?" inquired the Dutchman. "Yes, dearest, it is your own wife, who—" "You lie, you ghost," interupted Hauntz, starting from his seat, "mine vrow speak notting but Dutch, and she never said tearest in her life. It was always, 'Hauntz, you thief!' or 'Hauntz, you tirty shkamp!'" And the Dutchman hobbled from the room, well satisfied that the "rapping spirits" were all humbug, and that he was safe from any further communications with his shrewish vrow on this earth.

LOVE.—The brightest part of love is its confidence. It is that perfect, that unhesitating reliance, that interchange of every idea and feeling, that perfect community of the heart's secrets and the mind's thoughts, which binds two beings together more closely, more dearly than the dearest human ties; more than the vow of passion, or the oath of the altar. It is that confidence which did we not deny its sway, would give to earthly love a permanence that we find but very seldom in this world.

A Roman Princess has adapted the stage

MR. EDITOR.

As their seems to be above of contention, among our Allopathic and Homoepathic brethern, let me offer you the following jeu d'esprit from the editor of the N. Y. Independent—Rev. H. W. Beecher—who sets the matter in its true light. O.

Homoepathy.

BY H. W. BEECHER.

"If one listens by turns to the asseverations of the schools, the Botanical, Eclectic, the Hydropathic, (we confess to a small hobby there,) the Homoepathic, Magnetic, and the Alloapathic, and believes in their infallible skill and power, he will be greatleful that sickness is coming to be entirely unnecessary. With such specifics for everything, with such bulwarks of health served by men that never miss in a fair match with disease, sickness must soon be regarded as a great weakness, and death almost a felony. Indeed, a friend even now has a lecture, for which he asks us to secure him an audience, entitled 'Disease is Sin.' Of course, death is overt transgression. But to return.

"We have steadfastly adhered to the old school; probably from our natural conservative bias. Newfangled notions we have always had our opinion of. We have stuck therefore to the good old paths of medicine and refused to remove a landmark—blister, lancet, pill, bolus, lotion, potion, all are objects of respectful reverence.—We have grave moral doubts as to this insidious, mysterious, tasteless Homoeopathy. It seems not unlikely to be part of a general tendency to effeminacy which is creeping in with wealth and refinement. There is a strong aroma of indolence about it. It requires no exertion, no self denial. Taking medicine, once a manly and heroic achievement, has become a mere sugar plum affair.

"Once doctors sat down around a sick man like a fleet of ships about Gibraltar.—They bombarded a disease, front and rear, with balls and blouses; they pierced it, or sacrificed it, or hung upon its course with cataplasm and blister at such a rate, that any man with half an eye could see that one or the other must give out speedily—the disease or the patient!—But now our Homoeopathic Chesterfield regards a disease as a goodnatured intruder, that can be winked and bowed smiled out. Diseases are mere callers ready to stop at the door and leave their card, or to sit five minutes and be off;—a very different set from the old surly, obstinate tenants, who held our bones and organs upon indefinite leases. A sniff, a pellet which it requires an eye of faith to see, a mere medical hint as it were, is enough to do what once ounces, pounds and quarts could scarcely effect. This is jugglery, we fear, or worse. No man on recovery can look back with an applauding conscience upon his own sincere endeavors, as once he could. To sit up in bed, when from hair to heels you are but one prolonged nausea; with swimming eye to descry your nurse approaching with lukewarm senna; to calculate with stomach heaving arithmetic how many gulps will be required; and then with every resource of your being at burning matyrpoint, to thrust the unutterable abomination down, and with even fiercer fight to keep it down—who, as he fell back on his newly beaten up pillow, has not felt that no diseases with one particle of self respect would long stand in company with such hideous medicine? One is proud of his Anglo-Saxon capacity; of his sacrifices and sufferings for health; and when health returns he feels that he has earned it, and paid, by pain and potion, everything farthing which the violated laws health exacted. To get well was evidence that a man was made of the stearnest stuff.

"But, pah! We are ashamed to think how these effeminate doctors, who carry a whole apothecary shop in a pocket-book no bigger than your hand, walk in, put three drops of something into two half tumblers of water, giving you a teaspoonful, utterly tasteless, hour by hour; or put upon your tongue three or four white specks of milk-sugar, and that he calls medicine! Our Anglo-Saxon forefathers would have scorned to get well upon such a dainty practice, and would die like men upon substantial medicine rather than sneak back to life upon such effeminacy.

"To be sure, almost every relative that we have, paternal, fraternal, senoral, but not uxorial, has yielded to the insidious temptation and gone into these bye and forbidden paths. We feel like Abdiel, faithful found among the faithless; and we do not mean soon to desert the friends that have stood by us in so many chills and fevers, so many bilious fevers, and measles, and chicken-pox and influenzas, &c. &c.

"We are daily exorted to apostacy.—Example and cyclopedias of advices are lavished upon our obduracy. Our friends are against us; parisbioners, not a few, are against us. Books have been sent us. Oh, the cures that have been recounted! We are duly impressed from time to time with the fact that our departed neighbor would have been alive now, if he had taken his friend's advice and sent for Homoeopathy, this child had gone down in the car of Allopathy to death's door, but changing drivers the chariot of Homoeopathy brought him back in a jiffy. This friend had a sick headache, took three pills of pulsatilla, and before she could get the bottle corked up again she was entirely cured. We are assured that croup is now nothing, if you only have the right medicine by you. Measles are right down good fun, and teething and convulsions medical diversions fever, that bloody horror of the moment he sees Dr. Hahnemat right down' Indeed, the old is crestfallen, and goes about Jacket, civilized into drunkenness and into a ditch, was from the whileom savages who greeted a midnight village with a war-whoop, and found their way into it by the light of its blazing roofs!

"If one dies under this practice we are assured that 'all men must die when their time comes, in spite of all medicine.' And this seems rational. But if it had been Allopathy, they would have taken us by the button, shook their sad heads, sighed, and ejaculated, 'strange!' as if no excuse could be given for a man who died in the pale of the old school. It was evidently suicide.

"Then, too, there is no harm done, even if there is no good, we are told. Pa and ma are afraid of strong medicine! But these darling little danties, these pills for fairies, you may take any number without danger. Indeed, their power is inversely as their number. Three are better than four, two better than three, one better than two, and none at all better than———but we will not say that.

"But we have observed how much more medicine is taken by many of our kind friends of this school than by us: To be sure, a stout blue pill is a mountain by the side of their Homœopathic dust. But then we only take such once a year. Now medicine so harmless as those dear little phials contain is a very temptation.

'Does the head ache?— a pill. A stitch in the side? a pill. Heavy eyelids, with recurring symptons about the same time every night?—a pill. Is the nose stuffed?—catarrh?—nux vomica. Does the nose run, like a fugitive slave?—lachesis. Is it suddenly arrested and shut up?—aconite. Is one troubled in the face? Deliverance abounds. A hard face, without feeling?—a little quicksilver. Redness in the face, agitation and disposition to crawl?—bella-donna. And so on.—Life with some nervious people becomes an interesting game. Their body is like a forest, pains are the wild beasts, and pellets the means of hunting them, and the patient lies in watch for a pain with as much zeal as a hunter among the reeds for the descent of a flock of ducks. He and she have got something that will do the business.

"In good earnest, we regard medicines with little favor. Our first receipt for sickness is not to get sick; our second reliance is upon a well bred, sensible doctor. We select the doctor; it is his business to select the medicine, and we do not care a pain what it is. To those who ask us, therefore, what school we believe in, we reply: we are firmly pursuaded of Dr. Mitchell!—This is the sum of our present creed."

POWER OF A MOTHER'S NAME.—A writer in The Boston Times describes a visit to the penitentiary at Philadelphia, and gives the following sketch of an interview between Mr. Scatterwood the humane warden of the prison, and a young man who was about to enter on his imprisonment.—Few will read it without deep emotion:—

We passed the ante room again, where we encountered a new comer, who had just reached the prison as we entered. He had been sent up for five years on a charge of embezzlement.

He was attired in the latest style of fashion, and possessed all the nonchalance and careless appearance of a genteel rowdy.—He twirled his watch chain, looking particularly knowing at a couple of young ladies who chanced to be present, and seemed utterly indifferent about himself or the predicament he was placed in. The warden read his commitment, and addressed him with—

'Charles, I am sorry to see thee here.'
'It can't be helped, old fellow.'
'What is thy age, Charles?'
'Twenty-three.,
'A Philadelphian?'
'Well, kinder, and kinder not.'
'Thee has disgraced thyself sadly.'
'Well, I ain't troubled, old stick.'
'Thee looks not like a rogue.'
'Matter of opinion.'
'Thee was well situated?'
'Yes, well enough.'
'In good employ?
'Well, so so.'
'And thee has parrents?'
'Yes.'
'Prehaps thee has a mother, Charles?'

The convict had been standing during this brief dialogue perfectly unconcerned and reckless, until the last interrogatory was put by the warden. Had a thunderbolt struck him, he could not have fallen more suddenly than he did when the name of 'mother' fell on his ear! He sank into a chair—a torrent of tears gushed from his eyes—the very fountains of his heart, seemed to have burst on the instant! He recovered partialy, and said imploringly to the warden—

'Don't you sir, for God's sake, don't call her name in this dreadful place! Do what you may with me, but don't mention that name to me,'

There were tears in other eyes besides the prisoner's, and an aching silence prevaded the group which surrounded the convict.

IMPORTANT TO LOVERS OF MUSIC.—Choristers, Singing Masters, Organists, Musicians and Teachers of Music generally, and all Clergymen interested in the advancement of Music or in the elevation of the standard of musical taste, will hear of something both interesting and advantageous by sending their names and addresses to Messrs. Dyer & Willis, publishers of The Musical World & Times, 257 Broadway New York. Measures are being taken to facilitate a universal dissemination of good music, and correct musical principles, the whole country, and the co- f all who feel an interest in this ork, is solicited. The co-oper- itors and Publishers is also solic- at least as to give this paragraph

They have Carried away Papa.

As the cars in which we were recently traveling halted at a station, our attention was arrested by a beautiful little girl, apparently less than two years of age, who was looking from one of the windows of a house standing but a few feet from the track.—She was wailing most piteously, and on her sweet, wan face, was painted deeper sorrow than we had ever before seen on the face of an infant such as this. All the while she repeated, with a pathos indescribably mournful. "They have carried away papa—when will they bring him back?"

Presently a lady, whom we instantly recognized as a former acquaintance, came from the house, and entering the car in which we sat, took a seat near us and said.

"Did you observe a child at the window?"

"Yes," we replied with a deep interest.

"A fortnight since," rejoined our friend, "the father of that little girl set out for the gold region. She was always amused at seeing the cars pass, and the morning fixed upon for her father's departure, as she heard the train aproaching, climed to her accustomed place.

"At that moment the father and mother entered the room, the former with a smile upon his features, and the latter pale and tremulous with suppressed emotion. One pressure to his fond heart, one fervent kiss, and the love pledge only was replaced at the window with a low 'God blesss you, my darling Emi—good-by.'

"This was evidently the first intimation to the little one of her father's intended departure. At the word she turned quickly, and, with a half incredulous expression, from the window surveyed his person, and seeing that he was really equipped for a journey, and returning his partiug salutation.

"'Good-by, papa—good-by.'

"Another moment and the adventurer had entered the cars, which were beginning again to move forward. The young wife and mother turned from the spot where the long farewell had been exchanged, and reentered her dwelling with streaming eyes. Instantly the child appeared to comprehend that her father's absence was destined to be not, as usual, a temporary one; the gay smile fled from her intelligent features, and streaching her tiny arms towards her father, who from a window, was casting behind a long look, she cried, in lisping accents:—'Oh, please do come back, papa, and take mamma and Emi.'

"The father, who had hitherto succeeded in maintaining external composure, was seen to withdraw his gaze, and press a handkerchief to his eyes.

"The child has scarcely smiled since.—On the approach of the car she always takes her place at the window, from which no inducement can draw her, and watches with eager eyes till she finds that her father has not come, when, in a tone of sadness truly affecting, she repeats. 'They have carried away my papa when will they bring him back?'

"Her appetite has failed, she has grown pale and thin, and her thoughts are constantly with her absent parent. Her mother has decided to take her from the scenes which so constantly remind her of her affliction.—Cleveland Plaindealer.

A NOVEL MANUFACTORY.—We find the following curious description of the manner in which Ladies Muffs are manufactured in London, in a magazine before us. The writer gives the following as the manner in which the "tubbing" process of the skins used for ladies muffs, boas, &c., is conducted:

"The workmen are ranged in tubs along the sides of an apartment, or shed, or any kind of outhouse, in a yard or some secluded spot in London. Every tubber with the exception of those who may be unwell and who may then wear a loose sort of a jacket, which, however, tells against the efficiency and rapidity of his work—is altogether naked! The tub in which the man works reaches up to the waist, and a thick yellowish cloth is thrown over its top, which the workman keeps every now and then gathering about him, and which he can draw around like a bag, so that, while at his labor, the upper part of his person alone is visible. To a stranger, the effect of a visit to such a workshop—to which it is not easy to gain admission—is startling. Pale, brown, and often hirsute men, move up and down in their tubs, stamping and alternating their feet with little cessation; sometimes in silence, and in many cases with little or no expression in their faces. Each of these men are "tubbing," that is he is treading or stamping, first upon one foot and then on the other, on the skins which are the complements of his tub. These skins are for the supply of the furriers who employ the master skin dressers. There is no water or any other fluid used in tubbing, but the fleshy part of the skins are all buttered, and with the cheapest butter or scrapings, and in some places rancid butter when such things are purchasable in sufficient quantity. Saw dust is used, which gives the tubber a firmer tread, and tends to aid, by its friction, in scouring the skins. Upon these tubbed skins, so prepared, the men tread, and the perspiration which sometimes pours from them is considered better and readier for the cure of the skins than any butter or other fatty compound, which are looked upon as merely auxiliary to what oozes from the workman's body. And in this way men's sweat is forced for hours together into the skinny parts of the furs which are to be ladies muffs, boas, and tippets."

—The reason why man was made after everything else, one writer says, was because if he had been created first, he would have annoyed the Almighty by endless sug-

Removals from office.

Franklin Pierce, as a Senator, took the ground that he could not justify Gen. Jackson, in his proscriptive system, which went so far that in a few months there were about 2000 removals.

Hamilton and Madison, with other framers of the Constitution, held that the Constitution gave no power to the President to make a vacancy by removal, and then fill it by another appointment, during the recess of Congress. Hamilton, in the Federalist, and Madison, in the debates of the House in the first Congress, express the opinion, that such an act by the President is an abuse of power, and an impeachible offence. Washington, John Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, and J. Q. Adams, made few removals, and none without alleged causes. Jackson changed the system of the fathers of the Republic, which Franklin Pierce can restore, if he has the disposition to do so. He will find, when he reaches Washington, that there are now more Democrats than Whigs in office at the seat of Government.

Gen. Pierce, in a speech in the Senate on the 1st of July, 1841, on a motion to call upon President Tyler for a list of removals from office, spoke as follows;

"I will say that there was nothing in the administration of General Jackson which I so unformly failed to justify as the removal of one worthy officer to give place to another.

"On a previous occasion, the distinguished Senator from Kentuckey [Mr. Clay] made the remark: 'An ungracious task, but the nation demands it.' Sir this demand of the nation—this plea of 'State necessity,' let me tell, gentlemen, is as old as the history of wrong and oppression. It has been the standing plea—the never failing resort of despotism.

"It is cold selfish, heartless, and has always been regardless of age, sex, condition, services, or any of the incidents of life that appeal to patriotism or humanity.

"Wherever its authority has been acknowledged, it has assailed men who stood by their country when she needed strong arms and bold hearts, and has assailed them when, maimed and disabled in her service they could no longer brandish a weapon in her defence.

"It has afflicted the feeble and dependent wife for imaginary faults of the husband.

"It has stricken down innocence in its beauty, youth in its freshness, and manhood in its vigor, and old age in its feebleness and decrepitude Whatever other plea or apology may be set up for the sweeping, ruthless exercise of this civil guillotine at the present day, in the name of liberty, let us be spared the fearful one of 'State necessity' in this early age of Republic, upon the floor of the American Senate, in the face of a people yet free."

HOW TO PRODUCE SPIRITUAL RAPPINGS.—The following is from the N Y. Tribune:

"Singular results are obtained in this city from a very simple application of the nervious fluid, animal magnetism, or whatever be the agency, to brute matter. Let a party of six or eight persons sit around a common pine table for twenty minutes to half an hour with the palms of the hands held flat on the top of the table; it is not necessary that their minds should pay any attention to the process, or the ordinary conversation be suspended; but presently the table becomes so changed with the mysterious fluid that it begins to move; then rise from it, push away your chairs, still holding you hands near, though it is not necessary to touch it, and it will turn around from end to end, and even proceed rapidly about the room, without any visible agent, on which excursions the persons must bear it company, or the current is broken and the movement stops. This simple experiment may easily be tried; it requires no faith and no outlay of physical or moral strength; and the result, with a table that is not too heavy, is pretty sure to follow; at least, we have known of several instances in which it has been most astonishly produced: The fact, when scientifically established, must throw light on the obscurities of Mesmerism, Spiritual Manifestations, and all that unexplored class of phenomena."

A Sister's Love.

There is no purer feeling kindled upon the altar of human affections, than a sister's pure, uncontaminated love for her brother. It is unlike all other affections; so disconnected with selfish sensuality; so feminine in its development; so dignified, and yet, with all, so fond, so devoted. Nothing can alter it, nothing can suppress it. The world may revolve, and its revolutions effect changes in the fortunes, in the character, and in the disposition of her brother: yet, if he wants, whose hand will so readily stretch out as that of his sister? and if his character is maligned, whose voice will so readily swell in his advocacy? Next to a mother's unquenchable love, a sister's is pre-eminent. It rests so exclusively on the tie of consanguinity for its sustenance, it is so wholly divested of passion, and springs from such a deep recess in the human bosom, that when a sister once fondly and deeply regards her brother, that affection is blended with her existence, and the lamp that nourishes it expires only with that existence.

—Mrs. Beecher Stowe, of Uncle Tom's Cabin notoriety, has recently received a letter from Dr. Wardlaw, tendering her, in behalf of a number of ladies and gentlemen of Glasgow, an invitation to visit England at their expense. This invitation she has accepted; and she will soon leave for Liverpool with her husband.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

This document is an ably written and patriotic State Paper. From some of its conclusions we dessent, and some of its recomendations wo are opposed to, but we admire the frankness and straight forward manner in which the Governor expresses himself. We can differ from him in regard to measures of policy, without questioning his integrity or losing esteem for him as a man.

We give below a brief synopsis of the message, reserving extended comments for a future occasion :

PUBLIC CHARITIES.

The Asylum for the Insane, at Utica, has had under treatment during the year, 825 lunatics. Of these 156 have been discharged cured, 53 improved, and 39 have died

The Asylum on Blackwell's Island has had under treatment 1005 ; making in all 1830 who have been treated at State Asylums. There are some 1400 insane in the State supported in private families or poor houses.

The Governor recomends the establishment of another Asylum in the Western part of the State. In this we heartily concur. There is no nobler charity than that which extends its care over those who have been visited with that most terrible of all calamities, the overthrow of reason.

The experiment of educating and improving, to a certain extent, the faculties of the unfortunate class of idiots has thus far been successful. The Governor recommends additional aid to the Asylum for Idiots.

The institutions for the deaf and dumb, and for the blind, are in a flourishing condition. The number of deaf and dumb pupils is 159 ; of the blind, 153.

EMIGRATION.

Since May 5, 1847, there have arrived at the port of New York, 1,336,960 emigrants. In 1852, up to 15th December, 295,272 arrived. Of these, 49,005 received aid from the Commissioners of Emigration. The aid thus rendered has been paid from the communication fund of $1,50 for each person. The Commission is in debt $170,000 for land and the erection of buildings. An addition of fifty cents to each communication tax is recommended.

EDUCATION.

The Educational Funds of the State are as follows :

Common School Fund	$2,351,530 09
United States Deposit Fund	4,014,520 71
Literature Fund	262,880 12
	$6,641,930 92
No. of School Districts	11,537
No. of Scholars attending Dist. Schools	862,507
No. attending private shools	31,767
No. of Schools for Colored Children	105
No. of pupils attending them	4,416
Amount paid Teachers	$1,681 316 00
" " Libraries	90,579 50
Total amount expended for Common Schools	2 249,814 02
For building and repairing School Houses	477,918 51

PRISONS.

Pecuniary aid is recommended for the New York and Rochester Houses of Refuge for juvenile delinquents.

No. of prisoners at Sing Sing,	869
" Auburn,	754
" Clinton,	155
Total,	1,783

Of these, eighty are females.

The following appropriations are asked for ;—

For Auburn,	$14,000
Sing Sing,	7,000
Clinton,	27,000
	$48,000

These appropriations are necessary to complete contemplated improvements, after which it is supposed the Prisons will sustain themselves.

SURVEY OF THE STATE.

An accurate survey of the State, and the establishment of permanent monuments for the determination of Magnetic variations, is recommended.

MANORIAL DIFFICULTIES.

To induce sales by large land owners, distress for rent has been abolished and interest of land owners in leases has been taxed. Quarter sales have been declared unconstitutional. Suits instituted by the State have been decided in favor of landlords, save in one action, which has been carried to the Court of Appeals.

No further legislative action is recommended. The tenants are advised to purchase, and the landlords to sell at reasonable rates, the titles to lease-hold property. The title of the large land holders is being gradually extinguished, and the prospect of a speedy removal of all cause of agitation growing out of manorial titles, is cheering.

THE CODE.

The confusion growing out of the incompleteness of the Code of Procedure, and the commingling of the old and the new system of practice, make further legislation necessary, and it is recommended that an act be passed which shall "provide that civil remedies, both by special proceedings and by civil action, be prosecuted under a general method of procedure."

MILITIA.

The enrolled militia numbers 289,307.—Uniformed companies number 15,000 men. Of these, 5,000 are in the city of New York.

TRADE WITH CANADA.

Free and unrestricted intercourse with the Canadian provinces is recommmended, as a principle of policy, and measures to induce the General Government to adopt some plan to effect such a result, are advised.

BANKS.

On the first of December, 1852, there were :—

Chartered Banks	70
Banking Associations	118
Individual Bankers	89
	277

Legislation is recommended to save the public from frauds and losses, arising from kiting institutions.

RAILROADS.

Length of Roads in the State, 2,027 miles. Total cost of 27 roads reported, $82,812,160 63. Total expenditure on all roads constructed or commenced, $100,000,000. Number of passengers carried by 21 roads which have made reports, 7,061,909. Tons of freight, 2,060,379.—Number of persons injured in life or limb, 256 ; of whom 158 were killed.

CANALS.

The State has completed, or has in progress of completion, 858 miles of canals. These have cost $36,897,652. The original cost of the Erie canal was $7.143,789,86. Since 1835, the tolls received have amounted to $41,227,000. The expense of keeping them in repair, to $11,459,000. Since the adoption of the Constitution there has been expended on them $6 715,000. In 1851 the surplus tolls applicable to the enlargement amounted to $964,432. In 1852 they amounted to less than $300,000. Amount needed to finish the Black River canal, $248,784. The Genesee Valley canal $389,000.

After the first of June next, a b at adapted to the enlargement, will be enabled to pass all the locks from Lake Erie to the Hudson River.

The State Engineer estimates that by an expenditure of $400,000, in addition to the work under contract, the canal can be deepened so that the new boats can carry 150 tons. Of this, $200,000 will be for temporary purposes, and the balance applied to the enlargement. After which, "by the judicious application of moderate sums we can have an enlarging canal until it becomes the enlarged canal."

The Governor estimates that a judicious application of $6,000,000 expended in equal annual sums of $1,000,000, will complete the enlargement and the lanterial canals. To enable the State to expend this $1,000,000 per year, it will be necessary to raise about $500,000 annually, in addition to the surplus tolls.

To raise this sum three modes are suggested 1. The Legislature may in each year impose a tax for that porpose. 2. "It may borrow the money under the 12th section of the 7th article of the Constitution, which requires that an annual tax shall be imposed that will pay the interest and redeem the principal within eighteen years from the time of the contraction of the debt." 3. A proposal to amend the Constitution may de submitted to the people.

Which of these methods the Governor favors does not appear.

FINANCES.

This branch of the message refers more particularly to the report of the Comptroller, a synopsis of which will be presented at an early day.—[Albany Register.

UNION DOWN.—While Gov. Seymour was being sworn into office on Saturday, the flag on the Capital floated with the Union down. This, though evidently a mistake, may be regarded as omnious. The party now in power in this State, composed as it is of discordant materials, may well be regarded as destined to a short and disturbed rule. Signs of that strife which precedes dissolution are already observable. The Hards are discontented and the union of the Softs and original Free Soilers is by no means perfect. The latter having the power claim the spoils to the entire exclusion of the Hards and the great mass of them complain that too large a portion is assigned to their allies, the Softs. These jealousies will doubtless increase, until before the close of Gov. Seymour's term of office, we may look for signals of distress, the Democratic flag floating with the Union down.

Or it may be simply typical of the affairs of the Democratic party as being topsy turvy, heels over head, like the wonderful donkey, with his tail where his head ought to be, and vice versa, or possibly of having no discoverable head or tail to the whole matter.—Albany Register.

IMPUDENCE ON STILTS.—A man calling himself 'Hart' of Monroe, sends us a villainous circular, with the information that if we insert a couple of squares six times in our paper, and mail him a copy of the same, he will forward us six receipts for making 'Hair Dye,' 'Family Soap,' Washing Fluid,' &c. We would inform this very modest individual that as we are not at present either in the quack medicine, dying and scouring, or barbering business, we must decline his position very empathatically,—If he shall ever have progressed sufficiently in the scale of mental developement to comprehend a decent proposition, we will be happy to direct him where his kind attentions will be appreciated. At present we must leave him to do his own Hair dying—and puffing —Oneida Herald.

We have received the same proposition, and very cooly handed it over to a friend who smokes, to light his cigar with We give Mr. Soapy notice that we advertise for a quid progno, and that we prefer to send him a receipt for paying it.—Ogdensburgh Sentinel.

The Home Journal for 1853.

All who wish to secure, for the coming year, a piquant and charming fireside companion, that will discourse to them of what passes in the great world—a faithful and industrious chronicler ; all who would have their taste elevated and refined, their minds supplied with useful aliment, and their spirits cheered by racy hamour and sparkling vivacity ; all who would invest the trifling sum of two dollars in such a way as to bring in an invaluable amount of benefit and pleasure, will be found among the patrons of the Home Journal. It gives us a view of everything worth knowing, and condenses volumes of information into convenient space. The new volume commences under the most brilliant auspices, and will exceed all its predecessors. A new supply of Pencellings from the pen of Wills—new Songs and Ballads by Morris ; a new Novel ; an aditional Department for the Ladies; and elegant accounts of Lectures, Schemes of Benevolence, etc.—are among the novelties announced. We counsel all to send their names to the Editors, Morris and Wills, at once—107 Fulton street New

For the New Year.

GLEASON'S PICTORIAL DRAWING-ROOM COMPANION.—This brilliantly illuminated weekly journal has just commenced a new volume, and is certainly a most superb and elegant affair, in the way of literature and art. Among a large number of most beautiful and artistic engravings, is a fine allegorical picture, by Billings, of the incoming New Year. An elaborate design illustrating the subject of Autographs and Writing, from the earliest period of the world,—a most original and remarkable feature of the Pictorial, to be followed by a series of numbers upon this subject. An allegorical picture of the Golden Fleece. A Winter Scene in Russia, with the peculiar mode of travelling illustrated. A fine equestrain picture of Count D'Orsay. A representation of Thom's piece of sculpture, known as Old Mortality, in Laurel Hill Cemetry. A magnificent, large and original picture of the Crystal Palace, New York,—the finest engraving ever issued on wood in this country. Also a most curious puzzle, the key of which is a miracle of ingenuity. By turning and examining this curious affair five hundred different objects are found, each subject, though complete in itself, still, by cunning arrangement, forming parts of another. The Western Military Institute, at Drennon Springs, Ky., is also represented. Among the contributors to this number we observe the names of Mrs. L. H. Sigourney, T. Bulfinch, T, Buchanan Read, T. S. Arthur, Maturin M. Ballou, Alice B. Neal, Mrs. M. W. Curtis, Ben : Perley Poore, A. J. H. Duganne, Francis A. Durivage, Alice Carey, Caroline A. Hayden, Phoebe Carey, Dr. J. H. Robinson, J. Hunt, Jr., Neale Bernard, Ellen Louise Chandler, etc., etc., forming an amount of talent never before embarked in a weekly journal. With all this array of attractive illustrations, of brilliant literary matter and vast improvement generally, the price of the Pictorial is greatly reduced. The terms per annum are $3. Single copies, six cents each.—For sale at all of the periodical depots in the United States.

Satisfactory.

Last winter a whig member of congress moved a resolution in favor of tariff reform, and those who read the Gazette will recollect two or three columns of explanations in excuse of the democracy for not coming up to the relief of labor, the substance of which was, that "the motion was made at an improper, and unexpected moment."

The other day Mr. Brooks (whig) made a motion to refer the subject to a special committee with a view to reduce the revenue, and increase protection, but this also failed to receive the support of the democracy, and the Gazette in explaining the reason says, the motion was intended to divide the democratic party!" Of course the "party" is of more importance than principle; and these reasons will be entirely satisfactory to "party" men, and those "dimocrats" who are voting for Jackson, and "agin" the Bank !

Death by Inebriation.

Philo Shelly of Clintonville aged about 37 years died on Saturday night last under the following circumstances ;

He went to his home about nine o'clock in a state of intoxication. His wife, who had retired, arose, and enquired if he wanted anything, to which he replied in abusive language, and soon fell on the floor. His wife covered him up with a quilt, and again retired. In the morning, he that should have been the husband and father was dead, and now fills a drunkard's grave. He leaves a wife and two children.

Mad Dogs.

A child of M. C. Rock of this place aged about two years was bitten on the nose last week by a dog in a state of hydrophobia. A physician has been in attendance, but with what success is not known yet.—The excitement still keeps up, and bills are posted all about, "Beware of Mad dogs!" Large numbers have been killed, and men with guns in hand are common.

Interesting to the fraternity.

The following is a copy of a letter rec'd by us and as it is "Editor's luck" we have no complaints to make only that it was received on christmas ! For its appearance on that merry day we are revenged in its publicity.

DICKENS'S HOUSEHOLD WORDS AND UNITED STATES REGISTER.—T[illegible] structive practical and use[illegible] nal, edited by Charles [illegible]

☞All about us, on every side, we read of distinguished lecturers having been delivering learned discourses of great literary merit. It was Randolph we believe that remarked that every man received two educations ; one from other men and one he obtains himself, the latter being the most useful, but the other worthy of the most active attention. In our estimation there is no means as well calculated, to awaken a thirst for knowledge and intellectual culture, as a series of good lectures on scientific and literary subjects, or to establish a healthy and vigorous public sentiment. If some of our citizens would move in this matter, we think the desire for improvement and profitable recreation, is strong enough among the inhabitants of our village to warrant their active co-operation. We are credibly informed that our fellow-townsman, GEORGE A. SIMMONS, Esq., than whom there is no man bettter qualified, both by association and erudition, has consented to open the series with an eulogy upon DANIEL WEBSTER, if invited. Will somebody move in the matter, and let us have lectures here once a week or once a fortnight for the next three months. †

☞When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for a man to clothe himself up, in servicable costume, a proper regard for the opinions of others, should influence him, and induce him to go where this can be done for the smallest amount of money and in the best manner. That place is CARDWELL'S, No. 2, Adirondack Building, where may be found, to select from, the largest and most fashionable stock of gentlemen's dress clothes, overcoats, &o., ever brought into this 'Siberian region !'

Gentlmen just give him a call, and you can have goods at your own price until the first of March, as this mammoth stock must be disposed of to make room for his spring stock. †

THE LADY'S BOOK for January.—This old and popular Magazine has been upon our table for some days. This is a superb No. and worthy of the reputation of Mr. Godey as a caterer for the public test. Its engravings are unrivelled, and its literary articles are of great merit, as we believe is generally the case ; its aim being the advancement of morality, its beautiful pages never contain anything that would cause a blush in the most fastidious. To the ladies this is invaluable, being the only Magazine that gives the fashion plates beautifully engraved. Following are the terms.

GODEY GRAHAM AND ARTHUR !

We will furnish One Copy of Godey's Lady's Book, and One Copy of Graham's Magazine, 1 Year, for $4 ; or One Copy of Lady's Book, and One Copy of Arthur's Home Magazine, containing 80 pages, for $2,50 ; or One Copy of Lady's Book, and One Copy of Arthur's Home Gazette, for $3,50

Postage on Godey's Lady's Book, only 2 cts, each No.

ARTHUR'S HOME MAGAZINE.—This is a new monthly Magazine, by T. S. Arthur, that has reached its 3d No. It is a valuable Magazine for the Home circle, and worthy a place in every family. Its Editor, T. S. Arthur is one of our best writers, as well as a decidedly popular one. He wields a vigrous pen, and it is always used in the higher walks of literature. We commend this Magazine to our readers, as one that will give the most unlimited satisfaction. Terms, in advance, $2. The Home Gazette, an excellent family newspaper, weekly, and the Home Magazine, one year for $3. Address T. S. Arthur & Co., No. 107, Walnut St., Philadelphia.

The Country Gentleman, & Journal for the Farm, the Garden, and the fireside.—This is the title of a new paper, issued on the first Thursday of January, to be devoted to the cause of Agriculture and the Rural Arts generally. It is printed in quarto form, each No. containing 16 pages, weekly at $2 per year in advance or $2,50 at the end of the year. We received the specimen No. some time since, and laid it by to notice, but by some means it has become mislaid, so we cannot refer to its contents. In typographical appearance it is unsurpassed by any paper published. Luther Tucker, Albany.

The Cultivator.—This interesting monthly will be continued as heretofore with the exception that the price is reduced to 50 cents eight copies for $3. This is an excellent journal and worthy of its extended reputation. None of our farmers should be without it, and its price is so low, that it is within the reach of every one.

THE OCEAN BORN.—A Tale of the Southern Seas.—By Steuart Adair Godman.

This is a tale of deep interest, written with great force, and will add to the already enviable reputation of Mr. Godman as a vigorous and interesting writer. Its a neat octavo. beautifully printed, and embellished. Price 25 cents.

SOME of our New-England readers, we have no doubt, will recognize a once distinguished attorney-general of an eastern State in the subject of the annexed anecdote :

'Mr. B——, a distinguished advocate and attorney-general of a far 'down-east' State, was sitting with his hat over his eyes and his chin on his breast, blustered up on either side with chairs and table, and sleeping as comfortably as 'the indomitable spirit of gin' would allow, in the court-house at A——, when 'the Court' entered and took his seat on the bench. Observing the situation of Mr. B——. which had not changed on the entrance of 'the Court,' the Judge looked at the sheriff, who seemed to understand that it was his duty to get the sleeper into 'condition.'

"Mr. B——, the Court is in.'

'I won't give the reply. Suffice it to say the sheriff had a decided objection to going to the murky and sulphurous place to which he was consigned.

"M. B——,' said the Judge, 'we have observed, with profound regret, your conduct during the last week ; and this morning we find you in no better condition to take up your case than before. We are disposed to bear with you no longer. You disgrace yourself and your family, 'the Court,' and the profession, by your course of conduct.' This reproof elicited the following colloquy :

'Did your r honor speak to me ?'

"I did, Sir !"

"What re-mark di-hid you make ?'

"I said, Sir, that, in my opinion, you disgrace yourself and family, the Court, and the profession, by your course of conduct.'

"May i-i-it please your honor, I have been an attorney in in-in this c-court for fifteen years ; and permit me to say, your honor, that that is the first cor-rect opinion I ever knew you to give !"

Slightly 'pugnant,' that !—Knickerboker Magazine.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.

James M. Riddle, printer, Burlington, Vt, died here this morning from injuries rec'd from falling down two flight of stairs.

We have known the deceased long and well, as we presume have most of the printers and publishers in this section of the State and Vermont. He was we believe a native of Burlington, Vt., and his mother now resides in Colchester. We think he learned his trade with Col. Stone of Plattsburgh. We are sorry that his lamp of life is thus early extinguished, for a more noble-hearted, generous man never handled a sixpence.

"One of Nature's own noble friendly and frank,
A man with his heart in his hand.."

We have worked weeks and months by his side and never knew him to be guilty of a mean action or to harbor a revengeful feeling. Possessing a quick, active mind and keen perception, well developed by extensive reading and travel, he was capable of adorning any station in life, were it not for one dark spot in his character—he was too fond of the social glass. May the hard bound earth that receives his remains rest lightly on his bosom. †

☞ D. K. PANGBORN, Esq., of Burlington, Vt., who has recently returned from California, will give a lecture this evening on California and California life, illustrated by a large map and a selection of interesting specimens. Mr. PANGBORN is thoroughly conversant with his subject and well qualified to make his lecture highly interesting. We bespeak for him a full house, as he is eminently worthy of it. †

1853 BARNUM & BEACHS' NEW PAPER. 1853

THE ILLUSTRATED NEWS

Six Cents per Copy.

P. T. BARNUM, Special Partner; H. D. & A. E. BEACH, General Partners.

The Proprietors desire to call attention to the fact, that ALFRED E. BEACH has become associated with this concern, contributing an additional capital of $20,000, and that the liberal amount of $60,000 is now especially devoted to its publication.

THE ILLUSTRATED NEWS will be published weekly, and will comprise sixteen large pages, filled with original and selected letter press contents, of the highest literary standard, and with a great number of large and handsome engravings. No pains or expense will be spared to produce the BEST ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER IN THE WORLD, an acceptable FIRE-SIDE COMPANION, and an ORNAMENT TO THE AMERICAN PRESS.

THE ILLUSTRATED NEWS will be a faithful and beautiful Pictorial History of the World, in which scenes and events in this and other countries sketches and views in all parts of the Globe, Portraits of Public Men, Scenes in our National Capitol, Autographs and Biographies of Eminent Characters, and all matters of general interest to the community, will be found Promptly Illustrated. In addition to the Illustrations equal care will be bestowed on the News Department. Each number will contain the latest intelligence from all parts of the world, with Market Reports, &c. &c. Due attention will also be paid to the Religious, Scientific and Agricultural interests of the country, and frequent appropriate Illustrations will be given.

The EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT will be placed under the charge of several of the most able writers in the United States, who will be assisted by contributions from the most eminent Authors and Poets of our own and other countries. Tales and Sketches of approved merit will from time to time add interest to the columns, and afford entertainment to all classes of the community.

☞ The Publishers will also from time to time present gratuitously to their regular subscribers, LARGE AND HANDSOME ENGRAVINGS, suitable for frames, issued in the very best style, and drawn by the very best artists of the United States, which will form a collection of Pictures alone worth much more than the cost of their subscription. The engravings will embrace magnificent views of Public Buildings, important Public Ceremonies, Historical Events, American and Foreign Battle-fields, &c. &c.

The year 1853 is the most auspicious of any during the past century, for the commencement of such a Newspaper. The GREAT WORLD'S FAIR, which opens in New York in May next, will be one of the most important and interesting events which has occurred in this city since its foundation. Here will be congregated the most perfect specimens of mechanical skill and manufacture from all parts of the civilized Globe. All parts of the world will contribute the best and most curious productions of Art and Science. Every citizen of the New World will feel deep interest in the most minute details of this NATIONAL CONGRESS, and the event will be looked back to, with profound pleasure, during many ensuing years. In order to present this great Exhibition to the Public, in the most impressive manner, and to preserve its details in the most interesting form, the ILLUSTRATED NEWS will engrave and publish, in supplements and otherwise, in the highest style of art, illustrations of all articles of interest in the vast Exhibition, accompanied by the most interesting descriptions thereof. The first volume of this Journal, besides all its other interesting illustrations, will be a Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Exhibition of Industry of all Nations, intrinsically worth more than ten times it cost, not only for present interest, but for preservation and future reference. Being located in the city of New York, in communication with the best Artists of the United States, and having every facility of possessing themselves of every detail connected with the World's Fair, the Publishers feel confident of insuring to their patrons a publication of greater interest than has heretofore ever been presented to the public.

In the first volume may also be expected numerous illustrations relative to the Japan Expedition, comprising sketches of the ships and steamers composing the same, information of its route and progress, views of harbors, villages, cities, dwellings, and the people in Japan. Reliable arrangements are making for these sketches, and for all information, which will be received here at the earliest date.

It is well known that the Empire of Japan has, for many centuries, excluded all nations from commercial intercourse, and has treated with considerable cruelty the unfortunate mariners who have been cast upon it shores. Its manners and customs differ greatly from all other nations; it contains many millions of inhabitants, who have made considerable progress in the Arts and civilization. All knowledge and information therefore which is obtained about Japan, will be of the highest interest to all nations, and will be eagerly sought for by every person in the community. The results of the Expedition will probably make Japan a stopping and re-fitting depot for our China-bound steamers, and for our whaling fleets. It will doubtless open a wide field for Missionary enterprise, and for business operations of every description. The ILLUSTRATED NEWS, in fully portraying this celebrated Empire, and spreading abroad correct illustrations and descriptions in regard to it, will therefore be particularly valuable as an Authentic Descriptive History of Japan.

On account of the World's Fair, and Japan Expedition, and also in consideration of delay and uncertainty in procuring back numbers, the Publishers cannot too strongly impress upon the public the importance of commencing their subscriptions with the first number of the first volume, and using the utmost care in preserving the papers for binding.

At the conclusion of each volume a handsome title page and index will be gratuitously furnished by the publishers. The publishers will procure, at low rates, the uniform binding of the volumes, when desired.

The paper will be furnished at the low price of six cents per copy, and served to subscribers in all the principal cities of the Union. It will be also for sale at all the principal Bookstores and Periodical Depots thoughout the United States and Canada.

MAIL SUBSCRIPTION PRICES.—TWO VOLUMES IN ONE YEAR.

One Copy, per volume, payable in all cases in advance,	-	$1.50
Four Copies, do.	do.	5.00
Ten do. do.	do.	10.00

☞ Post Masters thoughout the United States are desired to act as Agents for this Paper, in receiving and forwarding subscriptions.

All letters should be addressed, post-paid, Publishers "Illustrated News," New York.

New Goods! New Good!

—AT—

NICHOLS' CASH STORE,

150 Church street,

BURLINGTON, VERMONT,

HAVING just Purchased in New York and Boston, a large stock of Goods of all kinds we now offer them for sale, and those who are in want of goods in our line will save money by calling on us before purchasing. We are confident we have the largest stock of goods ever brought into Burlington at one time; we were induced to buy largely in consequence of the low prices of many kinds of goods, particularly dress goods of almost every kind.

We have a full stock of everything usually kept in a dry good store; Also West India goods and groceries, a very large stock of Teas and Sugars low by chest and cask. Also at cost to clear them off Paper Hangings, Crockery and glass Ware and looking glasses.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening, side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Gedde's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns, Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batchelder's & Emery's, and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power. This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year,) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices.

Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

at his old quarters. No 5 Beaver-street ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L's remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood, Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RECEIVE.

More than 5 000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating these diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN.

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visit d half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, at a moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprinciple men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for

DR. VICHOP'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 3 copies 30 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address, All communications destroyed or returned

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timid persons take notice

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care, will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

SHERIFF SALE.

BY Virtue of an Execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to me directed and delivered against the goods and chattels, real estate and chattels real of Joseph Weed and Almerin Smith, I have seized and taken all that tract or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga, and Essex county, bounded as follows:

All that piece and parcel of land lying and being in said town of Ticonderoga, being the westerly part of a lot of land formerly leased by Samuel Deal to Jonathan Drury, and known on a map of said land as lot No. 51, beginning at a maple stake standing in the east line of a lot of land lately conveyed to the said Almerin Smith, by the said Thomas Wheeler, thence running south eighty two degrees east, forty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty degrees thirty minutes east, eighty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty two degrees west, forty rods to the stake and stones, thence south eight degrees thirty minutes west, eighty rods to the place of beginning. Containing within said bounds twenty acres. Excepting from off the said lot two acres, conveyed by Samuel Deal to the Congregational Meeting House, and Society of Ticonderoga, and one half acre to the Corporation of St. Paul's Church, also in said town.

Also, all that piece parcel or tract of land situate, lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga aforesaid, and bounded as follows:

Beginning at a stake standing in the north east corner of a lot of land formerly owned by James Jones, and conveyed by him to the said Smith, and now in his possession; thence running south eighty degrees east, twenty-eight chains and sixty-three links to a stake; thence south eight degrees and forty-five minutes west, nineteen chains 70 links to a stake standing in the north line of Edward McCaughin's land, thence north eighty degrees west, 28 chains and 63 links to a stake, thence in a straight line to the place of beginning. Containing 56 acres and one-third of an acre be the same or less or less.

Also all that certain other lot adjoining being a part of the Holcomb and Jones farms, bounded on the south and west by the high way leading from Ticonderoga to Crown Point on the east by lands formerly owned by Wm Stewart now McCaughin and on the north by the highway leading past John Ledwitch's farm and residence and on the south by said McCaughin's land.

Also, all that certain farm in Ticonderoga, aforesaid, known as the Lake farm containing about 350 acres, being lot No. one and two in the McIntosh Patent, in the possession of Charles F. Hammond and Allen Penfield, and about 75 acres adjoining part of lot No. in same patent now in possession of Geo. D. Clark

Also, all that certain other lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as part of the James Jones farm, sold and conveyed by Almerin Smith, to Alva Bennett in the year 1847, and now in the possession of said Bennett bounded and described as follows: beginning at a stake and stones in the easterly line of lands belonging to Francis Arthur Esq., being also the south west corner of the William Canfield farm, thence along the southerly line of said Canfield's land, south 80 degrees east, 5 chains and 8 links to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to Ticonderoga village, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 31 chains and 25 links to a stake then north 86 degrees west, 25 chains to a stake standing in a ditch or drain and being also in the easterly line of said Arthur's land, thence along the same north 10 3-4 degrees east, 26 chains and 76 links to the place of beginning, containing 40 acres of land.

Also, all that certain lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, commonly called the Holcomb lot now in possession of Almerin J. & Charles H. Bennett, and sold and conveyed by the said Almerin Smith to them in the year 1847, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning in the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Upper Falls in Ticonderoga, being the north east corner of Sylvanus Bennett's farm, thence along the north line of said Bennett's farm north 80 deg. west, 32 chains and 14 links to a stake in the east line of Gustavus N. Wicker's land, thence along the same and along part of the east line of Francis Arthur's land, north 10 3-4 deg. east, 14 chains and 85 links to a stake standing in a ditch or drain, thence south 86 deg. east, 25 chains to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Lower Falls of Ticonderoga, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 10 chains and 80 links to the centre of the first above mentioned highway.

Legal.

Also, a certain other lot in Ticonderoga aforesaid, now in possession of Jeremiah O'Brien, bounded on the south by the road leading past John Ledwitch's land and residence, on the east by said Ledwitch's lands, on the north by lands of Alexander McCambridge, and on the west by lands of Wm A. G. Arthur containing fifty acres or thereabouts.

Also a certain other lot piece or parcel of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid lying and being on the south and west side of the highway leading from the Lower Falls to the street so called or Crown Point between the former dwelling house of the said Almerin Smith and burnt a few years since and the present dwelling house of Edward McCaughin, being the same lot sold by the said Smith to the said McCaughin in 1847, and now owned by him, containing by estimation about 14 acres, being originally part of lands belonging to Stephen and Silas Sayre.

Also, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Schroon, Co. and State aforesaid on the west side of Lake George and comprehended with in the bounds of a tract of land granted by Letters patent under the great seal of the state of N. Y., to James Caldwell, Robert McClellen, and Robert Cochran and is more particularly known and distinguished by being lot No. one hundred and forty seven of the division of said tract bounded as follows, viz:

Beginning at the southwest corner of lot No. one hundred and forty four being a stake No. 144, 145, 146, 147, and runs thence along No. 146 south 25 chains to lot No. 148, thence along the same east 40 chains to lot No. 143, thence along the same north 25 chains to lot No. 144, thence along the same west 40 chains to the place of beginning, containing one hundred acres of land, be the same more or less. The courses are as the magnetic needle pointed at Lake George in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen. Which said several lots, lands and real estate I shall expose for sale at Public Vendue at the Hotel kept by S. Woodard at the Lower Falls in Ticonderoga on the 26th day of July next at ten o'clock in the forenoon. Dated June 5, 1852. A. B. MACK, Sheriff.

THE WONDER OF THE WORLD.

DEVINES' COMPOUND

PITCH LOZENGE,

A sure and pleasant Remedy for Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and if lungs enough are left to sustain life, A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, safe for the Infant or the Invalid, in any stage of weakness.

"The statements that consumption cannot be cured, has destroyed more lives than the disease itself.—[Dr. Warren

Read the following, which to a candid mind places this "Great Remedy," like Caesar's wife "above suspicion."

TO THE PUBLIC!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Lee, Mass., are acquainted with Mr. Devines, the proprietor and Manufacturer of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge and from what we know of it ourselves and have learned from others of its beneficial effects, in cases where it has been used, give it as our opinion that it is a valuable remedy in diseases for which it is recommended and is worthy of public confidence. A. G. Hulburt, Leonard Church, F. G. Taylor, Wm. Taylor, E. A. Bliss, S. A. Hulburt, Josephus Crafts, T. P. Eldridge.

If any individual is to be pitied, and needs sympathy, it is the consumptive—always expecting to get well and yet the painful evidence of decay almost "makes the inner soul shrink with the outer flesh"

"Some bloom as roses bloom, and live as roses live,
A single morning's space!"

While others, in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HERE IS HOPE! Mr. Wm. Devines, the originator and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges above, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk, and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN.

KEESEVILLE, N. Y.

H. S. TOUSLEY, after an absence of several weeks, has returned and reopened his commodious rooms for the reception of visitors. He has brought with him from the New York market, a splendid assortment of Cases, &c., and being desirous of keeping pace with the spirit of the times, he has made himself familiar with all the recent improvements in the Daguerreotype system. Those in want of truthful likenesses had better call without delay, as I shall probable close my rooms in 6 or 8 weeks. Remember that "procrastination is the thief of time." The public is cordially invited to call and examine specimens. 441

THE NORTHERN

New York Mutual

INSURANCE COMPANY,

Plattsburgh, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Capital, 100,000.

THIS Company is organized under the General Insurance Law of the State of New York, with a sound, reliable capital, and offers the following superior inducements:

1. The safer kinds of property are separated entirely from the more hazardous; affording the advantages of two distinct companies, with the expense of but one.

2. The first class, or Farmer's Department, consists of Farm-houses, Farm buildings and their contents and detatched dwellings and their contents in villages, when unexposed by more hazardous buildings,

3. The second class or Merchant's Department, consists of exposing dwellings, stores, merchandize and property not deemed specially hazardous.

4. Each class pays its own losses and thus securing equal justice and proportional rates to both.

5. Not more than $3,000 of the first class, or more than $2.600 of the second class, will be taken in one risk, nor any number of risks so contiguous as probably to subject the Company to a loss of over $3.000 at any one fire; thereby saving it from heavy and ruinous losses.

6. In taking surveys of property, the agent will be the agent of the company, and the company be responsible for the correctness of all surveys made by its agents.

7. Any one insured, may at any time surrender his policy and withdraw from the company by paying his proportion of the losses and expense up to the date of such surrender.

8. Applications will take effect at noon of the day on which they are made (unless a different day is directed by the applicant.) thus relieving the party from anxiety and suspense.

9. The company no have two-thirds clause, but will pay all loss and damage not exceeding the amount insured.

10. In case of difference of opinion in settlement of losses, the company will submit the same to arbitration in the county where the loss occurs, the claimant choosing one, the company one, and the two arbitrators another.

11. Each person insured in the company becomes a member and will be entitled to a participation of the profits, if any surplus should accrue, not required for the payment of losses.

12. This company will be responsible for losses by fire caused by lightning.

13. This company will take no risks in cities.

☞ The Directors return their acknowledgments to the public for ther readiness in aiding the organization of this company, and will endeavor to make it a safe and reliable institution, affording protection from the ravages of fire, at reasonable rates, and with certainty of payment in case of loss.

A Thrilling Adventure.

A merchant, wishing to celebrate his daughter's wedding, collected a party of her young companions; they circled around her, wishing much happiness to the youthful bride and her chosen one. Her father gazed proudly on his lovely child, and hoepd that as bright prospects for the future might open for the rest of his children who were playing among the guests.

Passing through the hall of the basement, he met a servant who was carrying a lighted candle in her hand, without the candlestick. He blamed her for such conduct, and went into the kitchen to see about the supper. The girl soon returned, but without the candle. The merchant, immediately recollected that several barrels of gunpowder had been placed in the cellar during the day, and that one had been opened.

"Where is your candle?" he inquired, in the utmost alarm.

"I couldn't bring it up with me, for my arms are full of wood," said the girl.

"Where did you put it?"

"Well, I'd no candlestick, so I stuck it in some black sand that's in the small barrel."

Her master dashed down the slairs, the passage was long and dark, his knees threatened to give away under him, his breath was choked, his flesh seemed dry and parched, as if he already felt the suffocating blast of death. At the end of the cellar, under the very room where his children and their friends were revelling in felicity, he saw the open barrel of powder, full at the top; the candle stuck loosely in the grains, with a long red snuff of burned wick; this sight seemed to wither all his powers; the laughter of the company struck upon his ear like the knell of death. He stood a moment unable to move. The music commenced above, the feet of the dancers responded with vivacity; the floor shook, and the losse bottles in the cellar jingled with the motion. He fancied the candle moved—was falling; with desperate energy he sprang forward—but how to remove it! the slightest touch would cause the red hot wick to fall into the powder. With unequalled presence of mind he placed a hand on each side of the candle, pointed towards the object of his care, which, as his hands met, was secured in the clasping of his fingers, and safely moved away from its dangerous position. When he reached the head of the stairs he smiled at his previous alarm, but the reaction was too powerful, and he fell into fits of the most violent laughter. He was conveyed to his bed sensless, and many weeks elapsed ere his nerves recovered sufficient tone to allow him to resume his business.

☞A day or two ago we cut a hole in the Carpet Bag and took out this; and persons who take patent medicines will please notice:—

The Great American Remedy! Hope for the afflicted! Let invalids rejoice!—The greatest discovery of the age! The genuine extract of Pea Nuts! Recommended in all cases by members of the faculty and members of no faculty at all.—Prepared by Nostrum, Gull & Co. Invented by Esculapius Quackenboss, M. D., D. D. L. L. D, an honorary member of the H. U. M. Society of B. U. G $5 per bottle—5 bottles for $25.—Cures invariably the following list of diseases, each from thirty to forty-five seconds. Goitar in the head, Scoffs and Scolds, Brown creaters, and Subjumption in the last stage coaches. Slick headache and Sheep's headache. Catches in the side and other violent cachinations. Comic Rheumatism and all other 'isms. Diary and the worst cases of (linen) collar-y. These and ten thousand other diseases yield to its healing properties. A thick folio volume of evidence in its favor will appear shortly.—Subscribers solicited.

Again, the Whigs, in and out of Congress, are really as anxious for his acceptance as the balance of the Democracy (except the Tugaboos) are.—Cor. of the Times.

"The Tugaboos!" There's a new name in the political nomenclature! What does it mean? Whom does it mean? It is evidently Democratic; that we can understand. Is it Hunker, Hardshell or Soft?—Is it Barnburner, or a mongrel compound of all? We have studied the natural history of Democracy and can find no account of the animal whatever. Is it antedeluvian, belonging to a class of extinct things, like the lost bird known only by its great tracks imprinted in Connecticut sandstone? Is it like the Ichthiosaurus that left its rib prints in unspeakable geological formations? Or is it an animal invented, got up since the date of the last dictionary? What can it be? Will the Times or its correspondent describe it?—[Register.

A Windfall to an Editor.—Mr. Scripps, editor of the Chicago Democratic Press, has received a legacy, the Chicago Tribune says of not less than $100,000, from an uncle who has just died in St. Louis. What in the world can an editor do with such a sum?

An Outrage by a British Man of War.—The Charleston papers learn from Capt. Stiller, of the schooner Age, which vessel arrived at that port on Saturday last from Cardenas, that on his passage from Matanzas the Age was thoroughly searched, and his papers overhauled by the officers of Clerk of the Assembly.—Mr. Bogart, the "Sentinel" correspondent of the New York Courier, makes the following allusion to the selection of Mr. Nafew for Clerk of the Assembly:

In their selection of Clerk, the Democrats have taken a gentleman, who at the National Convention at Baltimore, was the zealous and determined friend of General Cass—and who has been by good service entitled to the honors he bears. Clever—sagacious—with a knowledge of men, and a power to please them—Mr. Nafew is a capital selection, and all who knew him, only wonder that the arbitrary rule and the wild work of Caucus, produced a result so good.

He is a printer—a practical man of types. When once such a measure of sunshine comes, it would be treason to our craft, if we should not rejoice. The London Times warns authordom not to attack D'Israeli, as he is one of them. In such counsel there is good to be imitated. The success of a printer is indicative of the civilization of the people. This has been a good omen from the days of Franklin—and the world is to be governed by the "Aassociated Press."

Mr. N. has many friends in this city who are gratified with his success. He was a Troy boy, served his apprenticeship in the Budget office under Kemble & Hooper, and was one of the original proprietors of the Morning Mail, a Whig daily paper published in this city from 1837 to 1840. It is but justice to John to say, that in pocketing his share of the profits of the paper he unequivocally repudiated its principles. He never was anything else but a Locofoco.—[Troy Whig.

Rail Road Accident!

Boston, Thursday, Jan. 6, 1853.

The 12 o'clock train over the Boston and Maine rail road was thrown off the track to day, near Andover, owing to the breaking of a wheel. The train was going pretty rapidly at the time. About 1 P. M. Gen. Pierce, with his wife and only son 13 years old, took the cars at Andover for Concord. There was only one passenger car, filled by between 60 and 70 passengers. Just previous to reaching Lawrence, an axle or wheel gave way, throwing the car down an embankment of 20 feet. It turned a complete somerset, landing upon a pile of rocks. The car was knocked into fragments. Gen. Pierce was among the first to extricate himself from the ruins.—His son was crushed to death, and his wife severely, though not fatally injured.

Several other passengers were very severely bruised, but we have not heard of any further loss of life.

The General said he felt that his limbs were sound, but complained of a pain in his back.

Mrs. Pierce was carried into a neighboring house, as were others of the injured.

Mr. Newell, of Lawrence, had a leg broken, but all the other passengers escaped without serious injury.

Some 10 or 12 persons were more or less injured—among them was a Mr. Peck of this city.

The down train, just arrived, brought 6 or 8 of the injured passengers.

☞The Boston Courier states that just before Mr. Webster's death he called his son Fletcher to his bedside, and said:—"My dear son, I wish you to procure a handsome and substantial piece of silver plate, and present it to my valued friend, Peter Harvey, with a suitable inscription, as a testimonial of my dying love for him." This piece of plate has been manufactured by Jones, Ball & Co., of Boston. The inscription is a verbatim transcript of the dying words in which the great statesman made the request.

Another New Planet.—Mr. J. R. Hind announces that he has made another discovery in the celestial regions. The discovery was made on the 15th ult, and the planet shines as a star of the 10th magnitude, with a pale bluish light. If he is the first discoverer Mr. Hind proposes to call the planet "Thilia." Little did Mr. Hind think, when 24 years ago he was watching the antics of a kitten around a trap in which a mouse had been caught at his father's house at Nottingham, that so great a reputation was to be gained by him as an Astronomer.—[State Register.

☞The Albany Express says, "We were permitted yesterday to examine the boots of a gentleman who made three hundred calls on New Year's day! They looked decidedly hard, and their appearance, we learn, did not belie the feelings of their wearer. We heard also of another go ahead citizen who made one hundred and fifty calls, met on an average two fair ladies at each, and kissed every one of them! The Museum people are in negotiation for the relics of both of these individuals."

Temperance Meeting.—Meeting met pursuant to adjournment. Deacon Ticknor appointed, President, and Leander Babbit, Secretary. Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Eaton. The committee on constitution and By-Laws, reported the same, which were, after amendment, adopted. A committee was then appointed, consisting of Wm. W. Kingsland, Dr. Blaisdell and Rev Mr. Eaton, who subsequently reported the following names, who were duly elected: President, Dea. Ticknor, Vice President, Almond Rigalow and Mr. Estes, B. R. Walker, Secretary L. S. Scribner, Treasurer. On motion, a committee of three for Ausable and Chesterfield, was appointed to suggest a man in each school district, to form a general committee. On motion the meeting adjourned to meet next Tuesday Evening, at the Weslyan Chapel.

Deacon Ticknor, President.

L. Babbit, Secretary.

Michigan U. S. Senator.—It was telegraphed to Washington yesterday, that Hon. Charles E. Stuart, at present a member of the House of Representatives, was elected U. S. Senator, in place of Mr. Felch.

☞Col. Schouler, editor of the Boston Atlas, has been appointed Clerk of the

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning Jan. 15.

"The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands;
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands,
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

That Rail Road.

We are unwilling to doubt the success of the enterprise which was entered upon at this place in December yet the subscriptions on the line of the road have not been such as the importance of the project led its friends to expect. From recent conversations with Rail Road men we are of the opinion that if this effort fails it will not soon be undertaken again, and may go by forever. It is important to the county generally, opening and developing its resources, and giving us character, and to individuls in the rise of lands, in the money that will be expended in its costruction, and in giving them a market throughout the year. Its greatest benefit will be to farmers, enhancing the value of their property, and giving them a cash market for everything leaving no unmarketable product on hand to waste. May we not appeal to those who are friendly to this subject in the several towns along the route to be up and doing—to agitate earnestly, effectively?

N. Y. Legislature.—Judge Burnett, our member, is on two committees, the Judiciary and that of Privileges and Elections—posts he is qualified to adorn. We saw the judge on Friday last, in his seat in the Assembly, and found him looking well, and we venture to say ready to meet the democracy on any question they may start.

We also saw Hon. S. S. Beaman, the member from Dist. No. 1, Washington county, who was up here and made some speeches during the late campaign. He is quite a favorite among the members, and is on the committee of Ways and Means.

Hunts Merchants Magazine for Jan.—This is one of the ablest magazines, for valuable and statistical information, that we are in the receipt of. Its editor, Freeman Hunt, is one of the most comprehensive and logical writers on mercantile and financial matters in our country, and his magazine should be in the hands of every intelligent business man. Its contributors are among the ablest and most talented writers in the field of letters. In the present No. are "Conscience in the Counting Room; or, the True Interest of the Merchant," "The Cotton Trade," "Commercial cities and Towns of the United States." "Biographical sketch of Gen. H. A. S. Dearborn," "Codification and Law reform in Alabama," "Journal of Mercantile Law," "commercial chronicle and Review," "Journal of Banking, currency, and Finance, together with much other valuable statistical information.

Knickerbocker Mag. for Jan.—This old and deservedly popular Magazine has come to hand. It contains among its 'host' of good things, a beautiful engraving of the editor, Louis Gaylord Clark, who is one of the most humorous, piquant, prolific and felicitous writers in the country, whose sparkling genius is displayed on every page of his beautiful Magazine. The Editor's table literally groans with "fat things" and is a sovereign panacea for all the ills that "flesh is heir to." The "Fudge Papers" are continued by that truthful and feeling writer, Ike Marvel, who is a regular contributor; besides many other articles of superior literary merit. The following are a few of the distinguished names that are announced as contributors for 1853; Washington Irving, W. C. Bryant John Henry Hopkins, Hon. Lewis Cass, Hon. W. H. Seward, Park Benjamin, and a host of other literary worthies which our space will not allow us to mention. To all who want to be in the possession of the best Magazine there is published, that fosters a healthy and vigorous literary taste this is the Alpha and Omega of their wants. It is printed on fine substantial paper, in the most beautiful manner. Address Samuel Hueston, 139 Nassau Street, N. Y.

There has nothing of particular interest been transacted by the "assembled wisdom" of our State. Mr. D. B. Taylor gave notice of a bill to "repeal the law prohibiting the introduction of slaves into the State," and a bill to "abolish the Clinton State Prison."

The Weather,

There has been no winter about Troy, Albany and New York, or if so it has been in disguise. Some charge that "Old Winter" has been concealed, and that he will burst forth by and by with great fury. Caught in the Fact.

A certain notable housewife had observed that her stock of pickled cockles was running remarkably low, and spoke to the cook in consequence, who alone had access to them. The cook's character was at stake; unwilling to give warning with such an imputation on her self denial, not to say honesty, she nevertheless felt that confidence between her mistress and herself was at an end. One day the jar containg evanescent condiment being placed, as usual, on the dresser, while she was busily engaged in basting a joint before the fire, she happened to turn suddenly round, and behold, to her great indignation, a favorite magpie, remarkable for his conversational powers and general intelligence, perched by its side and dipping its beak down the open neck with great symptoms of gratification. The mystery was explained—the thief detected. Grasping the ladle of scalding grease which she held in her hand, the exasperated cook dashed the whole contents over the helpless pet, accompanied by the exclamation—"Oh, d—e, you've been at the pickled cockles, have you?" Poor Mag, of course, wae dreadfully burnt; most of his feathers came off, leaving his little round pate, which had caught the principal part of the volley, entirely bare. The poor bird moped about, lost all spirits, and never spoke for a year. At length, when he had pretty well recovered, and was begining to chatter again, a gentleman called at the house, who, on taking off his hat, disclosed a very bald head. The magpie, who happened to be in the room, appeared evidently struck by the circumstance; his reminiscences were powerfully excited by the naked appearance of the gentleman's skull. Hopping upon the back of his chair, and looking over, he exclaimed in the ear of his astonnded visitor:—"Oh, d—e, you've been at the pickled cockles, have you?"—[Ingoldsby Legends.

The First Lieutenant General.—On the 2d of July, 1798, President Adams transmitted to the United States Senate the following message:—

A Wild Goose Chase.—A few days ago a man representing himself as a Livery Stable keeper from Waterford hired a fine team at Saratoga which he drove a few miles and pawned for a small sum of money. He then started in pursuit of the thief! He employed another Livery Stable man, and a team at Glen's Falls, and drove in all haste to Whitehall, where they left the horse and took the cars for Burlington Vermont. On the cars they met the wife of the owner of the first team, who related the theft in the hearing of the passengers, and no one was more eager in his enquiries than the thief himself. From Burlington they went to Plattsburgh, Denamora, and to this place. In the meantime he had borrowed money to a small amount of his friend on the pretence that he had only a hundred dollar bill, which he exhibited, but could not get it changed. Here he hired a man to keep his stable, borrowed five dollars of him and also hired the same man to drive him to Clintonville. Thence he went to Lewis, Port Henry, Crownpoint and Ticonderoga. At the latter place he got a fine team again, and pushed for Vt. where he swapped the establishment for $12 to boot, since which time all trace of him has been lost.

THE GLOBE:

THE OFFICIAL PAPER OF CONGRESS.

CONGRESS has made the Globe its organ of communication with the country. To facilitate this important object and diminish the expense to the people, the Congressional Globe and Appendix, which contain the proceedings of Congress, revised by the members, are henceforth to be conveyed through the mails free of postage. At the late session of Congress the following Joint Resolution was passed:

JOINT RESOLUTION providing for the distribution of the Laws of Congress and the Debates thereon.

With a view to the cheap circulation of the laws of Congress and the debates contributing to the true interpretation thereof, and to make free the communication between the representative and constituent bodies

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the present session of Congress, the Congressional Globe and Appendix, which contain the laws & the debates thereon, shall be published by order of Congress: Provided. That nothing herein shall be construed to authorize the circulation of the Daily Globe free of postage.

Approved August 6, 1852.

The Globe will now, I trust, enter upon a new and more extended carreer of usefulness.—Congress, which draws into its focus all the important topics and events of the times for its discussion, and acts on them with a view to the interest of the Republic, has provided a mode through which, without cost for the delivery, all that is said and done by the body which speaks and acts for the nation shall be put within the reach of the poorest citizen. The liberality with which Congress patronizes the work, enables the undersigned to report the proceedings, and deliver full sets of both the Congressional Globe and the Appendix, containing the proceedings, daily debates, the written out speeches, the Messages of the President of the United States, the Reports of the Heads of Departments, and all the Laws passed during the session, for Three Dollars—a price which barely pays for the printing the copies subscribed for by the people. Every one who will compare the price of this work with any other, taking into view the amount of matter and style of publication, will find that it is the cheapest circulated from any press in the world; and if the country places the true value on its political institutions—on the action of that representative body which moves and maintains them—which brings under review, discusses, and acts on all the interests of this wide-spread Republic presenting to the people every event, foreign or domestic, that can, however remotely, affect the public interest—it may be called the best, as well as the cheapest publication in the world.

The approach of a new Administration imparts peculiar importance to the next session of Congress. Throughout the whole country there will be solicitude to know what shape Congress will endeavor to give to the national affairs to meet the incoming Administration. The debates of the next session will, no doubt, as heretofore, foreshadow its policy. It is one of the admirable features of our institutions, that the popular body and executive Head, both gifted with independent power, and both representing the people and the States, shall act and react on each other. It is in this way the sovereign authority, exerted through different agents and from different quarters, gives that direction which its superior force compels sometimes even dissenting departments of the Government to adopt. Those, therefore, who would understand well the policy which is likely to bear upon the next Administration, ought to scan the debates of that Congress which immediately precedes it. Not measures only, but the men who are to give them effect, will depend much on the next Congress: for, without doubt, it will have its due influence on the acts of the new President whoever he may be, in regard to all that may interest the constituencies represented by its members in regard to the greatest, as well as the smallest, matters and appointments affecting them.

The proceedings of Congress are first published in the Daily Globe, which is laid on the desks of all the members, to let them see the reports and make what corrections they think proper, before they are printed in the Congressional Globe or the Appendix. The Daily Globe is published during the session of Congress at the rate of Ten Dollars per annum.

The Congressional Globe and Appendix are printed on a double royal sheet in royal quarto form, each number containing sixteen pages.—The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses; and the Appendix embraces the long speeches withheld by the speakers for revision, the Messages of the President of the United States, and the Reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Laws passed during a session, and an index to them, are printed as soon as possible after adjournment, and sent to all subscribers for the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

TERMS.—For one copy of the Daily Globe during the next session, . . . $2,50
For one copy of the Congressional Globe, Appendix, and Laws, for the next session, 3,00

The persons to whom this sheet is sent will be allowed 20 per cent on all the subscriptions they may obtain, which they may retain out of the money collected. Fractions of a dollar may be remitted in post office stamps. The subscription money must accompany the order, else no attention will be paid to it.

Subscriptions should reach here by the 15th December, at furthest, to insure all the numbers.

I have about five hundred surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session, which contain, besides the proceedings of Congress, all laws and joint resolutions passed during the session. The proceedings and laws make 2,552 pages; and the list of appropriations and index, not yet printed, will make about eighty pages more. I will let those who subscribe for the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the coming session have them at the following rates: Price per copy, unbound, Three Dollars; or bound in three volumes, backs and corners Russia leather, Five Dollars. They will be delivered to subscribers at these prices. I sell the bound volumes here for Four Dollars a volume; the three volumes bound for Twelve Dollars. Every person who takes any part in the politics of this country should possess them.

JOHN C. RIVES.

LIST OF

BRITISH PERIODICAL

PUBLICATIONS.

Delivered in all the principal Cities in the United States, free of Postage, and forwarded by Mail, under the provisions of the late Post Office Law, at merely nominal rates.

1. The London Quarterly Review (Conservative)
2. The Edingburgh Review (Whig.)
3. The North British Review (Free Church.)
4. The Westminister Review. (Liberal.)
5. Blackwood's Edingburgh Magazine (Troy.)

Although these works are destinguished by the political shades above indicated, yet but a small portion of their contents is devoted to political subjects. It is their literary Character which gives them their chief value, and in this they stand confessedly far above all other journals of their class. Blackwood, still under the fatherly care of Christopher North, maintains its celebrity, and is, at this time, unusually attractive, from the serial works of Bulwer and other literary notables, written for that magazine, and first appearring in its columns both in Great Britain and in the United States. Such, works as "The Caxtons" and "My New Novel," (both by Bulwer,) "The Green Hand," "Katie Stewart," and other serials, of which numerous rival editions are issued by the leading publishers in this country, have to be reprinted by those publishers from the pages of Blackwood, after it has been issued by Messrs. Scott & Co., so that Subscribers to the Reprint of that Magazine may always rely on having the earliest reading of these fascinating tales.

Payments to be made in all cases in advance.

The Premiums consist of the following works, back volumes of which will be given to new subscribers according to the number of periodicals ordered, as above explained.—

PREMIUM VOLUMES.

Foreign Quarterly Review (one year.)
Blackwood's Magazine (six months.)
London Quarterly Review (one year.)
Bentley's Miscellaney (six months.)
Edinburgh Review (one year.)
Metropolitan Magazine (six months)
Westminster Review (one year.)

Consecutive Premium volumes cannot in all cases be furnished, except of the Foreign Quarterly Review. To prvent dissappointment, therefore, where that work is not alone wanted, Subscribers will please order as many different works for premiums as there are volumes to which they may be entitled.

CLUBBING.

A discount of twenty five per cent from the above prices will be allowed to Clubs ordering four or more copies of any one or more of the above works, Thus: Four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9; four copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on.

No premiums will be given where the above allowance is made to Clubs, nor will premiums in any case be furnished, unless the subscription money is paid in full to the Publishers without recourse to an agent. Money current in the State where issued will be received at par.

Reduced Postage.

The following table will show the great reduction which has been made on these periodicals since 1843, and the vary trifling rates now charged.

	Per annum.
Prier to 1845, the postage on Blackwood was	$2 40
Prier to 1845, the postage on a single Review	1 12
From 1845 to 1851, the postage on Blackwood was	1 00
From 1845 to 1851, the postage on a Review was	50

1853 BARNUM & BEACHS' NEW PAPER. 1853

THE ILLUSTRATED NEWS

Six Cents per Copy.

P. T. BARNUM, Special Partner; H. D. & A. E. BEACH, General Partners.

The Proprietors desire to call attention to the fact, that ALFRED E. BEACH has become associated with this concern, contributing an additional capital of $20,000, and that the liberal amount of $60,000 is now especially devoted to its publication.

THE ILLUSTRATED NEWS will be published weekly, and will comprise sixteen large pages, filled with original and selected letter press contents, of the highest literary standard, and with a great number of large and handsome engravings. No pains or expense will be spared to produce the BEST ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER IN THE WORLD, an acceptable FIRE-SIDE COMPANION, and an ORNAMENT TO THE AMERICAN PRESS.

THE ILLUSTRATED NEWS will be a faithful and beautiful Pictorial History of the World, in which scenes and events in this and other countries sketches and views in all parts of the Globe, Portraits of Public Men, Scenes in our National Capitol, Autographs and Biographies of Eminent Characters, and all matters of general interest to the community, will be found Promptly Illustrated. In addition to the Illustrations equal care will be bestowed on the News Department. Each number will contain the latest intelligence from all parts of the world, with Market Reports, &c. &c. Due attention will also be paid to the Religious, Scientific and Agricultural interests of the country, and frequent appropriate Illustrations will be given.

The EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT will be placed under the charge of several of the most able writers in the United States, who will be assisted by contributions from the most eminent Authors and Poets of our own and other countries. Tales and Sketches of approved merit will from time to time and interest to the columns, and afford entertainment to all classes of the community.

☞ The Publishers will also from time to time present gratuitously to their regular subscribers, LARGE AND HANDSOME ENGRAVINGS, suitable for framers, issued in the very best style, and drawn by the very best artists of the United States, which will form a collection of Pictures alone worth much more than the cost of their subscription. The engravings will embrace magnificent views of Public Buildings, important Public Ceremonies, Historical Events, American and Foreign Battle-fields, &c. &c.

The year 1853 is the most auspicious of any during the past century, for the commencement of such a Newspaper. The GREAT WORLD'S FAIR, which opens in New York in May next, will be one of the most important and interesting events which has occurred in this city since its foundation. Here will be congregated the most perfect specimens of mechanical skill and manufacture from all parts of the civilized Globe. All parts of the world will contribute the best and most curious productions of Art and Science. Every citizen of the New World will feel deep interest in the most minute details of this NATIONAL CONGRESS, and the event will be looked back to, with profound pleasure, during many ensuing years. In order to present this great Exhibition to the Public, in the most impressive manner, and to preserve its details in the most interesting form, the ILLUSTRATED NEWS will engrave and publish, in supplements and otherwise, in the highest style of art, illustrations of all articles of interest in the vast Exhibition, accompanied by the most interesting descriptions thereof. The first volume of this Journal, besides all its other interesting illustrations, will be a Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Exhibition of Industry of all Nations, intrinsically worth more than ten times it cost, not only for present interest, but for preservation and future reference. Being located in the city of New York, in communication with the best Artists of the United States, and having every facility of possessing themselves of every detail connected with the World's Fair, the Publishers feel confident of insuring to their patrons a publication of greater interest than has heretofore ever been presented to the public.

In the first volume may also be expected numerous illustrations relative to the Japan Expedition, comprising sketches of the ships and steamers composing the same, information of its route and progress, views of harbors, villages, cities, dwellings, and the people in Japan. Reliable arrangements are making for these sketches, and for all information, which will be received here at the earliest date.

It is well known that the Empire of Japan has, for many centuries, excluded all nations from commercial intercourse, and has treated with considerable cruelty the unfortunate mariners who have been cast upon its shores. Its manners and customs differ greatly from all other nations; it contains many millions of inhabitants, who have made considerable progress in the Arts and civilization. All knowledge and information therefore which is obtained about Japan, will be of the highest interest to all nations, and will be eagerly sought for by every person in the community. The results of the Expedition will probably make Japan a stopping and refitting depot for our China-bound steamers, and for our whaling fleets. It will doubtless open a wide field for Missionary enterprise, and for business operations of every description. The ILLUSTRATED NEWS, in fully portraying this celebrated Empire, and spreading abroad correct illustrations and descriptions in regard to it, will therefore be particularly valuable as an Authentic Descriptive History of Japan.

On account of the World's Fair, and Japan Expedition, and also in consideration of delay and uncertainty in procuring back numbers, the Publishers cannot too strongly impress upon the public the importance of commencing their subscriptions with the first number of the first volume, and using the utmost care in preserving the papers for binding.

At the conclusion of each volume a handsome title page and index will be gratuitously furnished by the publishers. The publishers will procure, at low rates, the uniform binding of the volumes, when desired.

The paper will be furnished at the low price of six cents per copy, and served to subscribers in all the principal cities of the Union. It will be also for sale at all the principal Bookstores and Periodical Depots thoughout the United States and Canadas.

DICKENS' HOUSEHOLD WORDS.

HAS been re-published in this country by the subscribers, who have for sale complete sets of the work. The character of Mr. Dickens as a writes is so well and favorably known, that the most we can say of his weekly is, that it fully sustains his reputation. Whole books have already been formed of extracts from the work; but though the compilers of these have copied extensively, they have failed in their endeavors to transfer every article of general interest,—they could not do it without copying the whole. No general reader of our most popular magazines can have failed to notice the frequent and lengthy "contributors" from "Household Words," provided the publisher had been honest enough to have given the proper credits. We would call attention to the following extract from a speech of Sir James Stephen, at the Free Library at Manchester, as well as a few selections from a host of complimentary notices from the Press in this country:

* * * But the merit of the writing of the third [Dickens school] is of yet a higher nature; it is, that amid all the riot of their fancy, their humor and their whim, while they teach us to laugh most heartily at each other's follies, they still have in common the one unbroken aim—to teach us all to assist, to pity, to forgive, and to love one another—and hence it is not without reason that the latest of these works, which I have the good fortune to read, has taken to itself that fitting title of "Houses hold Words."

"Abounding in pleasant and useful reading, and admirable family book."—New York Observer.

"A very entertaining and instructive for the domestic circle.—Reading Gazette and Democrat.

"It abounds with useful and interesting information."—National Democrat.

"The best of all popular matter-of-fact periodicals."—Literary World.

"The most popular periodical now published, and well deserves its reputation."—Pittsburgh Saturday Visitor.

We have added to the regular London edition a weekly synopsis of news, under the title of in which is given a brief account of all that passes worthy of note. The whole makes a regular issue of 32 pages per week at the following low rates:

No. 8, COLLEGE STREET, BURLINGTON, Vt.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mears centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabor's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep breaking up flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Geddie's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn-stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse-power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns. Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Batchelder's & Emery's and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power This Power, both single and double-geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are too widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction.

or be removed after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—Lawrence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice in two per day.

AGRICULTURAL & HORTICULTURAL TOOLS AND IMPLEMENTS,

a great variety and extensive assortment, such as Hoes, Shovels, Spades Rakes, Manure and Hay Forks, Scythes Snaths, Cattle Ties, Draft Halter and Trace Chains, Garden Syringes, Pruning Saws, Pruning and Budding Knives, Garden Shears and Twig Cutters, Grin stones, Patent Grindstone fixtures, rollers, barrow rolls, &c., &c.

Grain, Field, Garden and Flower seeds.—We are prepared to furnish Herds Grass, Red Top, Lucerne, White Dutch, Southern, Western and Northern Clover Seed Beet, Turnip, Onion and Carrot Seed, at Wholesale and Retail at the lowest market prices.

We have by far the largest and most complete assortment of Agricultural Improvements Machines, Field and Garden Seeds to be found in the State, which we offer at our new and spacious Ware-Rooms to Farmers and Dealers on terms the most liberal. We are also Commission Merchants and Wholesale and Retail Dealers in heavy and shelf

HARDWARE,

Saddlery, Axles, Springs, Mechanic's Tools, House Trimmings and Furnishing Goods, Cutlery, Cross Cut, Mill and Circular Saws, Paints, Oils, Bird Cages, etc., etc., etc.

As agents of Messrs. D. Prouty & Co., Boston, Wheeler, Millick & Co., Albany, J. T. Grant & Co., Troy, and others we can fill orders for Plows, Horse Powers, Threshers Fan Mills, Straw Cutters, &c., at manufacturers prices. A liberal discount made to Dealers.

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters No 5 Beaver street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, conclusively evidence that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender skin bones, and disease of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5 000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating those sad diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and Kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moments delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment at much less cost than vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell, and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges to advise and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus desirous will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of his share of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for

DR. NICHOLS'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their ability in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

☞ Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness wish to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications strictly confidential.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or apprentices students admitted: timid persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, all such no medicine may be required.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

SHERIFF SALE.

BY Virtue of an Execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to me directed and delivered against the goods and chattels, real estate and chattels real of Joseph Weed and Almerin Smith, I have seized and taken all that tract or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga, and Essex county, bounded as follows:

All that piece and parcel of land lying and being in said town of Ticonderoga, being the westerly part of a lot of land formerly leased by Samuel Deal to Jonathan Drury, and known on a map of said land as lot No. 51, beginning at a maple stake standing in the east line of a lot of land lately conveyed to the said Almerin Smith, by the said Thomas Wheeler, thence running south eighty two degrees east, forty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty degrees thirty minutes east, eighty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty two degrees west, forty rods to the stake and stones, thence south eight degrees thirty minutes west, eighty rods to the place of beginning. Containing within said bounds twenty acres. Excepting from off the said lot two acres, conveyed by Samuel Deal to the Congregational Meeting House, and Society of Ticonderoga, and one half acre to the Corporation of St. Paul's Church, also in said town.

Also, all that piece parcel or tract of land situate, lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga aforesaid, and bounded as follows:

Beginning at a stake standing in the north east corner of a lot of land formerly owned by James Jones, and conveyed by him to the said Smith, and now in his possession; thence running south eighty degrees east, twenty-eight chains and sixty-three links to a stake; thence south eight degrees and forty-five minutes west, nineteen chains 70 links to a stake standing in the north line of Edward McCaughin's land, thence north eighty degrees west, 28 chains and 63 links to a stake, thence in a straight line to the place of beginning. Containing 56 acres and one third of an acre be the same or less or less.

Also all that certain other lot adjoining being a part of the Holcomb and Jones farms, bounded on the south and west by the highway leading from Ticonderoga to Crown Point on the east by lands formerly owned by Wm Stewart now McCaughin, and on the north by the highway leading past John Ledwitch's farm and residence and on the south by said McCaughin's land.

Also, all that certain farm in Ticonderoga, aforesaid, known as the Lake farm containing about 350 acres, being lot No. one and two in the McIntosh Patent, in the possession of Charles F. Hammond and Allen Penfield, and about 75 acres adjoining part of lot No. in same patent now in possession of Geo. D. Clark

Also, all that certain other lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as part of the James Jones farm, sold and conveyed by Almerin Smith, to Alva Bennett in the year 1847, and now in the possession of said Bennett bounded and described as follows: begining at a stake and stones in the easterly line of lands belonging to Francis Arthur Esq., being also the south west corner of the William Canfield farm, thence along the southerly line of said Canfield's land, south 80 degrees east, 5 chains and 8 links to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to Ticonderoga village, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 31 chains and 25 links to a stake then north 86 degrees west, 25 chains to a stake standing in a ditch or drain and being also in the easterly line of said Arthur's land, thence along the same north 10 3-4 degrees east, 26 chains and 76 links to the place of beginning, containing 40 acres of land.

Also, all that certain lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, commonly called the Holcomb lot now in possession of Almerin J. & Charles H. Bennett, and sold and conveyed by the said Almerin Smith to them in the year 1847, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning in the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Upper Falls in Ticonderoga, being the north east corner of Sylvanus Bennett's farm, thence along the north line of said Bennett's farm north 80 deg. west, 32 chains and 14 links to a stake in the east line of Gustavus N. Wicker's land, thence along the same and along part of the east line of Francis Arthur's land, north 10 3-4 deg. east, 14 chains and 85 links to a stake standing in a ditch or drain, thence south 86 deg. east, 25 chains to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Lower Falls of Ticonderoga, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 10 chains and 80 links to the centre of the first above mentioned highway, thence southerly along the same 9 chains to [illegible]

Also, a certain other lot in Ticonderoga aforesaid, now in possession of Jeremiah O'Brien, bounded on the south by the road leading past John Ledwitch's land and residence, on the east by said Ledwitch's lands, on the north by lands of Alexander McCambridge, and on the west by lands of Wm A. G. Arthur containing fifty acres or thereabouts.

Also a certain other lot piece or parcel of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid lying and being on the south and west side of the highway leading from the Lower Falls to the street so called or Crown Point between the former dwelling house of the said Almerin Smith and burnt a few years since, and the present dwelling house of Edward McCaughin, being the same lot sold by the said Smith to the said McCaughin in 1847, and now owned by him, containing by estimation about 14 acres, being originally part of lands belonging to Stephen and Silas Sayre.

Also, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Schroon, Co. and State aforesaid on the west side of Lake George and comprehended within the bounds of a tract of land granted by Letters patent under the great seal of the state of N. Y., to James Caldwell, Robert McClellen, and Robert Cochran and is more particularly known and distinguished by being lot No. one hundred and forty seven of the division of said tract bounded as follows, viz:

Beginning at the southwest corner of lot No, one hundred and forty four being a stake No. 144, 145, 146, 147, and runs thence along No. 146 south 25 chains to lot No. 148, thence along the same east 40 chains to lot No. 143, thence along the same north 25 chains to lot No. 144, thence along the same west 40 chains to the place of beginning, containing one hundred acres of land, be the same more or less. The courses are as the magnetic needle pointed at Lake George in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen. Which said several lots, lands and real estate I shall expose for sale at Public Vendue at the Hotel kept by S. THE WONDER OF THE WORLD.
DEVINES' COMPOUND
PITCH LOZENGE,

A sure and pleasant Remedy for Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and if lungs enough are left to sustain life, A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, safe for the Infant or the Invalid, in any stage of weakness.

"The statements that consumption cannot be cured, has destroyed more lives than the disease itself. [Dr. Warren Read the following, which to a candid mind places this "Great Remedy," like Cæsar's wife "above suspicion."

TO THE PUBLIC!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Lee, Mass., are acquainted with Mr. Devines, the proprietor and Manufacturer of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge and from what we know of it ourselves and have learned from others of its beneficial effects, in cases where it has been used, give it as our opinion that it is a valuable remedy in diseases for which it is recommended and is worthy of public confidence. A. G. Hulburt, Leonard Church, F. G. Taylor, Wm Taylor, E. A. Bliss, S. A. Hulburt, Josephus Crafts, T. P. Eldridge.

If any individual is to be pitied, and needs sympathy, it is the consumptive—always expecting to get well, and yet the painful evidence of decay almost "makes the inner soul shrink with the outer flesh"

"Some bloom as roses bloom, and live as roses live,
A single morning space!"

While others, in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HE IS HOPE! Mr Wm. Devines, the originator and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges alone, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk, and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN.

Capital, 100,000.

THIS Company is organized under the General Insurance Law of the State of New York, with a sound, reliable capital, and offers the following superior inducements:

1. The safer kinds of property are separated entirely from the more hazardous; affording the advantages of two distinct companies, with the expense of but one.
2. The first class, or Farmer's Department, consists of Farm-houses, Farm buildings and their contents and detatched dwellings and their contents in villages, when unexposed by more hazardous buildings,
3. The second class or Merchant's Department, consists of exposing dwellings, stores, merchandize and property not deemed specially hazardous.
4. Each class pays its own losses and thus securing equal justice and proportional rates to both.
5. Not more than $3,000 of the first class, or more than $2,000 of the second class, will be taken in one risk, nor any number of risks so contiguous as probably to subject the Company to a loss of over $3,000 at any one fire; thereby saving it from heavy and ruinous losses.
6. In taking surveys of property, the agent will be the agent of the company, and the company be responsible for the correctness of all surveys made by its agents.
7. Any one insured, may at any time surrender his policy and withdraw from the company by paying his proportion of the losses and expense up to the date of such surrender.
8. Applications will take effect at noon of the day on which they are made (unless a different day is directed by the applicant,) thus relieving the party from anxiety and suspense.
9. The company no have two-thirds clause, but will pay all loss and damage not exceeding the amount insured.
10. In case of difference of opinion in settlement of losses, the company will submit the same to arbitration in the county where the loss occurs, the claimant choosing one, the company one, and the two arbitrators another.
11. Each person insured in the company becomes a member and will be entitled to a participation of the profits, if any surplus should accrue, not required for the payment of losses.
12. This company will be responsible for losses by fire caused by lightning.
13. This company will take no risks in cities.

☞ The Directors return their acknowledgments to the public for ther readiness in aiding the organization of this company, and will endeavor to make it a safe and reliable institution, affording protection from the ravages of fire, at reasonable rates, and with certainty of payment in case of loss.

Advice for Winter.

Before long, says Mrs. Dennison, of the Olive Branch, we shall hear the shrill whistle of old Winter's bagpipes. Up street and down he will go, like an itinerant organ-grinder.

There is no getting rid of him with pennies, or silver or gold. Still he has been known to leave the miserable cottage at sight of all three; and if you would keep him dancing attendance only on red coal fires—at a distance—or warming his toes at lighted window panes, or rubbing his stiff fingers into crevices that let the warmth out, put a little of this magic preventive on the sill of every poor man's door.

Our word for it, old Winter will tune his bagpipes to the sweetest music.

And now a little advice, which we give free of charge. 'Or you may reward us in that pleasant coin, yclept sunny smiles; we'll take any quantity in exchange for our marketable goods.

The cellars are hungry about this time, and should be fed: so lay in a good stock of wood, coal, &c., and a large share of good nature. They go together grandly, especially on a cold winter's day. Get just as many apples as you can possibly afford, and store them up with any quantity of cheerfulness. You will appreciate them best when the old bagpipes play under your window, and the grand machinery in the upper air is weaving shawls and wrappers, and ribbons, and caps, and great coats for Dame Nature's shivering children.

If you have a merry company around you—if eyes sparkle, and cheeks glow, a mother sews, and grandmother knits, while you hold the newspaper, snuggled down in that cozy arm chair, and enjoying the small talk generally, what a happy being you are! How good the roast apples smell! Down come the crimson coals—showering all over them. Quick, Johnny! Mother, hand us the shovel. There! all right!—look at the baby's eyes; they are full of roast apples. You shall have some, Charley, if mother don't say no.

Mother, don't say no, if it is baby's first introduction to Winter's luxuries; so a bit of the yellow apple melts on his rosy lips. He laughs and makes faces, and everybody else laughs and makes faces at him, just for fun.

And outside, old Winter gives a flush with his bagpipes.

Hang up your golden squashes by their crooked necks, at the same time hang up discontent by his crooked neck. Don't cut the latter down till he is needed for use, then quarter him and throw to the vultures.

If he should strangle, so much clear gain, for have you not heard, 'better is a dinner with herbs than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.'

List your doors and shut out the wind, at the same time shut envy out of your hearts. Mend your gates, and mend—your manners, we were going to say—there is room for improvement in everything. Lay in your sugar and molasses, and as much sweet temper, [warranted not to ferment,] as will keep till Spring.

Preserve your peaches and equanimity. Keep the mould from your cheese, your pork barrel and your memory; the two former by being careful, the latter by being virtuous. Look over your apples and potatoes occasionally, and over look your neighbor's faults.

Give your attention to business—give your abundance to the poor. By following these rules we will insure you a happy winter.

COMING IT STRONG.—Little Gent. of fifteen.—"Mother, you must allow me more funds: I can't go among our fellows if you don't." Indulgent Widow.—"Why, my child, you have three dollars a week pocket money now. You surely cannot spend more than that?" Little Gent. of fifteen.—"Yes, that's all well enough; but where's my cigars and smashes to come from? and that Newfoundland dog has such a devil of a twist, I'm sure he'll eat me one of these days."

☞The Albany Knickerbocker indulges in the following remarks on the Comittees of the House.

In the House, the Speaker announced the Standing Committees yesterday. As we expected, Mr. Taylor, of New York, the prominent Hunker Candidate for Speaker, has been grossly insulted, and outraged beyond all precedent in the history of Legislation. His name is left off the Ways and Means, the Judiciary, the Canal and Railroad Comittees, and is placed at the head of Commerce and Navigation—a very insignificant and unimportant Committee.—Gen. Burroughs is honored with a place among the Militia men, and made to represent a Whig at that. This is indeecutly discourteous and is prompt by the malice and vindictiveness of the clique which are placing the Speaker in a position who we do not doubt he feels himself, is disgraceful. Had Mr. Ludlow consulted common sense and his own personal comfort, instead of Dudley Burwell, John C. Wright, Levi S Chatfield, and the rest of the coterie who drink brandy and water and dispose of the spoils of the State in a back room in Congress Hall, he would find that his duties as presiding officer of the House would be more plesant and agreeable than under the present arrangement of the Committees. The Speaker has laid himself open, and he may expect to have an uncomfortable time of it. Mr. Loomis is Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He has acquired some reputation from the fact that he comes from Herkimer county, and was the associate of Michael Hoffman in the Convention to revise the Constitution, and was afterwards appointed one of the coidfires of the laws; but the only thing we recollect of his ever doing was drawing twenty-five hundred dollars a year: He is a dull, heavy man, and labors under the affliction of deafness. He is, no doubt, a well read lawyer, but his profundity is so foggy that it eclipses his wisdom. The Chairman of the Judiciary is Mr. Weeks, of Dutchess, a young man who, as yet, has given no evidence of the stuff he is made of. His appearance is rather prepossessing, and he may be "somebody." Mr. West, the head of the Committee on Canals, is a young man, a merchant, from Jefferson county. He has a large round, rosy, full face, with an intelligent expression in it. He has not had much experience in canalling, never having commanded a scow boat or performed the duties of snubber to a packet, like our practical friend Jake Hinds, of Orleans county, or the late Commissioner Beach. The other members of the Committee, however, are nearly all practical men. Our friend Champlin, in his juvenile days, was first mate to a raft on the Genesee Valley Canal for two seasons, and Mr. Clapp served an apprenticeship as engineer on the "towpath." Mr. Littlejohn was born on a Canal boat, and Mr. Van Alstyne owned two scows which were snagged on the German Flats. This we consider as the most practical Committee in the House.

A Woman's Reason.

Julia. Your reason?

Lucretia. I have no other than a woman's reason. I think him so, because I think him so.

☞No other than a woman's reason.—Truly has it been said—ask a woman why she thinks thus and thus, and she will say "because."

Now it may look very pretty for the fair lady to hold her head down, smile archly, and pick a rose to pieces as she lisps, "oh! because"—but, it don't look very sensible. Not that we like your pedantic women, who go learnedly into long disquisitions upon the reason and nature of things, and fairly talk you to death, when you require the solution of but a simple question. But we are pleased to hear a straightforward reason, if it be original and quaint, so much the better. If it be witty and keen, provided it stings no one—still so much the better. It shows the quality of thought—that one is not apt to receive impressions as transient as your likeness mirrored on the surface of a well. But some women never have but the one answer, and that is, "because." One will say it with a manner implying that if she were disposed she might tell more; another pettishly, as though she wondered why she should be asked; and yet another like a child that is really ignorant, and perfectly willing to remain so.

Children should always be made to give their reasons for their most simple thoughts. The habit would tend to strengthen all their intellectual faculties, and when they grow to woman's estate, they can give some better reason for their hopes and joys, them that hackneyed "because."

[M. A. D.

From the Olive Branch.

ONLY ONE REASON. Horace Mann, in his lecture on "Woman," says: "I see but one reason why woman should not preach the gospel, and that reason is, that it is ten thousand times better to go about practising the gospel, than even to preach in it."

I'm perfectly ready to close my female eyes now! Here's justice meted out to our suffering sex at last, and by a Man, too! Nobody can disturb the serenity of my soul to day. I feel like a crowned martyr; could shake hands with every enemy I have except———! Any body any "little favors" to ask, now is their time! If my bonnet wasn't bran new, I'd toss it up till it got hitched on the horn of some celestial dilemma. Wonder if all those democrat cannons are used up? It's outrageous there's no way provided for a woman to express her surplus enthusiasm. If I roll up my eyes, it may suggest a pitcher of water in my face; hysterics would be coldly express my emotions; besides, I don't know how they are got up) no use in fainting unless there's somebody "worth while" at hand to bring you to. What's to be done? I'll borrow a "True Flag," and hoist it. I'll go into the woods and shout huzza! Never mind whether he's married or single—he's too much of a curiosity for a monopoly. Barnum must have him; he belongs to the world in general. He's booked for immortality! Napoleon and Hannibal and Cæsar weren't a circumstance! Just think of Horace Mann's moral courage in propagating such an unpopular sentiment! I shall have to get out a Fern dictionary. Can't find words to express my tumultuous emotions!

FANNY FERN.

☞Mr. Willis, of the Home Journal, is a host at letter writing. The following description of his traveling companions, who, with himself, are ensconsed within a New-York Omnibus, in the woods of Kentuckey, is decidedly rich:

My travelling companions were five—four men and a game cock. The latter was sewed up in a pocket handkerchief, and, with only his head out, was treated ignominously as a bundle. I inquired into his history as he rolled about on the floor, and, on hearing that he had been victor at the Lexington races, the day before, killing three successive antagonists, and winning considerable money for his master, I could not but philosophize on what may follow glory, in the experience of heroes. Here was a warrior, with the blood of battle still unwashed from his crest, and who, as Hoffman says of the men of Churubusco,

"Was equal in the deeds he wrought,
To any common five,"

tied up in the base retirement of a pocket-handkerchief, and trying in vain to find a support and hold his head up. The ingratitude of this world's fought for! I made some inquiries as to the education and diet of the brave bird—overcoming, meanwhile, considerable disgust at his master's brutal way of kicking him about the floor of the omnibus; and, as it may be useful to know how to get ready for glory, I will record the process. The Irishman who owned the game-cock, and made a business of it, gave me all the dietetics in a single sentence:—"For three weeks afore the fight, feed the feller on egg, corn meal, rock candy, and barley water." In case of an invasion from the Lobos Islands, my dear General, you may be called on to fight for glory and guano, and the receipe may be worth sticking under your belt.—

My other omnibus companions were free and kindly. Conversation was unembarrassed. The best dressed man of the three pulled a horn comb from his pocket, after a while, combed his own head and then passed round the utensils. All accepted and made use of it, till it came in turn to me, and (not to give offence) I apologized for declining it, on the ground of having a curly head that took care of itself. The comblender was a hater of the men who "owned such a bloody quantity of land, a poor man couldn't get a place to call his own." He pointed to a porter's lodge on one of the beautiful woodland estates we were passing, (the road, for thirty miles, by the way, seeming to pass through a lordly English park,) and said he liked to see a shanty with a pig trough at the door, and fences around small lots—not such a sign as that, of a man's gobbling up more than his share. As to the old Kentuck that God made, belonging to a few of these cussed aristocrats, he didn't believe it was a good law. You might as well own a day of the month, and make poor folks do without it. Why didn't Cassus Clay take up that idea, and not be trying to make gentlemen out of niggers?

UNWRITTEN KISSES.—By Fanny Fern—A sensible contemporary says: "The women ought to make a pledge not to kiss a man who uses tobacco."

So they had! but the duce of it is, all the handsome men use it in some shape!—And "kissing" is a little luxury not to be dispensed with! As to a female kiss, laugh! there's no effervescence in it! it's as flat as an unmixed soda powder! If I'm victimized that way, I always take an early application of soap and water. You will see women practice it sometimes, just to "keep their hand in," (lips I mean,) but it's a miserable substitute! a sham article! done half the time to tantalize some of the male audience! (I hope to be pardoned for turning "State's evidence," but I don't care a pain if I an't.) Now kissing is a natural gift, not to be acquired by any bungler; when you meet with a gifted brother, "make a note on't" as Capt. Cuttle says.—There's your universal kisser, who can't distinguish between your kiss and your grandmother's—faugh! there's your philosophical, transcendental kisser, who "goes through the motions" in the air! then there's—oh, my senses!—they say there's such a thing as "unwritten music," and "unwritten poetry." I have my private suspicions that there are 'unwritten kisses!'

MAD THROUGH EXCESSIVE JOY.—A writer describing the Lunatic Asylum at Blackwell's Island, says:—

"Here is a woman whom joy has deprived of her senses. Her husband and child were on board a vessel which was wrecked. Going down to the shore every day, as if with the wish of being nearer the beloved objects that lay buried beneath the sea, suddenly she beheld them landing from a vessel which had picked them up and saved them. All over the rising flood of joy pervaded her bosom—and then reason was gone forever. She never has known them since, but sits on what she thinks the same rock where she used to bewail their fate, wringing her hands, and moaning most piteously—while every week the husband and son come and gaze on her face, in hope to rouse the glance of memory—but in vain."

A HAPPY ILLUSTRATION.—The Courier de Etats Unis, in an article on the caloric ship Ericsson, illustrates the operation of the wire apperatus, in alternately heating and cooling the same volume of air, in the following apposite manner:

The great fundamental principle of the transmission of caloric cost the inventor twenty years of reflection to refine in this machine. It consists in using constantly the same heat to warm the air which is made to enter the cylinders. The apparatus by means of which this principle is applied, is called a regenerator, and we can form a clear idea of it by supposing that a man has his mouth filled with a warm metallic sponge; if he draws in his breath, the exterior air, in traversing the pores of the warm sponge, will itself be warmed, and will arrive warm into the lungs, whilst the sponge, having parted with its caloric, will become cold; if he exhales the air thus warmed, this air, in again traversing the sponge, will again warm it, and will come out reduced in temperature. MELANCHOLLY.

Found Dead near this place on Saturday last—a Stranger.

All the particulars that we have been enaabled to gather in regard to the mysterious disappearance and death of the unfortunate individual, are as follows:

We learn that on Tuesday the 11th inst. he came to this place from Port Kent, by stage, stopping at the Ausable House. His name was registered by himself as H. Duluzeau, Montreal. His appearance was that of a man afflicted with the shaking palsy, or some nervous affliction producing similar effects. He remained over night but soon after retiring to bed left his own room and commenced walking the halls, entering other sleeping apartments, talking, stamping, &c., in the wildest and most exoited manner. He was as gently as possible removed to a room below, and taken care of through the night by the proprietor of the House and his clerk. He continued in about the same state of apparent delirium till morning, when he became more quiet and appeared to be in his right mind, and said he should leave in the stage at 10 A. M. for N. Y. Before the hour arrived however he changed his mind, refused to go, claiming that half the house was leased by him, and he must compel his rights to be respected. The remainder of Wednesday it seems he spent about the village, looking for his residence in order to find his lease. At night he was furnished with a comfortable and safe room by the proprietor of the Ausable House, and a gentleman well known for his kindness and skill in similar cases, with other suitable help were provided to take care of him through the night. He passed the night much the same as the preceding, perhaps more noisy and unmanageable, except when restrained by force. In the morning (Thursday) he appeared quite sane and again expressed his intention of leaving in the first stage at 10 A. M.

About 9 1-2 A. M. he suddenly disappeared, and all efforts to find him when 10 o'clock arrived proved unavailing No particular fears were entertained for his safety, as all supposed that he would soon come round. Towards night several gentlemen made search for him in the village and neighborhoods adjoining, but without success. Friday a still larger number turned out; enquiries were made in every direction and on every road leading out of the village; but no traces of him were discovered.

Saturday afternoon, unwilling to give up, Mr. Fairbanks and J. B. Tuffts, joint proprietor with Mr. Reynolds of the Ausable House, continued the search down the river, when about half a mile below the village, they found the body of the unfortunate man—dead. He had wandered from the village along an untraveled road till becoming exhausted with the effort or from the effects of the cold, he had laid down and perished. His remains were properly taken care of, and retained till his friends could be advised of his death.

—Such are the main facts connected with the melancholly and unfortunate occurrence.

—These sad events are usually followed by wise and knowing suggestions, which would have averted the catastrophe, and this is not an exception. Every casualty is the result of conduct which might have been otherwise. Man can look back but not forward. So in this case; it is easy to tell what "we" would have done, and easy to censure others, but on a calm review of the facts it will be found that all blame of individuals or of the village is uncalled for and unjust. All supposed that the man was sufficiently sane not to injure himself and no one could have tho't from his appearance on the morning of Thursday, that it was either necessary or advisable to confine him. Besides the less he was opposed or restrained by physical coercion, the more quiet and manageable he appeared to be. His sudden disappearance could not have been anticipated; if it had been the unfortunate individual would have been confined and possibly his life preserved. All can now see that the man should have been confined, and all regret exceedingly the sad result, but no one acquainted with the facts can truthfully blame others for an event so unexpected an unforseen. A thousand reports are put in circulation by the partial and interested, but there is no truth in them, and no heed should be paid to them.

—Here we should perhaps close this article, but we are unwilling to permit so thrilling an event to pass without diverting the attention of our readers to the moral it conveys: beware of the intoxicating cup! There is no doubt but this gentlemen had been on a protracted dissipation—ending in delirium tremens and de[illegible] have we known men of all [illegible] eral days dissipation, and [illegible] dividual, an ordinary bellows is adapted to the mouth to produce the inhalation and the exhalation, we well nigh have Ericsson's machine.

Severe Snow Storm.

A severe snow storm took place on the night of the 12th inst. extending from Troy to New York City. It delayed the cars several hours. The Troy whig says:

The storm, yesterday, threw all the trains, with the exception of the Troy and Boston, out of time. The Wednesday night train from New York did not arrive until 12 o'clock yesterday, and the morning train had not arrived at 9 o'clock last evening.

The storm extended to Boston, Baltimore, Washington and other places East, South and West.

Hudson River Railroad.

The building of this road was one of the most stupendous works in this country, costing about $12,000,000. It is over the waters of the Hudson, across bays, under and through mountains, a distance of 150 miles, and traversed in the marvellously short space of 4 1-2 hours. Passengers can leave Troy at 7 o'clock and 20 minutes A. M., spend 4 to 5 hours in N. Y. and return the same night at 11 o'clock, for the trifling cost of $1,56. On the opening of navigation the fare will be reduced to 50 cts. The agents and conductors are all obliging, attentive and careful men. To Mr. E S. Morgan, depot master, at Troy, in particular we are indebted for kindnesses, which has ever been politely and generously extended to us by these conveyances. We append a table of stations and distances on this road. Any one going to N. Y. should cut it out as it is pleasant and sociable to know the stopping places. The Express train stops only at those places in SMALL CAPITALS.

HON. J. H. CLIFFORD,—Govr. Elect of Mass. is a noble specimen of a gentlemen, scholar and Whig. He is a distinguished scholar and lawyer, has been elected to the Legislature from districts with a political majority agst. him, and would have been put forward in the political field, but he would not consent. He was a candidate for Gov. against his own wishes. He has only to consent, to become a distinguished whig leader, worthy of Mass. and of the Union.

CLEAN YOUR TEETH.—Superior Antiseptic tooth paste. Warranted to be unsurpassed by any dentrifice in use for cleaning the gums, purifying the breath, and giving the teeth a high and elegant polish. Prepared and sold by Dr. H. W. Gould, Keeseville," We wish to endorse the above freely, and the Doctor in particular. The paste is something new, and the character of the Doctor is a guaranty of a valuable article.

"THE HOUSE WE WORK IN.—The (Concord, N. H.) Statesman, one of the best conducted whig journals in the county, gives in an article with the above title a description of the building in which it is printed accompanied with a cut. The building is 24 feet by 64 feet on the ground, and only one story, built expressly for the Statesman at a cost of about 700 dollars. We like such evidences of prosperity.

JOHN M. CLAYTON.—This veteran Whig has been elected to a seat in the United States Senate by the Legislature of the State of Deleware for six years from the 4th of March next. Mr. Clayton is one of the great men of the Country, and of the whig party. We record his Election with unfeigned pleasure.

ALBANY STATE REGISTER.—This paper is now conducted with great ability. Mr. Hammond, its new Editor, is not only a gentleman, and scholar, but a right down jovial companion, and clever fellow. The friends of this paper esteem it highly and with great reason.

A NEW DRESS.—The St. Albans Messenger appears in new type, and greatly enlarged—an evidence of prosperity creditable alike to the Proprietors, and their patrons It is a good whig paper, and deserving of every success.

ARTHURS HOME GAZETTE, is an excellent family paper, original, lively, and moral. Published at Philadelphia, at $2 a year.—The Gazette, and Home Magazine will be sent for $3, and for $3,50 the Lady's Book and the Gazette, or the Lady Book and Home Magazine.

HON. JOHN PETIT.—Roocntly elected to the U. S. Senate was for some years a member of Congress, famous only for his opposition to the appointment of Chaplains! Wonder if that opposition constituted his claims to a seat in the Senate?

Rail Road Conductors.—We, always take pleasure in commending worthy and responsible Conductors. Mr. A. C Turner on the Rutland and Washington road is one.

100 GUNS.—The whigs of New Bedford, Mass. are to fire a Salute of 100 guns in honor of the restoration of that State to whig management.

An Editor Robbed!

So say the papers, tho it is difficult to believe. He must be the meanest kind of a man who would do it. Such a man would steal the cloth from the back of a beggar. Read the following from the Albany State Register:

A WICKED ROBBERY.—The house of the editor of the New York Day Book, at Jamaica, L. I., was broken into on Tuesday night, while the inmates were asleep, and robbed of everything the burglars could lay their hands on; coats, shawls, dresses, silver ware, fancy articles of various kinds, &c., and making off with their booty without disturbing any of the family. Among the articles taken were a drab overcoat, two black dress coats, one large woolen shawl, a dozen large silver forks, marked with the full name [Stimson) on the handle, two dozen silver spoons, butter knives, silver thimbles, and the contents of a lady's dressing case.

The unfortunate editor says the robbers were doubtless from New York or Brooklyn. He says:

They were undoubtly ignorant of the fact that an editor lived in the house, or they never would have taken the risk for so small a compensation. As it is, they got all he had in the world, not even leaving him a decent coat to put on his back. If they will send back some of the letters and papers which were in the pockets, through the Post Office, he will be much obliged to them. They even took our gold pen, which we left on our writing desk, and several other little articles of more than ten times as much value to us as any one else. If they will be so kind as to send a boy to our office with these valuables, we will manage to scare up money enough to pay them double what they can get elsewhere.

It can be easily imagined that we are rather blue this morning and can not make fun of what to us is so serious a misfortune.

The Iron Business.

The sudden, and extraordinary rise in iron creates doubt in the minds of many as to its permanence. We have taken some pains to enquire into the probabilities, and we are of the opinion that prices will not fall materially for two, or three, if for five years. We come to this conclusion as others have from the scarcity of manufactories, and the immense number of Rail Roads projected, which will consume for years all our surplus iron. The Rail Road mania also extends all over Europe, and hence we shall not for a long time be over run with foreign iron. Now, is the time for those who are properly situated to enter into the business. Not a moment should be lost for what profits are made must be made quickly. Among many desirable and convenient locations is the site of the "Stephens forge" near Port Henry. There is no doubt money to be made in this business for a few years to come.

Election of Governor of Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.

The House of Representatives this morning elected John A. Clifford, whig, as Governor, on the first ballot. The vote stood as follows: Clifford, whig, 146; Bishop, dem. 84, Mann, free soil, 51.

The Senate also concurred in his election. The vote stood:—Clifford, 29; Bishop, 4.

A whig Lt. Gov. was elected by a similar vote, and that State is whig again in every branch of government.

THE GLOBE:

THE OFFICIAL PAPER OF CONGRESS.

CONGRESS has made the GLOBE its organ of communication with the country. To facilitate this important object and diminish the expense to the people, the Congressional Globe and Appendix, which contain the proceedings of Congress, revised by the members, are hereafter to be conveyed through the mails free of postage. At the late session of Congress the following Joint Resolution was passed:

JOINT RESOLUTION providing for the distribution of the Laws of Congress and the Debates thereon.

With a view to the cheap circulation of the laws of Congress and the debates contributing to the true interpretation thereof, and to make free the communication between the representative and constituent bodies.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the present session of Congress, the Congressional Globe and Appendix, which contain the laws & the debates thereon, shall be published by order of Congress: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to authorize the circulation of the Daily Globe free of postage.

Approved August 6, 1852.

The Globe will now, I trust, enter upon a new and more extended carreer of usefulness.—Congress, which draws into its focus all the important topics and events of the times for its discussion, and acts on them with a view to the interest of the Republic, has provided a mode through which, without cost for the delivery, all that is said and done by the body which speaks and acts for the nation, shall be put within the reach of the poorest citizen. The liberality with which Congress patronizes the work, enables the undersigned to report the proceedings, and deliver full sets of both the Congressional Globe and the Appendix, containing the proceedings, daily debates, the written out speeches, the Messages of the President of the United States, the Reports of the Heads of Departments, and all the Laws passed during the session, for Three Dollars—a price which barely pays for the printing the copies subscribed for by the people. Every one who will compare the price of this work with any other, taking into view the amount of matter and style of publication, will find that it is the cheapest circulated from any press in the world; and if the country places the true value on its political institutions—on the action of that representative body which moves and maintains them—which brings under review, discusses, and acts on all the interests of this wide-spread Republic presenting to the people every event, foreign or domestic, that can, however remotely, affect the public interest—it may be called the best, as well as the cheapest publication in the world.

The approach of a new Administration imparts peculiar importance to the next session of Congress. Throughout the whole country there will be solicitude to know what shape Congress will endeavor to give to the national affairs to meet the incoming Administration. The debates of the next session will, no doubt, as heretofore, foreshadow its policy. It is one of the admirable features of our institutions, that the popular body and executive Head, both gifted with independent power, and both representing the people and the States, shall act and react on each other. It is in this way the sovereign authority, exerted through different agents and from different quarters, gives that direction which its superior force compels sometimes even dissenting departments of the Government to adopt Those, therefore, who would understand well the policy which is likely to bear upon the next Administration, ought to scan the debates of that Congress which immediately precedes it. Not measures only, but the men who are to give them effect, will depend much on the next Congress; for, without doubt, it will have its due influence on the acts of the new President whoever he may be, in regard to all that may interest the constituencies represented by its members in regard to the greatest, as well as the smallest, matters and appointments affecting them.

The proceedings of Congress are first published in the Daily Globe, which is laid on the desks of all the members, to let them see the reports and make what corrections they think proper, before they are printed in the Congressional Globe or the Appendix. The Daily Globe is published during the session of Congress at the rate of Ten Dollars per annum.

The Congressional Globe and Appendix are printed on a double royal sheet in royal quarto form, each number containing sixteen pages.—The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses; and the Appendix embraces the long speeches withheld by the speakers for revision, the Messages of the President of the United States, and the Reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Laws passed during a session, and an index to them, are printed as soon as possible after adjournment, and sent to all subscribers for the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

TERMS.—For one copy of the Daily Globe during the next session, . . . $2,50
For one copy of the Congressional Globe, Appendix, and Laws, for the next session, 3.00

The persons to whom this sheet is sent will be allowed 20 per cent. on all the subscriptions they may obtain, which they may retain out of the money collected. Fractions of a dollar may be remitted in post office stamps. The subscription money must accompany the order, else no attention will be paid to it.

Subscriptions should reach here by the 15th December, at furthest, to insure all the numbers.

I have about five hundred surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session, which contain, besides the proceedings of Congress, all laws and joint resolutions passed during the session. The proceedings and laws make 2,552 pages; and the list of appropriations and index, not yet printed, will make about eighty pages more. I will let those who subscribe for the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the coming session have them at the following rates: Price per copy, unbound, Three Dollars; or bound in three volumes, backs and corners Russia leather, Five Dollars. They will be delivered to subscribers at these prices. I sell the bound volumes here for Four Dollars a volume; the three volumes bound for Twelve Dollars. Every person who takes any part in the politics of this country should possess them.

I do feel greatful for what "Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge" has done for me, and heartily wish all that are afflicted knew, as I do, its worth.

Almost every man in Whitehall knows that I have been so afflicted that for almost a year I could not speak aloud; with a distressing cough, pain in the side, loins and shoulders; and the opinion of the physicians was that for me there was a step only to the grave.

I commenced the use of the Lozenge in September last, soon after Mr. Renne introduced the article at our place, and I have gained my voice! and am congratulated daily by the business men on my returning health, which I attribute, under a good Providence, to the above Pitch Lozenge. DICKENS' HOUSEHOLD WORDS.

HAS been re-published in this country by the subscribers, who have for sale complete sets of the work. The character of Mr. Dickens as a writes is so well and favorably known. that the most we can say of his weekly is, that it fully sustains his reputation. Whole books have already been formed of extracts from the work; but though the compilers of these have copied extensively, they have failed in their endeavors to transfer every article of general interest,—they could not do it whthout copying the whole. No general reader of our most popular magazines can have failed to notice the frequent and lengthy "contributors" from "Household Words," provided the publisher had been honest enough to have given the proper credits. We would call attention to the following extract from a speech of Sir James Stephen, at the Free Library at Manchester, as well as a few selections from a host of complimentary notices from the Press in this county:

* * * But the merit of the writing of the third [Dickens school.] is of yet a higher nature; it is, that amid all the riot of their fancy, their humor and their whim, while they teach us to laugh most heartily at each other's follies, they still have in common the one unbroken aim—to teach us all to assist, to pity, to forgive, and to love one another—and hence it is not without reason that the latest of these works, which I have the good fortune to read, has taken to itself that fitting title of "Houses hold Words."

BURLINGTON

AGRICULTURAL WARE-HOUSE AND SEED STORE.

DAVEY & ALLEN,

No. 8, COLLEGE STREET, BURLINGTON, Vt.

Ploughs—Prouty & Mear's centre draught.

These ploughs have obtained a celebrity unparalleled, having taken the first premiums in this country and at the World's Fair in London. We have also Starbuck's and Tabo's celebrated Ploughs.

Our stock of Ploughs comprise a great variety of patterns and different sizes, calculated for sward and stubble land, wet meadows and recently drained swamps, where roots abound—among which also, are the deep-breaking up flat-furrow, lap-furrow, self sharpening, side-hill, double-mould-board, sub soil, &c., &c.

Harrows—triangular, square, Geddes's and Scotch.

Hay, Straw and Corn Stalk Cutters, either by hand or horse power; spiral, straight or circular knives.

Cultivators—of different kinds, steel tooth and cast iron.

Corn Shellers—a variety of patterns, Will shell from 5 to 100 bushels of corn per hour

Fan Mills and Grain Cradles—Grant's unrivalled. We confidently recommend them as the best in use.

Seed Sowers—Hatchewler's & Emery's and other kinds.

Vegetable Cutters—for turnips and other roots.

Horse Powers, Threshers, Winnowers and Separators—Wheeler's Patent Railway Chain Horse Power This Power, both single and double geared, for one or two horses, has never been equalled for lightness in running, strength, durability and economy. The Thresher and Separator are two widely and favorably known to need our commendation. The combined Thresher and Winnower, (which is a new invention of last year) has not been so generally introduced. All who have used it express the highest approbation of its merits. We entertain no doubt that it is the most perfect, compact, and efficient machine now in use for threshing and winnowing grain, as it certainly is by far the cheapest and most economical.

Warranted to give satisfaction.

or be returned after a reasonable trial.

Saw Mill—I, whence, used for sawing wood for locomotives on Railways, or by farmers for cutting stove fuel. With a one horse power it will cut 10 to 15 cords of wood twice to two per day.

20 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

DR. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise. Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Lieutenant of the College of Physician and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues to be consultingly and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters. No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as as old lingering attacks, conclusively prove that the well

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better, than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Ulcers, Chancres, Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender skin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, all cases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under his peculiar mode of treatment, after ought vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be ill seased, although they may have visit d half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND IT IS NO WONDER, as humbug deals stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All those desiring a skilful and friendly and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the fiery ordeal of empiricism, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who prey the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his re-maining health. Persons who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom, or never equalled by any other medical man, is enabled to treat, with very hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 2,000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons she discovers with each box. Price $1. Ready mailed to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a beautiful little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world

N. B.—Letters treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or irreverious students admitted: Timed persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number. 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

SHERIFF SALE.

BY Virtue of an Execution issued out of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to me directed and delivered against the goods and chattels, real estate and chattels real of Joseph Weed and Almerin Smith, I have seized and taken all that tract or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga, and Essex county, bounded as follows:

All that piece and parcel of land lying and being in said town of Ticonderoga, being the westerly part of a lot of land formerly leased by Samuel Deal to Jonathan Drury, and known on a map of said land as lot No. 51, beginning at a maple stake standing in the east line of a lot of land lately conveyed to the said Almerin Smith, by the said Thomas Wheeler, thence running south eighty two degrees east, forty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty degrees thirty minutes east, eighty rods to a stake and stones, thence north eighty two degrees west, forty rods to the stake and stones, thence south eight degrees thirty minutes west, eighty rods to the place of beginning. Containing within said bounds twenty acres. Excepting from off the said lot two acres, conveyed by Samuel Deal to the Congregational Meeting House, and Society of Ticonderoga, and one half acre to the Corporation of St. Paul's Church, also in said town.

Also, all that piece parcel or tract of land situate, lying and being in the town of Ticonderoga aforesaid, and bounded as follows;

Beginning at a stake standing in the north east corner of a lot of land formerly owned by James Jones, and conveyed by him to the said Smith, and now in his possession; thence running south eighty degrees east, twenty-eight chains and sixty-three links to a stake; thence south eight degrees and forty-five minutes west, nineteen chains 70 links to a stake standing in the north line of Edward McCaughin's land, thence north eighty degrees west, 28 chains and 63 links to a stake, thence in a straight line to the place of beginning. Containing 56 acres and one-third of an acre be the same or less or less.

Also all that certain other lot adjoining being a part of the Holcomb and Jones farms, bounded on the south and west by the high way leading from Ticonderoga to Crown Point on the east by lands formerly owned by Wm Stewart now McCaughin and on the north by the highway leading past John Ledwitch's farm and residence and on the south by said McCaughin's land.

Also, all that certain farm in Ticonderoga, aforesaid, known as the Lake farm containing about 350 acres, being lot No. one and two in the McIntosh Patent, in the possession of Charles F. Hammond and Allen Penfield, and about 75 acres adjoining part of lot No. in same patent now in possession of Geo. D. Clark.

Also, all that certain other lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, known as part of the James Jones farm, sold and conveyed by Almerin Smith, to Alva Bennett in the year 1847, and now in the possession of said Bennett bounded and described as follows: beginning at a stake and stones in the easterly line of lands belonging to Francis Arthur Esq., being also the south west corner of the William Canfield farm, thence along the southerly line of said Canfield's land, south 80 degrees east, 5 chains and 8 links to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to Ticonderoga village, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 31 chains and 25 links to a stake then north 86 degrees west, 25 chains to a stake standing in a ditch or drain and being also in the easterly line of said Arthur's land, thence along the same north 10 3-4 degrees east, 26 chains and 76 links to the place of beginning, containing 40 acres of land.

Also, all that certain lot of land in Ticonderoga aforesaid, commonly called the Holcomb lot now in possession of Almerin J & Charles H. Bennett, and sold and conveyed by the said Almerin Smith to them in the year 1847, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning in the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Upper Falls in Ticonderoga, being the north east corner of Sylvanus Bennett's farm, thence along the north line of said Bennett's farm north 80 deg. west, 32 chains and 14 links to a stake in the east line of Gustavus N. Wicker's land, thence along the same and along part of the east line of Francis Arthur's land, north 10 3-4 deg. east, 14 chains and 85 links to a stake standing in a ditch or drain, thence south 86 deg. east, 25 chains to the centre of a highway leading from Crown Point to the Lower Falls of Ticonderoga, thence along the same south 30 degrees east, 10 chains and 80 links to the centre of the first above mentioned highway, ... southerly along the same 9 chains to ...

Legal.

Also, a certain other lot in Ticonderoga aforesaid, now in possession of Jeremiah O'Brien, bounded on the south by the road leading past John Ledwitch's land and residence, on the east by said Ledwitch's lands, on the north by lands of Alexander McCambridge, and on the west by lands of Wm A. G. Arthur containing fifty acres or thereabouts.

Also a certain other lot piece or parcel of and in Ticonderoga aforesaid lying and being on the south and west side of the highway leading from the Lower Falls to the street so called or Crown Point between the former dwelling house of the said Almerin Smith and burnt a few years since, and the present dwelling house of Edward McCaughin, being the same lot sold by the said Smith to the said McCaughin in 1847, and now owned by him containing by estimation about 14 acres, being originally part of lands belonging to Stephen and Silas Sayre.

Also, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate lying and being in the town of Schroon, Co. and State aforesaid on the west side of Lake George and comprehended within the bounds of a tract of land granted by Letters patent under the great seal of the state of N. Y., to James Caldwell, Robert McClellen, and Robert Cochran and is more particularly known and distinguished by being lot No. one hundred and forty seven of the division of said tract bounded as follows, viz:

Beginning at the southwest corner of lot No, one hundred and forty four being a stake No. 144, 145, 146, 147, and runs thence along No. 146 south 25 chains to lot No. 148, thence along the same east 40 chains to lot No. 143, thence along the same north 25 chains to lot No. 1 44 thence along the same west 40 chains to the place of beginning, containing one hundred acres of land, be the same more or less. MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the payment of the debt secured by a certain mortgage dated the 20th day of January 1849 executed by Allen Everitt and Julia Ann, his wife, of chesterfield, in Essex County N. Y., as mortgagors to Reuben Jones, then of Ausable, in Clinton County, N. Y., as mortgagee and recorded in the office of the Clerk of the County of Essex, in volume O of mortgages pages 228 and 229, on the 9th day of February, 1849, at 7 oclock, P. M. There is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, the sum of $561,02,

Now therefore notice is hereby given that the said mortgaged premises, will by virtue of a power of sale contained in the said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in said case made and provided, be sold at public auction at the Adirondac Hotel, in the village of Keeseville, in Essex County, on the 8th day of March, 1853, at 10 oclock in the forenoon of that day.

The said mortgaged premises are described in said mortgage as follows, viz: all that certain piece or parcel of land situated in the Town of Chesterfield, County of Essex and state of New York, in a patent of three thousand six hundred acres of land granted by the state of New York to Matthew Adgate, and bounded as follows: Begining at the shore of Lake Champlain, at the South east corner of said patent, running thence west on the south line of said patent to the south east corner of lands heretofore deeded by the said Adgate, to one Noah Gridley. Thence north on the east line of said Gridley's land about fifty four rods to a beach tree; Thence due east to the Lake shore; Thence south along the Lake shore as it winds and turns to the place of beginning, containing by estimation one hundred acres of Land be the same more or less. Dated Keeseville November 26th 1852
